Lost AN EYE .- Joe, one of the twin sons, of Prof. G. W. Twitmyer, principal of the Honesdale public schools, was hit in the eye by a stone, thrown from a sling in the hands of a boy, on the street, from which he has lost the sight of that eye. He still can see a little but the doctor says the lens is destroyed and he must lose the eye. Little Joe is a great favorite in the town and excitement became so high that the father of the boy who threw the stone, found it best to take him away, which he has done. Prof. Twitmyer is well known in this county, his old home, where his many friends will be grieved at one time but this is his first visit in two to learn of his son's misfortune.
