Farm Notes.

Dig around the peach trees and search for the borers. The use of kainit and here, too, is the miniature forest which

There is a tendency to plant too many acres. More acres sown to grass, and fewer and better cultivated acres for a crop when the other varieties fail.

Experiments with scarlet clover, in New Jersey, have not been very fa-vorable, and those who have tested it on sandy soil are of the opinion that the scarlet fever is not all that is claimed for it.

Lima beans, string beans, squashes and cucumbers may be planted, and they should grow rapidly, as the ground is warm. To have them early apply well-rotted manure, and use it plentifully.

Crops do not grow the entire year, but the live stock can be made to grow from one year to another. The food should be produced for winter use, and in quantity to permit of keeping as many animals as possible.

Put the hotbeds to use in some manner after the early plants have been taken out. It is just the place for cucumbers. Throw a pile of brush on each side of the hotbed and the vines will cover the support thus given.

Chicks that are hatched during this month will come too late to be sold as broilers, but they will sell readily as roasters late in the season. Capons and broilers are now bringing high prices, the demand being larger than the supply.

Millet is a summer crop, and can be grown as easily as any other, as it Mass. matures quickly. It is much more nutritious than some grasses that are cured for hay, and if cut before the seed heads form it is an excellent food
