Senator Wilson's Courage,

After Henry Wilson's first election to the United States Senate, he gave his friends a dinner, says a writer in Kind Words. The table was set with not one wineglass upon it.

"Where are the glasses ?" asked several of the guests merrily.

"Gentlemen," said Mr. Wilson, "you know my friendship for you and my ob-ligations to you. Great as they are they are not great enough to make me forget 'the rock whence I was hewn and the pit whence I was dug.' Some of you know how the curse of intemperance overshadowed my youth. That I might escape, I fled from my early surroundings. F r what I am, I am indebted, under God, to my temperance vow and had labored daily for 23 years, and had my adherence to it. Call for what you want to eat, and if the hotel can provide it, it shall be forthcoming ; but wines and liquors cannot come to this table with my consent, because I will not spread in the path of another the same snare from which I escaped.' Three rousing cheers showed the Field's Washington, "but he was of a brave senator that men admire the man who has the courage of his convictions.
