LUKENBACH-BULLOCK .- St. John's Episcopalean church, corner of Lamb and Allegheny streets, was the scene of a beautiful wedding service Wednesday evening. It was the marriage of Frank Kreamer Lukenbach, of Philipsburg, to Katharine Whiteman Bullock, of this place. The pretty church was crowded with people all eager to witness the nuptials and promptly at half-past six o'clock the tones of the Lohengrin's bridal chorus rolled out from the pipe organ the north doors of the church swung slowly open and the bridal party entered. The ushers, Messrs. C. E. Turnbach and Harry Green, of Philipsburg, John Vogt, of Tyrone, and James Harris, of Bellefonte, and the maids Misses Emma Montgomery, a cousin of the bride, and Miss Charlotte Spiglemeyer of this place, followed by the bride, on the arm of her uncle Mr. Frank Montgomery, were met at the altar by the groom, who was attended by Mr. John T. Fryberger, of Philipsburg, where the brief made the trip in exactly a day and a though impressive ceremony of the church, was carried out, Rev. Wright, the rector of St. John's officiating. Then the strains of Mendelssohn's grand wedding march swelled through the edifice and the newly made bride > and groom departed. A wedding supper was served the bridal party at the home of the bride, on north Allegheny street, after the ceremony then Mr. and Mrs. Lukenbach departed for a tour.

> The wedding attracted more than usual interest in town, owing to the well known young people whose union it consummated. The bride was gowned in white ottoman silk, with duchess lace, diamond and veil, while her maids looked sweet in white muslin de soie with point trimmings. The conventional evening dress gave an air of grace to the gentlemen, the party being effective in every detail. The church had been ornamented with tropical plants by a professional florist and the whole surroundings of the beautiful structure were in perfect harmony with the brilliancy of the occasion.

The groom is the oldest son of Mr. A. Lukenbach, of this place, and for years has been in the banking business. At one time he was a trusted clerk in the Wm. F. Reynolds & Co., bank tor. H. E. THE COUNTY FAIR PROJECT IS PROgressing. -In response to a call of the temporary organization which has in charge the matter of reviving an agricultural fair association for Centre coun. ty about two hundred gentlemen assembled in the court house, last Thursday night, to talk the thing over and hear the further reports of the committees that had only partially completed their duties when the meeting on the previous

Tuesday evening was called. The committee on location reported that the McCoy & Linn meadow north of town would be large enough if two tributing to his election. In 1852 he adjoining plots of five acres, owned by John P. Harris and the Rhoads estate could be secured. This would give a ground of twenty-one acres there. The only option the owners would give was a five years lease with privilege of renewal. Rental not to exceed $650 per Mr. Pollock, who, after his sucannum. A regulation half-mile track could be put on it provided the course of the creek is changed. The cost of such work and the building of the track was estimated at $8,000.

The Humes field south, of town, was reported too small, but by taking an adjoining plot, making twenty-seven acres in all, as much room as necessary could be had. This ground will cost $300 per acre and the estimated cost of grading for track was put at $5,000.

The other available location is the adjoining Valentine property which was reported on favorably but no option had been secured on it.

The committee on plans for permanent organization then reported as follows: Name-"Centre County Agricultural and Industrial Association.

Purpose-For the advancement of the agricultural and industrial interests of Centre county.

Officers-President, two vice presidents, secretary, treasurer and an executive committee composed of seven members to be selected from various sections of the county. The president, vice presidents, secretary and treasurer to be exofficio members of the executive com-

EARLY POLITICAL CAREER.

The reputation he had made as speaker in 1840, in behalf of General Harrison, gave him leading rank on the stump in 1844. His successes in this campaign stamped him as a man of not only great oratorical power but of keen wit and humor, and of political foresight far beyond his years. From this campaign Mr. Curtin's political advancement dated, and his reputation as an advocate grew.

In 1848 he was a Presidential Elector, and his efforts in behalf of General Tay lor were everywhere recognized as con was again upon the electoral ticket, and in the forefront of the battle for the ecutive of the State, and when the first Whig party. In 1854 his leading posi- gun was fired, he sprang to the duty of tion as a man and politician was so well recognized that his party desired him to become its candidate for Governor. He equalled by any other State Executive. declined the honor, but gave He encouraged enlistments in every his best efforts to the election of possible way, and in an eloquent wa cess, appointed him Secretary of State. In those days this position was one of hearth in Pennsylvania, and called greater power and influence than at present, for in addition to the regular duties of Secretary of State those of Superintendent of Public Schools were added, and under his administration the school system of the State received a strong impetus in the direction of its modern developement.

In the years from 1854 to 1869, when the Republican party was springing into life as a result of the agitation of the camps, not with pomp and ceremony. slavery question, he naturally took a leading position in the stirring tercourse. In the hospitals events which attended the birth gave words of hope to of the new party, and in 1860 was made its candidate for Governor. This honor was the more conspicuous because of the all important questions then the front whether officer or private, was pending, and because the future of the party, virtually born with his nomina-tion, depended almost entirely upon his

AT CHICAGO IN 1860.

The election of Lincoln depended upon the two doubtful States, Pennsylvania and Indiana. Both of them held their State election in the October preceding the November election, and it was therefore essential, nationally, that these two States should declare for the Republican candidate to insure his election. When the Convention met at Chicago, it was apparent that Seward was the choice of a large majority of the delegates. But it was morally certain that Pennsylvania could not be carried for the Republicans with Seward as the Presidential candidate: for it had been charged, and was believed, that he had been elected Governor of New York as Bishop Hughes that the school fund of the State was to be divided with the Catholic educational institutions. Hence the native Americans in the Republican party, who came to it after the death of the Know-Nothing party, were bit-terly opposed to him. It will thus be seen that at the outset of Mr. Curtin's career as the [Republican nominee for Governor, his own position as well as the position of his State attracted the attention of the whole country.

The Pennsylvania delegation in the Presidential Convention of 1860 was structed for General Simon Cameron, with John Mc Lane, Ohio, as its second choice. The necessity of carrying Pennsylvania in October for the success of the Republican ticket in November being so apparent, Curtin went to Chicago with A. K. Mc-Clure chairman of the Republican State Committee where he met Henry S. Lune of Indiana. It would be hard to picture the important part which Mr. Curtin and his position played in the nomination of Mr. Lincoln. He and Henry S. Lane, of Indiana, decided the contest in Lincoln's favor.

While the Convention was largely in favor of Mr. Seward, most of the delegates outside of New York were willing to forego their preference, and nominate a candidate acceptable to Mr. Curtin and Henry S. Lane, the candidates for Governor in the two October States.

ELECTED GOVERNOR OF PENNSYLVANIA. The Presidential Convention over, Mr. Curtin turned his his attention to the duties of his own campaign with characteristic energy, and his brilliant personal canvass is still remem bered with enthusiasm. He was elected in October, by a large majority, as was Henry S. Lane in Indiana.

The wisdom of the selection of Governor Curtin from his party stand point was justified from the day he assumed the position to which he had been elected, in the intelligence with which he dealt with the grave questions forcing themselves upon him as the Executive of a great State, with the nation upon the threshold of a sectional war. He was guided by wise counselors and was him-self discreet, conservative, and able in the discharge of his important and delicate duties, during the trying days when and even stubbornly courageous when all efforts failed and the war came.

A PATRIOTIC INAUGURAL. In his inaugural address in January,

1861, Governor Curtin said: "No one who knows the history of Pennsylvania and understands the opin ions and teelings of her people, can justly charge us with hostility to our brethren of other States. We regard them as friends and fellow countrymen, in whose welfare we feel a kindred interterest; and we recognize in their broadest extent all our constitutional obligations to them. These we are ready and willing to observe, generously and fraternally in their letter and spirit with unswerving fidelity. Ours is a National Government. It has within the sphere of its action all the attributes of sovereignty, and among these are the right and duty of self preservation. It is based upon a compact to which all the people of the United States are parties. It is the result of mutual concessions, which were made for the purpose of serectly on the people, and they owe it a personal allegiance. No part of the peo. ple, no State, nor combination of States, can voluntarily secede from the Union nor absolve themselves from their obligations to it. To permit a State to withdraw at pleasure from the Union, tain home this place, respected and without the consent of the rest, is to esteemed by people of all classes. His confess that our Government is a failure. familiar figure was an every day Pennsylvania can never acquiesce in sight on our streets. Tall and erect as in such a conspiracy, nor assent to a doc-trine which involved the destruction of the Government. If the Government is to exist. all the requirements of the Constitution must be obeyed; and it must have power adequate to the enforce-ment of the supreme law of the land in every State. It is the first duty of the national authorities to stay the progress of anarchy and enforce the laws, and Pennsylvania, with a united people, will give them an honest, faithful, and active support. The people mean to preserve the integrity of the National Union at every hazard."

SERVICES DURING THE WAR.

The civil war tollowed close upon Curtin's inauguration as the Chief Exraising troops for the General Government, with an energy and spirit unspeech just after the fall of Sumter he kindled campfires upon almost every more men into service than were asked for by the General Government. Governor Curtin's administration was conspicuous for the beneficent and merciful policy adopted to temper the terrible scourge of war. He was ceaseless in his devotion to the interests and the wants of those whom the State had given for the national defence. He went but to encourage them by personal inwounded and suffering, and bore mes sages of affection to and from loved ones at homes. No letter from a soldier at ever received without being promptly answered. It mattered not how impossible was the request, if it could not be granted the reason of the refusal was kindly told, In every time of suffering and discouragement the soldier felt that he who represented the power and maj esty of the Common wealth at home was mindful of him. Wherever were sickness, or wounds, or death, there was the official agent of the State to perform every duty to the living and the last rites to the dead. The bodies of the dead were brought back to sleep with their kindred, and their names enrolled in the lists of the martyred patriots.

Nor was the solicitude of the Govern or confined to the soldier. He beheld his family broken, and left without support and protection by his death. The desolate hearthstone and the means of the bereaved excited his sympathy, and he applied himself vigorously to the originating of a system of care and instruc-tion for the orphans of the fallen slain, which should make the State their guardian and supporter until of sufficient age to provide for themselves. He was successful in his humane and patriotic endeavors. The Legislature gave an at tentive ear to his appeals, and voted liberally millions of money for this worthy object. The fruit of this expenditure will be most abundant. A body of well-instructed and morally trained young men and women will be given to the Commonwealth, instead of an equal number of the offspring of ignorance and want, which otherwis would almost inevitably have been the result. When he shall be laid in an honored grave, no prouder line will be found inscribed upon his tombstone than this: "He made the orphans of the soldiers the children of the State !"

RE-ELECTED GOVERNOR. In 1863, Governor Curtin was, from his arduous labors, broken in health, and was compelled to give himself, for weeks at a time, to the exclusive care of an eminent physician in New York. President Lincoln, appreciating his services, and recognizing the necessity of a change of climate and employment, formally tendered him a first class foreign mission, which the Governor sig-nified his willingness to accept when his term should expire. But in the mean time he was nominated for re-election, and relinquishing his intention of going abroad, he accepted the call of his fellow-citizens, and again entered upon the canvass. Thousands of voters were beyond the limits of the Commonwealth, facing a still defiant foe; but they generally favored the re-election of Governor Curtin and he was elected by a "returned" majority of about 15,000.

It was the aspiration of his friends that he should be made United States Senator at the end of his second Gubernational term, but the influences which had ever been hostile to him prevented. Soon after General Grant's election, Governor Curtin was nominated and confirmed as Minister to Russia, and spent nearly four years at St. Petersburg.

A LIBERAL REPUBLICAN IN 1872. Minister Curtin returned home in 1872, and took part in the liberal Republican movement which nominated Horace Greeley. He was very prominently spoken of for the second place on that ticket, and was the choice of the Pennsylvania delegation in the Greeley Convention for President. His connection with the Liberal Republican movement, and the fact that his power and influence in the Republican party which were eminent while he remained in the country, but which had been broken during his absence, carried him into the Democratic party.

He was a member of the Constitutional Convention of 1872-73, and for a few years after had little to do with

HE JOINS THE DEMOCRACY. When he wearied of the quiet of business life and longed for politics, Governor Curtin found a place in the Demoeratic party, and was nominated for Congress in 1878 when he was defeated by the Greenbackers. He was nominated again in 1880 by the Democrats of his Congressional district, and was elected for two terms retiring in 1887 near the close of his 71st year. In Congress Governor Curtin was a faithful public servant, urpose of se-lt acts di-her we it a tention. At one time he was Chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Commit-youth he would walk about for his daily exercise. Until within a very short time previous to his death he kept up a lively interest in the politics of the county and it was his influence that made his friend Dr. J. H. Dobbins the post-master here under the former Cleveland administration and not until he had given evidence that it would prove satisfactory would the department recommend the appointment of the present official. His time was occupied in looking after his business here and dispensing charities. No more hour could be spent than a talk with the ex-Governor, he always loved young people and gave them friendly counsel whenever an opportunity presented itself and those who enjoyed his intimacy will cherish his charming personality as long as memory lasts.
