Bellefonte, Pa., March 9, 1894.

Lord Rosebery.

Lord Rosebery becomes premier at 47 years of age. In the century, no man but Castleragh, who became premier at 45, has been at the head of English affairs as young. Titles said in England, but it is not by his title that Lord Rosebery owes his swift progress past men twenty years his senior. The son of a Scotch peer, Lord Dalmeny, and of the ambitious woman who was first Lady Dalmeny and later the duchess of Cleveland, Lord Rosebery owes to his mother, eccentricity and the brilliancy, the eccentricity and the brilliancy, the brilliancy which belongs to the women of her family, the facile ability which for twenty-five years has made him at home in every circle and easily the most brilliant and interesting member of the group he was in, whether breakfasting with New York journalists, or in the duller, more decorous and more distinguished atmosphere of the house of lords.

Educated in the conservative aristocratic fashion at Eton and Oxford, Lord Rosebery took no honors and made such name and place as he won among his fellows by drinking claret at breakfast and captaining a foot ball team. Twenty years ago, when he visited New York city and spent a winter there, with the avowed purpose of learning all there was to be learned of American politics, he visited primaries in company with reporters, met the members of the machine, high and low, and saw the outer and some of the inner workings of Tammany. Interested in journalism, his ready and easy pen was equal to the quick work of turning off an editorial, and at breakfast one morning, with Mr. J. G. Bennett, he wrote for the New York Herald a summary of European politics which was, from the newspaper viewpoint, altogether admirable.

Quick, unassuming, in manner so like an American that he could have passed for one, he returned to England to enter on public life. It is easy for a young peer to begin. It is as difficult for him to succeed as for any commoner—more difficult at some points, for he is shut out of the natural field and arena—the house of commons. Lord Rosebery has made way because he has done with easy success all tasks committed to him. He has a magnificent appetite for detail and the dreary drudgery of the first commissioner of public works did not appall him. He presided with amazing tact over the stormy opening session of the London county council, and in a year presided at forty-four public sittings and nearly 600 committee meetings. When it came to despatch writing he was an easy over-matcher for an accomplished diplomat like M. Waddington, and his handling of the Siamese and Egyptian questions was a model of urbane resolution touched by a sense of the might and majesty of the empire. His speeches are simple, straightforward and efficient utterances, lit by wit, and must be the desire and despair of more learned and more experienced men. His life of Pitt was a study of his avowed exemplar and model.

Weighty utterances, profound political wisdom, high command, kindling eloquence, have never come from Lord Rosebery. If he has these dangerous and misleading powers he has veiled them. His work is all personal, and there has never been in English public life since the days of Walpole a man of such diverse intimacies. A happy complement began his personal acquaintance with the queen. His intimacy with the prince of Wales led many to believe he was to marry one of the princesses. More wisely, he married the richest heiress in England Hannah Rothschild. Plain to ugliness, she was devoted itself, and he the devoted lover. Dying, she left him with all the wealth English public life needs. Familiar with European affairs as are few Englishmen not in diplomacy, he is almost the only man in Europe whom both Bismarck and the Kaiser like. He has known all the men for the French republic from Gambetta down, and his American acquaintance he has been punctilious in recognizing and maintaining.

One cloud rests over this brilliant life. His health is wretched. His wife's death plunged him into a helpless melancholy. Not large framed, slight, in youth, fuller now but never looking strong, and a bit puffy about the face, he has but a narrow physical margin. Overwork tells on his nerves. He became secretary for foreign affairs only under the urgent pressure of those who feared Gladstone's policy would detach England from the triple alliance. Experience only can tell whether the man who has had wit enough in seventeen years of public life never to say a foolish thing will have strength enough always to do the wise thing as premier.

Gladstone's Retirement. The Grand Old Man Steps Down and Out of Office—The Resignation was Accepted—It Was Sent to the Queen Saturday and Immediately Acol on, Earl Rosebery Being Called to Form a New Cabinet With Himself as Premier.

LONDON, March 3.—The United Press correspondent learned from an official source at half-past 11 this evening that the queen had accepted Mr. Gladstone's resignation and had offered the premiership to Lord Rosebery, who had consented to take the office.

Shortly after the visit of Earl Spencer, John Morley, Mr. Acland and Home Secretary Asquith to the Earl of Rosebery this morning Lord Rosebery and Mr. Asquith called upon Mr. Morley. A message was conveyed to Lord Rosebery summoning him to Windsor and he left Paddington station at 1 o'clock. Earl Kimberly, Earl Spencer, Sir William Harcourt and Sir Charles Lennox Peel, clerk of the privy council, arrived at Windsor at 1 o'clock, where they met Mr. Gladstone. The proceedings of the council at Windsor were of the ordinary character. The council arranged for the prorogation of parliament and the opening of a new session. It was after the adjournment of the council that Mr. Gladstone formally tendered to the queen his resignation of the offices he held in the ministry.

Current gossip has it that the earl of Kimberly, now lord president of the council and secretary of state for India, will be made secretary of state for foreign affairs, and that Mr. John Morley chief secretary for Ireland, will succeed the earl of Kimberly in the Indian office.

Mr. Gladstone arrived at the Paddington railway station on his return from Windsor by a special train at 3:30 p. m. A large crowd had assembled to catch a glimpse of the great statesman. As he emerged from the railway carriage he was greeted with roars of applause, which he acknowledged by bows and by lifting his hat. It is believed that Mr. Gladstone will shortly take a trip on the continent for health and recreation, remaining abroad until spring.

Earl Spencer, Mr. John Morley, and Mr. Acland paid a visit to Lord Rosebery in Berkeley square this morning. The earl of Kimberly will give a dinner and a number of other state officials this evening. Mr. and Mrs. Gladstone will give a large dinner and reception at the official residence in Downing street on Monday.

Mr. Edward Majoribanks this morning sent a reply to the letter addressed to him by Mr. Labouchere yesterday, in which the latter stoutly protested against the selection of a peer as the successor of Mr. Gladstone. As yet the character of the reply has not been made public.

Concerning the retirement of Mr. Gladstone, the Speaker, a weekly organ of the liberal party, in its issue of today says: "It is a legacy of effort and stubborn conflict which Gladstone leaves to those who are to come after him, and that Thursday's speech in the house of commons will be notable, on the pages of history as marking not only the close of a matchless career, but the opening of a new era in the national story. The fact of this coming battle is the real secret of Gladstone's resignation. The habit of his life and thought has been against a conflict either with the hereditary legislators or the hereditary throne, and although he bowed to the will of his party and the inexorable logic of events in making his last speech a call to that great battle, he preferred to commit the leadership to a more willing as well as a younger spirit."

Made by Thunderbolts.

In the museums of nearly all the large colleges you will see what appear to be sandy petrifications much resembling branches of trees. You may conclude that these are the remains of forest monsters that grew in a faraway geological age, but if you will take the trouble to ask your guide, or, better still, one of the professors, who are always handy, he will tell you a queer story—one, in fact, that "smacks of the marvelous." These tame looking, supposed to be sandy petrifications are, in fact, real "thunderbolts." Scientifically speaking, they are "fulgurites." They are composed of a poor quality of glass and are made by the lightning striking sandy deserts and plunging downward and laterally striking all the sand with which it comes in direct contact. On the Sahara fulgurites are found in every conceivable shape and size, some 30 or more feet in length and 4 inches in diameter, others not larger than a lead pencil and still others not larger than a knitting needle. Scientists usually consider fulgurites as being a good index to the size and force of discharge of the lightning stroke which formed them.

A Forgotten Power.

William C. Whitney was in the Wall street through the other day, but he passed along unrecognized because he had not his eyeglasses on, and without them he is a queer story—one, in fact, that is thought odd in New York that this former member of the Cabinet should not be more in the public eye just now than he seems to be. He is really the most powerful man politically in all New York, and his power is all the greater because few really know the foundation of it or why he has all the influence that is his. The fact is that Mr. Whitney is devoting all his energies not to increasing his fortune, as has been conjectured, but to insuring the permanency of that which he already has. His wealth is enormous, but his assets are not entirely of a kind which possess what may be termed a stable value. And this fact Mr. Whitney seems to realize, for he is solidifying his investments somewhat after the manner of the late Jay Gould, but without resorting to any of the tactics which even the most sensitive labor advocate could find fault with.

Bronchos and Mustangs.

Tenderfoot, by the way, are very apt to mix up the terms "broncho" and "mustang." The mustang is literally a wild horse—that is, one whose forefathers have never been in captivity and whose ancestry is believed to be derived from the horses of the old Spanish invaders—while the bronchos are the children of cow ponies, or horses which have been turned out on the range for the purpose of breeding. The horses are branded, and the colts belong to the man whose brand is on the mother. Horses are rounded up every year, and the colts are caught and branded by the owners of the mares with which they are found running, and when they become of breakable age they are taken by the men whose brand they bear. Of course there is more or less of false branding, but where a "hustler" is found engaged in this industry he is generally sent to a place where horses are not supposed to exist and where there is no temptation for him to indulge the fad.

Cold Comfort.

Mr. Sillimure—to-tell the truth, I am a—little afraid to—to ask your father for your hand. Miss Chagitt—"Oh, you needn't worry. He says I'm ruinously extravagant."

Costly Fences.

Some of the Remarkable Ones to be Found Around New York.

The huge iron fence about the residence of Cornelius Vanderbilt on Fifth avenue, which is said to have cost $40,000, is a handsome piece of ironwork, but it is not the only imposing railing of the kind in New York. One of the biggest and handsomest incloses the Havemeyer residence of thirty-eighth street and Madison avenue. In some places it is nearly twenty feet in height and it is strong enough to resist a regiment. Another costly railing is that which surrounds the Vanderbilt residence on Fifth avenue, a clock about the Cathedral. It is low but beautifully wrought in bronze, which is so expensive that its ornaments two or three years ago tempted thieves, who twisted off festoons and sold them for old junk.

The longest and one of the strongest fences in this neighborhood is that of the Sailor's Snug Harbor, on Staten Island, which probably cost more than Mr. Vanderbilt's. It is set in cut granite, is more than a mile in length and weighs hundreds of tons. There was a good deal of discussion in this city ten years ago when Mrs. Langtry built a brick wall in front of her house on West Twenty-third street. It was still there in spite of the opposition it excited and there are two iron gates in it, one marked "In" and the others "Out," in English fashion.

The Oldest Trees.

As told in Notes and Queries, patri-archs of their respective races are known to have reached the following ages: Elm, 300 years; ivy, 335 years; maple, 516 years; larch, 576 years; orange, 630 years; cypress, 800 years; olive, 800 years; walnut, 900 years; oriental palm, 1,000 years; lime, 1,100 years; spruce 1,200 years; oak, 1,300 years; cedar, 2,000 years; yew, 3,200 years. The way in which the ages of these trees have been ascertained leaves no doubt of its correctness. In some few cases the data have been furnished by historical records and by traditions, but the botanical archeologist have a resource independent of either, and when carefully used infallible. Of all the forms of nature, trees alone disclose their ages candidly and freely.

It is difficult to guess why the yellow jasmine of the South is not extensively cultivated by the florists of this region. It is rarely beautiful, not only from the form and color of its blossoms, but from their peculiarly of arrangement on the branches and from the waving grace of the branches themselves. The peculiarly tough and elastic quality of the plant enables it to throw out long streamers that wave in golden splendor when blooming, yet do not fall to the ground. Plants brought North live easily indoors and blossom when very young and small. The individual blossom lasts a long time, and there is a perpetual succession of buds in various stages of development, so that the blooming season covers many weeks. As a living decoration for the house the blooming plant is peculiarly effective, while long streamers of the blooming branches will live long when clipped and placed in water. It blooms indoors about this season.

The strongest recommendation that can be made for the Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is that it is the best in the world. When the mothers recommend it you may know that the article has more than ordinary merit. Here is what the Centerville, South Dakota, Citizen, says editorially of an article sold in their town: "From personal experience we can say that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has broken up bad colds for our children. We are acquainted with many mothers in Centerville who would not be without it in the house for a good many times its cost, and are recommending it every day." 50 cent bottles for sale by F. Potts Green.

Your great men seem to carry their honors most easily," said the observant foreigner. "I have met several of your senators, and they seem just as common as any one."

"That may be the case with senators," replied the citizen, "but you just ought to meet a newly elected justice of the peace."

Say, Mister! Is it possible you are suffering from catarrh, and have not used Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy? All the terrible consequences of catarrh in the head may be averted if you'll but make the effort! You know, too well, its distressing symptoms! You possible know, if neglected, it invariably goes from bad to worse, and is likely to run into consumption and end in the grave! Here is a way of escape: Its makers are willing to take the risk, and make a standing offer of $500 for an incurable case of this loathsome and dangerous disease. You can get $500, or better—a cure.

Already Convicted.

Mother (wishing to draw a moral)—And he said, "Father, I cannot tell a lie."

Son—Humph! Of course he couldn't stand! There with the hatchet in his hand and chips on his clothes!

MOTHER AND CHILD CURED.—Mrs. Lizzie Botts of South Williamsport, Pa. writes: "Hood's Sarsaparilla has cured my little girl of scrofula. She was cured over a year ago and she is as well as ever now. I have been taking Hood's Sarsaparilla for pain in my side and on my lungs, I have taken two bottles and the pain has all left me. I believe if I had not taken it I should have had consumption."

Hood's Pills cure biliousness, headache.

May—"What do you sew at your sewing class?" Ethel—"Our wild oats!"

It is by all odds the best liniment Mr. Chas. Metzger, 217 Geyer Ave., St. Louis Mo., is of the same opinion. He says: "Salvation Oil is the best remedy we have ever used in our family. It is the best remedy on earth."

Robert Collyer tells the story of a little girl, with a vivid imagination which constantly led her into amazing extravagances regarding things which she claimed to have seen. One day, after an extraordinary exhibition of her inventive powers, her mother exclaimed in despair: "Oh, my dear! my dear! my dear! Don't you know that Annanias and Sapphira fell down dead on account of the lies they told? Don't you remember that terrible story?" "Oh, yes," replied the child, unabashed: "I saw them carried in after they fell down dead!"

A fight between giants, both desperate, both determined! The King of Medicines in contest with the King of Maladies! Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery against "Consumption!" It is not the struggle of a day, but the first blows are the fatal blows! In its early stages, Consumption (which is Lung-scrofula) will yield to this great Remedy! This has been proven beyond a doubt by innumerable successes! Acting directly upon the blood, its scope includes all scrofulous affections, Liver and Lung diseases. As a blood-purifier and vitalizer, it stands unequalled.

HEALTH BLIGHTED

DISTRESSING CASE OF SCROFULA AND HIP DISEASE. PERFECT CURE, HAPPINESS AND HEALTH GIVEN BY HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA.

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.: "I cannot praise Hood's Sarsaparilla enough for what it has done for me. Some four years ago, when six years old, George was attacked by hip disease in his right leg. We had to get him a pair of crutches, with which he was able to move about, but became badly deformed. We had to have his right leg lanced just above the knee. In a few weeks a second sore broke out, both discharging freely. agonizing pains afflicted him, he could not bear to be moved, his growth was stopped and HE WAS A MERE SKELETON. He had no appetite and it was hard work to make him eat enough to keep him alive. A few weeks later we had his hip lanced, and following this five other eruptions broke out, making eight running sores in all. We did all we could for him, but he grew weaker every day, although we had three of the best physicians. As a last resort we were prevailed upon by relatives who had taken Hood's Sarsaparilla with beneficial results to give the medicine a trial. We got one bottle about the first of March, 1892, and he had taken the medicine only a few days when his appetite began to improve. When he had taken one bottle he could move about a little with his crutches, which he had not been able to use for the preceding three months. We continued faithfully with Hood's Sarsaparilla, and in 6 months he was ABLE TO BE DRESSED and go about the house without the crutches. He has now taken Hood's Sarsaparilla regularly for eighteen months, and for the past six months has been without the crutches, which he has outgrown by long walks, and he is daily gaining in flesh and good color. He runs about and plays as lively as any child. We feel an indescribable joy at having our boy restored to health, and we always speak in the highest terms of Hood's Sarsaparilla." Mrs. Henry W. Murphy, Exeter, New Hampshire.
