Paints.

IN paint the best is the cheapest. Don't be misled by trying what is said to be "just as good," but when you paint insist upon having a genuine brand of

STRICTLY PURE WHITE LEAD.

It costs no more per gallon than cheap paints, and lasts many times as long. Look out for the brands of White Lead offered you; any of the following are sure:

- "ARMSTRONG & McKELVY," "BEYMER-BAUMAN," "DAVIS CHAMBERS," "FAHNESTOCK."

FOR COLORS—National Lead Co.'s Pure White Lead Tinting Colors.

These colors are sold in one-pound cans, each can being sufficient to tint 25 pounds of strictly Pure White Lead the desired shade; they are in no sense ready-mixed paints, but a combination of perfectly pure colors in the hands of a painter to tint strictly Pure White Lead.

A good many thousand dollars have been saved property-owners by having our book on painting and coloring read. Send us a postal card and get both free.

The Top Notch Reached.

A Remarkable War Souvenir Offered Absolutely Free—Read This Carefully.

The top notch of enterprise and liberality has been reached by the Pittsburg Times, which announces that every one of its sixty thousand subscribers, and all who will become regular readers before Saturday, May 12th, will be presented with the First Part of the most remarkable Art Portfolio of the year. The work referred to is "Frank Leslie's Scenes and Portraits of the Civil War," which will furnish a complete and authentic history of the conflict between the States in pictures drawn on the spot and in descriptive prose. The First Part will be delivered free to all readers of the Pittsburg Times in exchange for the first six coupons, and the other twenty-nine parts will be furnished in exchange for six coupons clipped from the Times and ten cents for each part.

There will be thirty parts, twenty-six of which will be devoted to illustrations and four to reading matter. Each of the first twenty-six parts will contain sixteen illustrations, making a total of four hundred and sixteen in the complete volume. Short descriptions will accompany the pictures in each part. The pictures were made on the scene of battle by the most famous artists of the time, and can therefore be relied upon as absolutely accurate. The work will be a supplement to every written history, portraying as it does the striking incidents of battle, and giving the likenesses of the leaders whose names were on every lip in the days of strife. Here the veterans will find the past recalled, and here the young may gain inspiration to emulate their patriotism and devotion.

The Pittsburg Times deserves thanks for placing this splendid history within the reach of the people at a nominal cost, and its proposed free distribution of the First Part to all its readers is generosity without a parallel. If you are not a reader of the Times, order it from your news agent at once. If there is no agent for the Times in your locality, write to the Times, Pittsburg, Pa., for terms to clubs and agents.

G. A. R. Encampment.

Preparations for a Noteworthy Event in Pittsburg Next September.

Several hundred of the foremost citizens of Pittsburg and Allegheny have organized committees to prepare for the 28th National Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic in Pittsburg during the week beginning September 10th next. This promises to be the largest and most impressive demonstration ever witnessed in Western Pennsylvania. Besides as it is now twenty-nine years since the Civil War ended, it is not probable that the Union Veterans of that struggle will ever again be massed in such vast numbers. Already the Committee on Accommodations has secured free quarters for 40,000 men and applications for those quarters are coming in daily from Posts in every direction. The railroads last year carried 208,000 persons to the Encampment at Indianapolis, and Pittsburg being in a more populous Territory, there is a natural expectation that this number will be exceeded.

Pittsburg Councils have appropriated $25,000 toward the Encampment Fund and Allegheny Councils $5,000, while the people of the two municipalities are expected to subscribe $75,000 to the end that the affair may be a thorough success.

A Great Engineering Scheme.

The canal that is to unite the North sea with the Baltic—a work conceived and begun by Bismarck—is said to excel from an engineering view, the Suez, Corinth and Manchester canals, says the Marine Record, while its commercial and strategic importance fairly entitles it to rank as "the Suez canal of Europe." The canal will extend from Holtenau, on the Keller fjord, to Brunsbattel, on the River Elbe, a distance of 60 miles.

At Grunthal the water shed between the Elbe and Eider, is passed, and the gigantic cutting, at a height of 380 feet above the water surface, has been built a railway bridge with a span of 470 feet. At normal water level the canal will be nine fathoms deep, and it will have a width of 22 yards on the bottom and of 36 yards on the surface at lowest tide.

It will be free from locks and sluices along its entire course, but at each end a double gate will guard against dangerous tides. The work will be completed in a few months, the construction time to be seven years, and the cost will be about $80,000,000.

No Role Against That.

Richard is a rather clever offered boy in the billiard-room of a certain noted club in New York. Like many others of his race, he is possessed of a readiness of repartee which some of the club members find not entirely unentiretable. A few days since, at the pool table, one of the players, hearing made an execrable shot, exciting the derision of the spectators, turned to the boy and said:

"Well, Richard, you'll stand by me, anyhow. It wasn't so bad, was it?"

"What?" cried the player. "You criticize too, do you? I shall report you to the house committee."

"Yes, suh," said Richard; "but 'twon't do no good, suh. De house committee has rules prohibitin' ev'ryting but tellin' de truth. Dav's all I's done."

He was not reported.—Harper's Magazine for May.

A Horrible Thought.

Wicks—Come, come. Don't work yourself into a passion. Nothing is so bad but it might be worse. Suppose he told the truth about you?

For and About Women.

Mrs. John Keeley is vice president of a bank in Atlanta, Ga. It is a family bank, and represents an estate. Mrs. Keeley's husband was vice president, but at his death, which occurred six years ago, his wife was elected to fill the position. Mrs. Keeley says: "I think there are many positions in banks which could be filled as well by women as by men, and I wonder that they have not been employed in that way long before."

The ingredients for fashionable dresses are undoubtedly cloth, watered silk, jet and cream colored lace. Within reason you mix then how you will, and so long as you manage to combine all these you will secure a costume which may be written down the "latest." In truth, the popularity of watered silk is little less than alarming. There is not a dress or costume that bears not its influence upon it, and let me tell you—you who have a wish to be economical—not to have watered silk make tight-fitting, for no matter how good a quality you may purchase it invariably represents the machine needle and gives way at the seams in a most deplorable fashion. However, the semi-fitting jacket is just as fashionable this year as the tight coat, so this need be no deterrent to the use of this fabric.

Frances E. Willard expects to return to this country in May or June. Her health is much improved.

No portion of the day-dress displays such infinite variety as does the blouse, shirt waist, chemisette and tie of the "eternal feminine." In the blouse the only special difference to be marked is in the sleeves, which are of course immensely large and full, but droop down from the shoulder instead of standing out straight from the arms. Sleeveless coats are being worn with them, and the effect is undoubtedly good. A charming black enamel-hair brooch, that was worn at a "studio tea" has lines of jet down every seam, a black moire sleeveless coat, with a full black half a yard deep, setting closely over the hips and outlined with a narrow edging of jet and turned back in front, with deep revers faced with cream colored embroidered silk muslin and edged with jet. Under this coat was worn a blouse of palest lilac satin, the sleeves full and the cuffs finished with little stiff bands. The high folded collar was finished in front with a broad satin bow, with short ends finished with a soft fall of cream embroidered silk muslin.

A bunion may be cured by bathing the affected part in hot water to which a teaspoonful of salt, a tablespoonful of starch and a few drops of arnica have been added, then wipe dry with a soft linen, and apply the following ointment: A camel-hair brush, apply the ointment all the time, or one which the leather covering the bunion cut out. Bunions are caused by undue pressure.

It is not generally known that Sarah Bernhard, the great actress, was once a dress-maker's apprentice.

The energies of the great modistes are now bent, for the most part, on producing striking effects in the tailor-made gown. Some simple drapes are introduced in the skirts, and large buttons are often added with good effect. Of course this necessitates a petticoat beneath, either of the same material or a bright contrast; and for this reason the plain skirt is preferred by many. The plain skirt is tastefully varied by rows of braid at the bottom and up one side of the skirt. Running parallel with the braid at the side, a row of large buttons extends from top to bottom of the skirt. Or with the double skirt, the upper one is cut open, and a few rows of fine shirring are sufficient to create three pretty folds to fall aside, giving ample view of the smart petticoat beneath.

Another caught up in a single box plait, and the plait is held and buttoned by a band at the hip, trimmed with two rows of narrow braid. In this case the skirt is simply loosened from its lining, and the lining faced with a handsome contrast, so that no underskirt is needed. The skirt's edge has three rows of braid. A jacket to be worn with this is a very smart, with short basques that falls neatly away in front. The revers are sharp pointed and the sleeves very elaborate. Two rows of braid trim it. A linen waist is worn beneath with small points falling below the waist line.

Basques will appear in a great variety of designs. They are ruffled and fluted or severely pointed or stiffened by their lining. In length they vary from two to six inches. Sleeves to silk gowns have no line to them, but their lining is without stiffening, so that the silk falls in a graceful drooping puff.

The favorite parasol shape seems to be the good old-fashioned, generous dome, which seems the reasonable shadow for a big summer hat. Handles are much varied, but the simpler and lighter they are the better. Metal handles are not in vogue, because smart women wear white kid gloves with black stripes almost exclusively for walking or driving, and a gold or silver handle always discolors a pale tinted glove.

It is a lady's place to bow at the first meeting after an introduction, if she desires to continue the acquaintance. When making a call a gentleman takes care of his own hat or coat, and puts them on without assistance—unless in some way incapacitated—when taking his departure.

When you set to clean houses and find that you can't paper the walls anew, though they're madly, you should try rubbing them with a flannel cloth that has been dusted with fine oatmeal, somewhat as you can work wonders with bread. Take thick slices of rather fresh bread and rub the walls with it as you would with a cloth. You can remove very bad spots with it sometimes. One woman has cleaned her walls with a flannel cloth dipped in gasoline. She rubbed the paper gently with the moistened cloth, and was careful not to rub off the glazing. If you try that be careful to have no fire in the room.

In Man's Field.

The case of Eunice Devoe, an attractive and industrious girl employed in one of the retail dry goods stores of New York, is regarded as another illustration that woman is usurping man's field in the errors as well as in the efforts of life. Miss Devoe was a cashier in the dry goods store, and, like many a male cashier before her, found her salary—in her case the munificent one of $5 per week— inadequate to provide her with board and to keep her in boots, hats and gowns of becoming style. If the supply of that deficiency by cooking the cash accounts had been the sum of her transgressions the blame for them would have been of modified severity. But Eunice had fixed her affections on a male clerk of the same establishment, who must have been a dear creature, and she took him driving and furnished him with a gold watch, and otherwise beautified him, all at the expense of the cash balance, to that degree that she was found out.

Many a masculine cashier has accelerated his road to ruin by lavishing his affections and the money of his employers on some object of the other gender. Such cases are too frequent to attract more than passing mention. But the cashier feminine has been considered superior to such frailties. Her freedom from the habits that lead to illicit expenditure has led to a preference on the part of some employers—especially when added to the fact that she can generally be got for half or a third of the salary of the male cashier. But this young woman led astray by ardent affection, has proved that the female cashier can develop the weaknesses of the male of the same pursuit, and gives us the reverse side of Miss Maud Banks' picture of the woman of the coming century. So far as concerns the firms who try to secure the services of faithful cashiers at the stipend of one dollar per diem, we cannot see that we regret the development.

But this erring young woman cannot be regarded as a type of the emancipated woman. These ambitious women are willing to usurp every function of man except working and ruining themselves for the opposite sex. They will not waste either their money or anybody else's on beautiful objects in trousers. And, while we applaud their sound judgment on that point, we cannot but feel more sympathy for the feminine cashier whose womanly devotion led her into the very masculine error of embezzlement.

PAT'S GREAT WONDER.—We are surrounded by dangers all the way from the cradle to the grave. "That great wonder is," as Pat says, "that after getting out of our cradle we live long enough to reach our grave." Thousands are out of health—morose, morbid and miserable, because they do not avail themselves of the remedy within easy reach of them. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery would cure them.

For all chronic or lingering Coughs, Weak Lungs, Spitting of Blood, Bronchitis, Shortness of Breath, Asthma and kindred ailments, it is a most potent remedy. It cleanses the blood, invigorates the liver, improves digestion, and builds up both flesh and strength. Dose small and pleasant to taste. Large bottles one, dollar. Of all druggists.

STRAWBERRY BAVARIAN CREAM.—One quart of strawberries, one-half pint of gelatine, one cup of sugar, one pint of cream, one-half cup of cold water. Cover the gelatine with the water and soak a half hour. Mash the berries and press them through a sieve fine enough to remove the seeds; add the sugar and stir until dissolved. Stand the gelatine over boiling water, and when melted strain it into the strawberry juice; mix, turn into a tin basin.

My wife was confined to her bed for over two months with a very severe attack of rheumatism. We could get nothing that would afford her any relief, and as a last resort gave Chamberlain's pain balm a trial. To our great surprise she began to improve after the first application, and by using it regularly she was soon able to get up and attend to her house work. E. H. Johnson, of C. J. Knutson & Co., Kensington, Minn. 50 cent bottles for sale by F. Potts Green.

BLIND, SICK, SAD SCROFULA IN THE EYES. A Wonderful Cure by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira A. Bass are well-known residents of Littleton, N. H., and their statement is endorsed by many friends.

"Gentlemen:—From a heart full of gratitude, I wish to state what benefit our little girl has derived from Hood's Sarsaparilla. When not a year old, scrofulous humor broke out on Dotie's face and ulcers formed on her eyelids. She suffered terribly, and to add to the torture boils broke out, she had ten at one time. When eighteen months old, she became TOTALLY BLIND.

and all the physicians said she would not be any better. But one doctor asked us to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, as he had known it to be used with benefit in such cases. Before the first bottle was all taken we noted a beneficial change, and she has since improved steadily. The ulcers on her eyelids disappeared, and she became entirely free from boils. Her eye sight is greatly improved, and she has grown to be a
