GROWING OLD.

The tallest lilies droop at eventide.

The sweetest roses fall from off the stem;
The rarest things on earth cannot abide,
And we are passing, too, away like them;
We're growing old.

We had our dreams, those rosy dreams of youth They faded and 'twas well. This afterprime Hath brought us fuller hopes and yet, foreooth We drop a tear now in this later time To think we're old.

We smile at those poor fancies of the past— A saddened smile almost akin to pain; Those high desires, those high purposes s Ah, our poor hearts; they cannot come again! We're growing old.

Old? Well, the heavens are old; this earth is too; Old wine is best, maturest fruit most sweet Much have we lost, more gained, although 'tie true We tread life's way with most uncertain feet. We're growing old.

We move along, and scatter, as we pale, Soft graces, tender hopes on every hand; At last, with grey-streaked hair and hollo face, We step across the boundary of the land Where none are old.

· Notes From the World's Fair. Like a bird of ill omen Steele Mackaye's unfinished and never-to-be-finish-Spectatorium throws its shadow across the threshold of the Columbian Exposition. It is one of a hundred ill. fated schemes decorating the vicinity of Jackson Park, and when Mackaye threw up his hands last week some $300.000 went up at the same time. Next comes the Aldine Hotel, which outchicagoed Chicago in its barefaced fleecing of credulous people, hailing mostly from the Western States. It has proved to be "a castle in Spain," and the chances of those who trusted money there to see the World's Fair are as light and airy as a soap bubble. The remnants of smaller schemes of which the public will never hear except by the wholesale, strew the observing man's path on every side. There is the Columbian Bureau of Information; it was strangled at the moment of birth and an elaborate show window does duty now as a grave stone; Columbian cafes have died by the score, and the deaths of others are only matters of a day of a day or so. Columbus may have touched into life a great continent, but his name conceals no hidden powers, and everything Columbian eems to be stricken with a blight. Columbian coffee houses, cigar stands, pop corn booths, lemonade bowls, chairs and even Columbian lunches have gone out of business. That widely known keeper, has taken several tacks in her prices, and now the ordinary visitor can once a week, in fact you can get rooms for nearly what you offer, as the predicted rush has never come, and the recollection of rent day just past, is makfuture one. There are thousands of va-plenty of them going begging at a dollar a day. So far no fortunes have been made through the Fair, but instead some very choice specimen of beggars are being daily turned out, who will cant rooms in every part of Chicago an have cause long to regret the day they first heard of World's Fair schemes. The largest lump of coal in the world is in the Washington State building, and the largest pair of silk stockings ever worn on this terrestrial ball are hanging in the British section of the Manufactures' building. This colossal specimen of the black diamond is 26 feet long with a width of 5 feet 4 inches, and is 5 feet 8 inches in height. The weight is a little over 25 tons, so that altogether it would have been a very nice lump to come to a poor man's door during some of Chicago's cold days last winter. The card accompanying the coal asserts that there are plenty more such beauties to be had where this specimen was found, in the Roslyn mines. Judging by his hosiery, the royal calf of George III, must have heen about 25 inches in circumference, with an ankle to correspond. The stockings are pure white silk, of the most delicate texture, and altogether fit for the popular notion of a King's wardrobe except that the shape indicates more avoirdupois than is commonly supposed to be well bred. They cost the King $50 and are evidently worth the money, for they have outlasted their owner more than 70 years, and even now look as good as new.

The forestry building stands so far down in the southeast corner of the grounds, and is so hopelessly lost in a tangle of windmills and sand hills and Zoltec temples and shipping, that unless the visitor be of a very courageous and exploring turn of mind the chances are largely in favor of his never seeing

The outside of the building is handsome and striking. It is rustic in design and exceedingly artistic in execution. But its glories are its contents.

California is the monarch of the forits red woods, whether lying undressed in great circular sections 15 feet in diameter and with over a foot of solid bark, or worked into lumber and apare inimitable either way, but when they are polished and all the tiny ripples and birds' eyes are brought out and the shining crimson surface sends reflection, then they are almost jewelry. There are more kinds of ornamental woods than could be committed to memory in a week. There seem to be enough varieties of ash alone to make a very respectable rainbow. There are woods the very names of which are outlandish, such as the "fine burly African girl" from the French colonies and the padouk from India. and the standry of the old testament

Hebrew is there, the "shittim" wood. Michigan has one of the handsomest pav lons of dressed wood. Minnesota presents a very pretty little arbor of natural wood and vines containing good displays of polished woods and some Quebec has furnished a design that, while very simple, is impresive.

It is not by any means a display for technically educated men alone, but one which will furnish abundant delight for every lover of beauty in form or rich-

Airy quarters are in the tenancy of a Kabyle family in the Algerian village. Day in and day out a swarthy woman is weaving blankets in a tent beside the theater, while her thrifty sons are calling passers-by to look at their mother. The ather of the brood toils hard playing tunes on his "bubble bubble," and the entire economy of the Kabyles is illustrated in the exhibit.

For The Boys.

A writer in Success with Flowers who seems to be in sympathy with "the boys," writes thus:

"If you want to refine a boy give him a buttonhole bouquet and he will wash his face," says a writer of keen perceptions who knows what he is talking about.

It is simply a clever way of illustrat-ing the susceptibility of boys to the beauty and delicacy of flowers. I know a good deal about boys. I was one myself not so very many years ago, and I have not yet outgrown some of my boyish instincts. They are kept alive, perhaps, by the presence of three little boys of my own in my own home.

The gouty Thomas Carlyle is credited with having once said that, a boy ought to be shut up in a barrel when he was eight years old and kept there until he was twenty-five, because of the unendurable traits of his character as manifested in the years between the ages

The average boy is not very sentimen-tal, and it is manifestly better for him that he should not be sentimental, but many of his instincts are refined and gentle, and a love of the beautiful is easily created in him. You can teach your boys many good and true lessons through the medium of flowers and a buttonhole boquet does have a refining influence on a boy or a man. Encourage your boys to wear them and teach them the significance of the flowers of which the boquet is composed. Don't let them think that it is unmanly or girlish to wear flowers in their buttonholes. It is not. It is in most cases a symbol of purity and refinement and a true love of the beautiful.

Spezia's Ironclad Tower.

The ironclad tower built by the Italian Government at the Gulf of Spezia is one of the most important works lately constructed in Europe. The immense plates which constitute the protection of the tower have been illustrated in "The Record." There have now been placed person, the Columbian boarding house in this fortification, guns of the immense weight of 120 tons. Three foreign firms contributed to the construcafford a sleeping apartment more than tion of the fortress-Armstrong for the machinery; Fruson, for the iron-plating, and Krupp for the cannon. The total cost of the work has been about 10,000. 000 francs, and its principal use is to deing every householder nervous about a fend the western mouth of the Gulf of Spezia. It is situated at the extremity of the western fortification of the gulf. on the Island of Palmeria.

Fortune Lost by Greed.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., June 9.-Tom Flemming, Jr., a miserly son of a stingy father, had $2683 in gold coin stolen last night from a chest in a garret, along with mortgages and deeds representing nearly $100,000, which he was too stingy to have recorded. This morning Tom Bowland, a farm hand, was accused of the robbery and went to a field and unearthed $1500 of the money. He took the remainder from under the roots of a tree. The thief admitted he burned the deeds. The makers of the deeds and mortgages will repudiate their agreement. Not being on record Flemming will lose nearly the entire amount called for by them.

-Mr. N. M. Rittenhouse exhibited at the office of "The Sun an old Roman lamp, which he found at Philadelphia among the effects of his father, the late Nicholas Rittenhouse. The lamp is made of wrought iron, with brazed cover, and has a perpendicular stem for hanging on the wall. It is in a good state of preservation. Mr. Rit tenhouse does not know when the lamp first came into the possession of his father. It was found in the old Rittenhouse paper mill in Philadelphia. The original structure, the first paper mill erected in North America, was built in 1690.

Abraham Lincoln

When leaving his home at Springfield, Ill., to be inaugurated President of the: United States, made a farewell address to his old friends and neighbors, in which he said 'neighbors give your boys a chance." The words come with as much force to-day as they did thirty years ago.

How give them this chance? Up in the northwest is a great empire waiting for young and sturdy fellows to come and develope it and "grow up with the country." All over this broad land are the young fellows the boys that Lincoln referred to, seeking to better their condition and get on in life. Here is the chance! The country referred to lies along the Northern Pacific R. R. Here you can find pretty much anything you want. In Minnesota, and in the Red River Valley of North Dako ta, the finest of prairie lands fitted for wheat and grain, or as well for diversified farming. N Western North Dakota, and Montana, are stock ranges limitless in extent, clothed with
