RHEUMATISM MET AND CONQUERED

BY THE N. F. GERMAN RHEUMATIC CURE.

NO CURE, NO PAY!

MONEY CHEERFULLY REFUNDED

for any case of Rheumatism it fails to cure, if taken according to directions. Read following testimonial of an eminent Centre county physician. GATESBURG, Centre County, Pa., Aug. 9, 1892 To the N. F. German Rheumatic Cure Co.

GENTLEMEN—I had suffered from Rheumatism for many years, when, at the advanced age of seventy-seven years, your cure was recommended to me. I had tried upon myself everything known to me, (I am a doctor of fifty-one years experience) and had despaired of ever being cured. Your remedy was taken according to directions, and after using the second package, the disease left me entirely and no rheumatic pain or ache has troubled me since.

I can recommend it without hesitancy to all afflicted with the disease, and being familiar with the ingredients contained in the compound, can recommend them as being non-injurious to the constitution, and as being the most efficient blood remedy known.

Truly Yours, DANIEL BATES, M. D.

Sense of Touch. How It Varies in Different Parts of the Human Body.

If there is any subject that people in general think they are specially familiar with that subject is their own sense of touch or skin-feeling. Yet how few will not be surprised to learn that the points of a pair of compasses held two and three-fifths inches apart against the middle of one's own back feel like but one point? If opened out to two and a half inches they feel like two. This was discovered by Weber in a series of experiments to which Mr. Herbert Spencer has lately called attention.

Weber found the tips of the forefingers could feel the two points when they were one-twelfth of an inch apart, but not when closer together. Between this fine sensitiveness and the coarse sensitiveness of the middle of the back all the other parts of the body vary. For instance, the inner surface of the second joints of the forefinger can distinguish the two compass points one-sixth of an inch apart. The innermost points have less sensitiveness of this sort, but rank in it equal with the tip of the nose. The end of the toe, the palm of the hand and the cheek have alike one-fifth of the perceptiveness of the tip of the forefinger, and the lower part of the forehead has one-half that of the cheek.

The back of the hand and the crown of the head are nearly alike in having fourteen times less sensitiveness of this sort than the tip of the forefinger. The thigh has less near the knee, and the points of the compasses must be an inch and one-half apart before the breast ceases to feel them as one.

Mr. Spencer accounts for these differences on the ground of the greater practice of some parts of the body in feeling various objects. For instance, the finger-tips are educated in the matter, and their qualities transmitted by inheritance to successive generations. The tongue, always feeling the teeth, and often feeling particles of food, is still better educated. Its tip can distinguish between compass points one-twenty-fourth of an inch apart, and is the most sensitive member of the body.

Mr. Spencer's theory agrees with some well-known facts. For example, he showed that was pretty well known long before he was born, that the fingertips of the blind are more sensitive than those of persons who can see, and therefore do not practice their sense of touch so much. He also found that skilled typewriters were more sensitive than the blind on whom he experimented, for the type-setters could distinguish both compass points when one-seventeenth of an inch apart.

It may be suggested that many facts could be adduced to show that parts of the body do not become more or less sensitive by continual touching of things. The fingers of a seamstress are often "calloused" by needle pricks or pressures, and yet she is always as much seeking to avoid the pricking as the type-setter is to seize but one type.

But in such scientific matters theories are plenty and easily made. The facts themselves are the interesting things, as are all pieces of novel information about the wonderful human body.—Youth's Companion.

Monosyllabic China. A Tribute to the Simplicity of Celestial Sarcasm.

Nearly all Chinese names are more easily spoken than most German and Russian names, or even than many Italian, French, Spanish and Hebrew ones. Viceroy Li, of China, for example, who possesses a very plain name, has just sent to this country a minister named Yin, who is to take the place lately held in Washington by Minister Yin. Again, in a list of Chinese who have recently come here we notice the names of Chin and Fow and Lee and Chung and Ha and Yung and He and Chu, and others of like simplicity. All New Yorkers who have walked through Pell and Mott streets, where Chinese abound, are aware that a name of more than one syllable is rarely ever seen on a signboard.

By way of contrast, look at a few European names, taken from thousands of others not less abusive, in this city. It is interesting to learn of the arrival in the city of the Russian novelist, Dmitri Halodonovitch Korolenko, a man of advanced ideas. As for the newly appointed ambassador of William II. to this country, Baron von Laurma Seltsch, we shall be pleased to welcome him to these shores next week.

We do not propose to say anything at this moment about those of our friends of other races here who are the owners of noteworthy names; the visible signs of them have become familiar to watchful observers, and often possess ten times as many syllables as an ordinary Chinese can afford. There are queer names, or names that look queer to the natives of this land, over some of the shops in east Broadway and Mulberry Bend and near Bleeker street.

But it is not for New Yorkers to laugh at anybody's name after trying to pronounce the names of some of the Dutchmen who were the original settlers of Manhattan Island.

For perspicuity in names, China stands first.—New York Sun.

The Hebrew New Year.

It Will be Celebrated Early, the Date Being September 11.

The Hebrew New Year occurs on Monday, September 11. This is much earlier than for many years past. The day is styled Rosh-Hoshona. It is the first day of the month Tishri. The liberal Jews celebrate one day, the orthodox two. The celebration commences at 6 p. m., September 10, and continues until 6 p. m., on the 11th or 12th, according to one or two days are observed. Two days are observed because in the olden time the month commenced when the new moon was seen, and because of clouds it was frequently difficult to fix the time of its appearance on a particular day. The day is not one of fasting but is observed as a day of prayer and prayer for forgiveness is a chief feature of the service.

The new year will be known as 5654 in the Jewish calendar. The observance of New Year's day is presented in the 29th chapter of Numbers, where it is mentioned as the first day of the seventh month. On the 13th of September occurs the fast of Gedalyah, and on the 20th, the fast of atonement—a great fast, followed by the feast of the tabernacles on the 25th.

The next Hebrew year will be a long one, extending from September 11, 1893 to October 1, 1894. Seven out of every nineteen years contain thirteen Jewish months. Cards are exchanged on the Hebrew New Year by friends containing good wishes, and much time is passed in the synagogues. Goats' horns are blown during the service in some of these.

Measured in Dollars. Some Folk Appreciate Wonders in Proportion to Their Cost.

The art palace sometimes reveals curious studies of character. It was an American pater familias, who with his wife and young hopeful, stopped before the statue of American invention and straightway took hold of the opportunity to instruct his child. "That statue there, my son," he explained, "is worth $10,000. Do you hear? Ten thousand—dollars."

"Yes, dear," echoed pater familias, "worth ten—housand—dollars, just think of it."

"Ten—housand—dollars," repeated the youth, wonderingly, and gazing at the white marble figure admiringly the trio went on repeating, each in his and her peculiar voice, "ten thousand—dollars!"

It was amusing to witness the peregrinations of his family. The whole criticism attempted by the father was to mention this or that statue or painting as costing so much. This was said in a tone calculated to wake every atom of reverence in the boy's body on behalf of the monetary value of the object and not to initiate him as to its artistic merit. Truly the educational advantages of the Fair are great, but it is doubtful if the chief thing impressed on visitors is the immense commercial value of things.—Chicago Mail.

She Got Even. Didn't Call Her Husband's Attention to His Mistake.

"Before you go down town, Cyrus," said his wife, "you must not forget to leave me 50 cents. I've got to get some things this morning." "This abominable extravagance of yours, Belinda," replied Mr. Kneer, opening his pocketbook with visible reluctance, "is what keeps us poor. Where, I should like to know," he continued, becoming excited, "is the 50 cents I gave you last week? What have you done with it? Fifty cents in clean, cold cash, madame, gone in less than six days, and gone for nothing! What have you got to show for it? Do you think I am made of money?" demanded Mr. Kneer, taking out a coin and slapping it down on the table. "Do you?"

"Don't say any more, Cyrus!" exclaimed Mrs. Kneer, with tears in her eyes, and putting her hand hurriedly over the money. "I'll not spend any more of it than I'm actually obliged to spend, and I thank you, ever so much."

With a mollified grunt Cyrus put his purse back in his pocket, took his hat and went down town, and in less than half an hour Mrs. Kneer, trembling with eagerness, was on the way to the great dry goods stores.

For Mr. Kneer, by the most calamitous and unaccountable blunder of his whole life, had given her a $20 gold piece instead of a half dollar.

CORN FRITTERS.—One cupful of milk, three eggs, one pint of green corn grated or scraped, a little salt and as much flour as will form a good batter, beat the eggs, the white and yolks separately; to the beaten yolks add the corn, salt, milk and flour and beat the whole very hard, then stir in the whites and drop in the batter, a large spoonful at a time, into hot lard, frying them on both sides a light brown. These fritters can also be made of cold boiled corn left over from a previous meal, grated and used the same as the other.

Specimen Cases.—S. H. Clifford, New Cassel, Wis., was troubled with Neuralgia and Rheumatism, his Stomach was disordered, his Liver was affected to an alarming degree, appetite failed away, and he was terribly reduced in flesh and strength. Three bottles of Electric Bitters cured him. Edward Shepherd, Harrisburg, Ill., had a running sore on his leg of eight years' standing. Used three bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes of Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and his leg is sound and well.

John Speaker, Catawba, O., had five large Fever sores on his leg, doctors said he was incurable. One bottle Electric Bitters and one box Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured him entirely sold by Parrish's Drug store.

IN CHILDHOOD'S HAPPY DAYS.—Among the incidents of childhood that stand out in bold relief, as our memory reverts to the days when we were young, none are more prominent than severe sickness. The young mother vividly remembers that it was Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cured her of croup, and in turn administers it to her own offspring and always with the best results. For sale by F. Our public schools are the mainstay of our republic. In them are being cultivated the minds which are to be our future law-makers and leaders in every walk in life. How essential it is that these minds should be united to strong, healthy bodies. So many children suffer from impurities and poisons in the blood that it is a wonder that they even grow up to be men and women. Many parents cannot find words strong enough to express their gratitude to Hood's Sarsaparilla for its good effect upon their children. Scrofula, salt rheum and other diseases of the blood are effectually and permanently cured by this excellent medicine, and the whole being is given strength to resist attacks of disease.

"Away! Away! There is danger here! A terrible phantom is bending near! With no human look, with no human breath, He stands beside thee—the hanter—Death!"

If there is one disease more than another that comes like the unbidden guest at a banquet, it is Catarrh. Inadvertently it steals upon you, "with no human breath" it gradually, like the octopus, winds its coils about you and crushes you. But there is a medicine, called Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, that can tear you away from the monster, and turn the sythes' point of the reaper. The makers of this wonderful remedy offer, in good faith, a standing reward of $500 for an incurable case of Catarrh in the Head.

The growth of the orange industry in Florida has increased from production of 600,000 boxes in 1885 to 3,500,000 for the season just closed, and according to conservative estimates, the combined crop will be fully 5,000,000 boxes, of which over 4,000,000 will be marketed.

JUST IN TIME GOING FROM BAD TO WORSE Hood's Sarsaparilla Cured a Complication of Diseases and Gave Good Health.

"I have been a very great sufferer for five years with my lungs and kidneys and the worst stage of DYSPEPSIA.

I could scarcely eat anything because of the intense pain in my stomach. I was also at one time covered with salt rheum, and my cough weakened me so that I could scarcely walk. I had several attacks of bleeding at the lungs. My breath became so short that I was unable to work and was obliged to give up my business. I could not even walk about much. So I kept going from bad to worse. I then had an attack of the shingles, which, with all my other complaint, confined me to my room for three months and NEARLY TOOK AWAY MY LIFE. I had heard of Hood's Sarsaparilla as a good medicine, so I bought a bottle. When I had taken it, I found it had done me some good, so I continued till I had taken three bottles. I improved so rapidly that I could walk out of doors and have steadily gained till I am at work again.
