MONEY CHEERFULLY REFUNDED

for any case of Rheumatism it fails to cure, if taken according to directions.
Read following testimonial of an eminent Centre county physician.

GATESBURG, Centre County, Pa., Aug. 9, 1892
To the N. F. German Rheumatic Cure Co.,
Tyrona, Pa.

GENTLEMEN:—I had suffered with Rheumatism for many years, when, at the advanced age of seventy-seven years, your cure was recommended to me. I had tried upon myself everything known to me, (I am a doctor of fifty-one years experience) and had despaired of ever being cured. Your remedy was taken according to directions, and after using the second package the disease left me entirely and no rheumatic pain or ache has troubled me since.

I can recommend it without hesitancy to all afflicted with the disease, and being familiar with the ingredients contained in the compound, can recommend them as being non-injurious to the constitution, and as being the most efficient blood remedy known.

Truly Yours,
DANIEL BATES, M. D.

DR. SCHENCK'S

Mandrake Pills have a value as a household remedy far beyond the power of language to describe. The family can hardly be true to itself that does not keep them on hand for use in emergencies.

 MANDRAKE. ***

Is the only vegetable substitute for that dangerous mineral, Mercury, and while its action as a cathartic is fully equal, it possesses none of the perilsous effects.

In Constipation, Mandrake acts upon the bowels without depositing them to subsequent costiveness. No remedy acts so directly on the liver, nothing so speedily cures Sick Headache, Sour Stomach and Biliaryness as these.

Mount Shasta.

One of the Most Beautiful Solitary Peaks of North America.

Among the pines at the foot of Shasta is the little town of Sisson. The trains stop here for meals. This is a very good idea, for at Sisson there is always a magnificent feast—for the eye.

One could sit for hours at the Sisson station and gaze at Shasta. The feeling is the same that steals over one who is standing before Niagara, or on the seashore, with the boundless ocean before him. Travelers declare that it is the most impressive mountain in the world, for it stands solitary and alone. Unlike Pike's Peak and many other of the world's great mountains, it is not surrounded by a number of lesser ones, and its tremendous height—14,440 feet—is appreciated by the eye. It is sublimely grand, and yet gracefully beautifully.

Against the blue of a California sky its curved outlines seem to sweep in the perfect segments of a circle from the apex of the cone to the horizon. Far up on its base, the bark green of the timber line is met by the virgin whiteness of Shasta snow, and then on, up and up, far into the summer clouds, points the alabaster pyramid.

Shasta is an extinct volcano, and at Sisson there is, of course, a man to sell you lava, volcano glass and other specimens from the mountain, for which you may be suddenly seized with an unenviable longing. He also has a telescope, mounted on a tripod, and you can ascend Shasta, via the telescope, at a reasonable price and without guides or weariness. This, of course, does not satisfy the cravings of your genuine mountain-climber, and especial accommodations are made for him. He, with some other enthusiasts, engage guides and horses and start in the afternoon for the timber line, which is reached at night. The party camps here, and in the morning horses are left behind, and, with alpenstocks in hand, it trudges to the top. The summit reached, faces turn black, noses bleed and luncheon is taken. The descent is effected in a novel and rare manner. The guides provide gunnysacks, and sitting upon one using your alpenstock both as a rubber and brake, you slide down on the snow.

No one has yet been killed at this species of tobogganing, but both the Coroners and undertaker at Sisson still live in hope.

Shasta has two large glaciers. The Whitney glacier is visible from the railroad. It looks like a narrow streak of snow, but it is over a mile in width, and is seamed with great fissures and crevasses. Its nature is very treacherous.

At times a natural barrier is unfurled from Shasta's Peak. This is called the "snow banner of Shasta." It only occurs when the gale attacks the summit and blows the snow in great gusts "streaming against the sky," as the railroad book has it. The banner is seen most frequently in November.—Baltimore American.

The Games of Early Americans.

One of the most amusing exhibits at Chicago is a collection of American games. It is a curious fact that many of the most popular games have been invented by women, and that the city of Salem, Massachusetts, celebrated for its witches, is the home of most of these early games, including "Authors" and a game of letters, the invention of a lady who ran a seminary. Her inventive faculty was doubtless called into requisition by the necessity of keeping the little mischief under her care out of that mischief which some "find for evil hands to do." The "Mansion of Happiness," the first of American dice games, like backgammon, which has such a respectable antiquity in the East, was also published in Salem, though it is understood to have been copied from an English game. "Parchesi," which belongs to the same family, and has a more direct line of descent from the East, was published in 1865 from an Englishman. There are several games in the modern exhibit that came directly from the East. "Chubb" is the familiar "Mancala" of Syria, which is so generally played by the Arabs, and which the women in the Dahomey village may be seen playing daily, while "Loega" is the well-known lot backgammon of the Arabs.

Slavery in Siam.

Slavery in Siam has been abolished in name, but it can never be abolished in fact, for the slaves have no means of supporting themselves outside their master's house. Every member of the Siamese upper classes can fether his servants or throw them into prison without any kind of trial or permission being necessary. One morning I went to call upon one of the ablest and most enlightened of the ministers, a man who has been to Europe, and who once actually got into serious trouble for trying to inaugurate a sort of woman's rights movement in Siam. I made my way by mistake into a part of his grounds where visitors were not expected, and I found a slave fastened down to the ground in an ingenious kind of pillory in which he could not move hand or foot, while another slave tortured him with severe strokes of a bamboo rod at the word of a member of the family in order to force him to confess to some misdeed.—Con temporary Review.

Origin of Camp Meetings.

A writer claims that camp-meetings originated in Kentucky in the year 1800 at Gasper river church, in Logan county, and became established during the great Kentucky revival early in the century. It is claimed that both Presbyterians and Methodists participated in the earlier meetings, though the camp-meeting is now looked upon as distinctly a Methodist institution. The great revival is one of the curious things in Kentucky history, and its effects are still visible in other things beside camp-meetings, granting these religious open-air gatherings to have had the origin attributed to them.

The school of Mines ought to turn out fine oarsmen.

Horseshoes.

Horses were not shod in Egypt, Assyria, or Palestine. The latter country was supplied with horses by the Egyptians. Solomon paid 150 shekels of silver, equal in value to $75 for each horse. This was a high price, the difference in relative value of a shekel and a given weight of wheat being considered.

Isaiah speaks of horses whose "hoofs shall be counted like flint"—a valuable quality where they were shoeless. The Syrians and Hittites were supplied with Egyptian horses by Solomon, who turned and honest penny by this means.

Aristotle and Pliny mention the covering of horses' feet in stony places to protect the hoof from breakage and wear, but it is probable that such a covering was a bandage or boot, and used principally on long journeys.

Suttonius refers to the dismounting of Vespasian's muletter, to shoe his mules. Wrappings of plaited fiber, such as hemp or broom, were used, as was also leather. In Japan the horses have cloths of twisted straw, of which a large supply is carried on a journey; when worn, another is immediately applied.

The modern custom of shoeing would no doubt, appear a barbarous custom in their minds. Capt. Cook refers to the fact that the Siberians and Kamtschatkans use travelling socks for their dogs. Camels in old times were similarly provided. These boots were drawn on over the feet, and it does not appear that iron or other metallic plates were nailed to the hoofs. Such boots were shod with metal for the rich.

The mules of Nero were shod with silver; those of his wife Poppoea, with gold. For less stately purposes mules were shod with iron. Homer mentions brazen-footed steeds, probably a merely metaphorical expression implying strength.

Mitridates and Alexander experienced great difficulty with their cavalry, owing to the soreness of the unprotected feet of the horses in long marches. The first certain mention of shoes being nailed to horses' hoofs is in the works of the Emperor Leo, ninth century. The practice of shoeing horses is said to have been introduced into England by William I.

Medicine in Vegetables.

The following information may be useful: Spinach has a direct effect upon the kidneys. The common dandelion, used as greens is excellent for the same trouble. Asparagus purges the blood. Celery acts admirably upon the nervous system, and is a cure for rheumatism and neuralgia. Tomatoes act upon the liver. Beets and turnips are excellent appetizers. Lettuce and cucumbers are cooling in their effects upon the system. Onions, garlic, leeks, olives and shallots, all of which are similar, possess medicinal virtue of a marked character, stimulating the circulatory system, and the consequent increase in the saliva and the gastric juice promote digestion. Red onions are an excellent diuretic, and the white ones are recommended to be eaten raw as a remedy for insomnia. A soup made from onions is regarded by the French as an excellent restorative in weakness of the digestive organs.—London Tid Bits.

Lives of others oft remind us

Married life may be sublime.

We trust to be forgiven this parody of lines from Longfellow's immortal "Palm of Life." Husbands who are wise and thoughtful, know that the happiness of the home depends largely on the health of the mistress of the home. Many are the tasks which daily confront her. How can a woman contend against the trials and worries of house-keeping, if she be suffering from those distressing irregularities, ailments and weaknesses peculiar to her sex? Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a specific for these disorders. The only remedy, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers. Satisfaction guaranteed in every case, or money refunded. See printed guarantee on bottle-wrapper.

SAVED FROM THE GRAVE

SCROFULA IN FACE AND NECK—BLIND AT TIMES.

Hood's Sarsaparilla Restored Health—Gained 35 Pounds in Weight.

Then we succeeded in healing it up, but the disease began to appear in my face, which would swell up and affect my eyes. Every morning they were so inflamed and swollen that I was blind.
