Our Winter Birds.

Quite a Number of the Little Songsters Stay With Us Through the Cold.

Quite a number of birds stay with us all through the winter, writes Lillian N. Houston, in the Cannonsburg Notes. A pair of robins made their appearance, evidently from the woods nearby, about the middle of January, and eat the frozen apples on the apple trees, rather cold diet but the best they could do, and it has kept life in them. One or more wrens come around every few days and sing as loud and cheerfully as though all weather was alike to them. A pair of redbirds have stayed near until lately and have eaten the parched corn we have hung on the plum tree for them, but I have not seen them for two weeks, and fear they are frozen to death.

Tufted titmice, nuthatches and the bright little chickadee come to our yard most every day and eat anything we give them, from fat meat and pumpkin seeds to egg shells and sunflower seeds; the latter they are especially fond of. The snow bunting is another bird we often see come in flocks when we have a snowstorm. I rarely ever see him in summer and think he only spends the winter with us, and goes farther north—sometimes as far as the pine woods in Canada—in the spring.

Keep your eyes open and you will see the chickadee and some others of our winter birds. They are interesting enough to pay you for your trouble. The chickadee, or blackcap titmouse, is quite a pretty bird, the top of his head and around his throat being of a velvety black, shading into white on his breast, his neck being of a brownish color. He is very social, and although generally seen in company with the snowbird, winter wren, nuthatch and hairy woodpecker, he is never known to quarrel, but acts in the most friendly manner toward them all. In some parts of the country the chickadee is thought to be hurtful from the fact that he is often seen picking among the buds and leaves of fruit trees; but he doesn't do this for the bud, but for the grub hidden in it. It has been found that a single pair of titmice destroy not less than 500 grubs daily. "That one small bird," some one remarks, is able to accomplish so much good, is an appeal to the farmer for the protection of all birds."

I almost forgot to say that the chickadee along with his "diet of worms" often eats seeds of weeds and grasses as does his friend the snow-bunting.

Printing in China.

Shanghai is China's chief port and contains about 400,000 inhabitants, who are under native rule, and the English, American and French "settlements," with 250,000 Chinese and 5,000 foreigners, all of whom are under foreign rule.

In that city tremendous congregations gather in the mission churches, and there are to be found the largest Sunday schools in China. In Shanghai is also the largest mission press in the world. More than 1,000 Chinese converts are connected with the different mission.

In the mission press electrotyping and stereotyping are done, and over 35,000,000 pages are issued annually. The Shun Pao is the best paying and most widely circulated of the three native newspaper dailies of Shanghai. It is an eight page sheet, printed on the thinnest of rice paper. It is so light that it does not weigh more than a man's handkerchief and so then that paper can be printed on one side only.

The paper goes to press in big sheets, which are so folded that the blank side is turned inward when taken in hand by the subscriber, and so that there is no cutting nor pasting. Owing to the thinness of the paper it has a greasy, yellow appearance, and it is printed so closely with Chinese type that not an inch seems to be wasted.

The headline or title of the paper consists of two Chinese characters, taking up a space not wider than one of the columns of our newspapers and not more than an inch in length.

Its price is 10 cash, which, allowing for the difference, makes it equivalent to half a cent in our money.

The Magazines.

Readers of Marion Crawford's novel, "Cass Braccio," now appearing in the "Century," will be interested in knowing that the story, as printed so far, is true, except that the scene of the actual occurrence was in South America instead of in Italy. The nun, who really escaped from a Carmelite convent with a Scotch surgeon, was placed in her bed, when it was fired, instead of a body, as in Mr. Crawford's story. After much suffering the surgeon and his wife reached the sea coast, and were taken aboard on an English vessel, whence they sailed to Scotland and lived for many years in Edinburgh. The part of Mr. Crawford's story still to appear, portraying the punishment visited upon the pair for their sin, is imaginary.

An Unknown Quantity.

"My good man," said the lady, "have you ever stopped to think how much money is wasted each year for tobacco and rum?" "No mum, I hadn't," answered the object. "It's takin' all my time, just now to figger how many poor families could be supported off the price of the extra cloth women puts in their sleeves."

Baby Ruth's Namesake.

Miss Ruth Burnett, of Boston, after whom "Baby Ruth" Cleveland was named, was last week received into the Catholic convent of the Sacred Heart, at Albany, N. Y.

It Was Mean of Her.

"I had gone to bed at an early hour, worn out with a heavy day's work in court. How long I had been sleeping I will never know. I only remember that I awoke from a horrible nightmare in which the Chinese hell of ice and frost figured to a large extent. I was flat on my back without a stitch of bed clothing on me and shivering like aspen leaf. That was the night when the mercury tried to get out of the bottom of the thermometer. There was no fire in my room. I sprang out of bed and lighted the gas. I could not think that the burglar had ever been bora who would be so mean as to steal the clothes off of a man's bed on such a night as that, so I just stood for a moment and considered. I did not consider very long, for my night shirt was not so awful thick, and as you can see, I am about as fat as 'the lean and hungry Cassius.' I made a bolt for my wife's room, adjoining mine, where there was a fire. She had one gas jet dimly burning and by its light I saw that she was asleep with the two little ones by her side. I took another look. There she reclined in peaceful slumber, under not only the bed clothes which belonged on her bed, but every comfort and blanket which she had taken from me. It is a fact—that good little wife had risen in her sleep, and sound asleep had come to my room and removed all the clothes from my bed and innocently left me to freeze or keep life in my body by walking the floor all night. I gently placed my hand on her forehead and she opened her eyes. I didn't scold, I simply said: 'Martha, if it would not be asking too much of you I would consider it a great favor if you would give me just one poor sheet from all the clothes you have taken from me. That would beat nothing by very much of a darned sight. Say, will you give me one sheet?' 'I didn't take me long to make her understand what she had done, and she actually cried and said that she feared she had given me my death. Well, I secured by bed clothes and finally thawed out and went to sleep. Since that night if I want to make my wife real angry just start a discussion of somnambulism in her presence.'"

Both men and women hesitate at the foot of stairs over the question as to which shall go first—the women or the men. This short rule, if remembered will govern the decision—that in going down the steps the man follows the woman; in going up, he precedes her.

Never pass a woman on a staircase, no matter under what provocation, especially if you have no acquaintance with her. If a man is coming down stairs hurriedly and a woman appreciates the situation, she can quicken her steps or stand aside, saying "do not let me detain you." He should bow his thanks and pass on.

The Depression in Wheat. The debonair young agriculturist had been talking with great emphasis to the handsome young woman, but she didn't quite believe him. "Oh," she exclaimed, you are chaffing me."

"My dear young lady," he responded, "you were never more mistaken. With wheat at its present price, it would be an insult to offer you chaff."

Magazine Editor—"Your poem has some merit but you use a faulty figure when you speak of the 'music of the sunshine.' The sun cannot be considered a musical sort of a thing."

They do not seem to be feeling the hard times very much in Washington. Mrs. Bruce paid Tsay $1,000 to appear at one of her musicals, and gave Melba and Edouard de Reszko an equal amount to appear at another. The widow of Senator Hearst and Mrs. R. H. Townsend also paid these operative stars $750 and $1,000 for their attendance at a musicale.

You must not take headaches too seriously. They are simply Nature's outcry against your stomach and disordered liver. Go to C. M. Parrish's drug store and ask for Ramon's Tonic Liver Pills. They cost but 25 cents, and give you a complete course of treatment which, in two or three weeks' time, will remove all bile, purify your blood, increase your appetite, strengthen your nervous system, and bring the red glow of health to your cheeks. The treatment consists of Pills and tiny Tonic Pellets—a three weeks' supply. Try a free sample dose.

Uncle Sam's new bonds did not go a begging, not by a long shot. They were in demand from time over on both sides of the Atlantic ocean, which fact speaks well for the national credit. But this is not all; the fact also indicates that the bonds might have been floated at a lower rate of interest had congress only done its duty when asked to, by the president.

"Do you say your prayers every night?" "Jimmy—" "Yep." "And does your maw say hers?" "Yep." "And does your paw?" "Naw; paw don't need it. It's almost daylight when he gets to bed."

"All signs fail!"—except pimples and blotches. These never fail to indicate an impure condition of the blood, which may be thoroughly cleaned and renewed by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. The most efficacious and economical of blood purifiers.

"And you proposed to her twice before she accepted you?" "Yes." "It's strange that she changed her mind." "Not at all. When she refused me the first time it made me feel so cheap that she couldn't resist the chance for a bargain."

People put their hands over their mouths when they yawn because their great-grandfathers believe that unless the sign of the cross was made before the mouth when a man yawned the devil would fly down his throat.

Had a Return Ticket.

A story is going the rounds about a Sturgeon Bay rustic who saw his first train last Summer. He stepped up to the ticket agent at the depot and said that he wanted to take a ride on "that ere train." The agent asked him how far and finally elicited the information that the man had only 30 cents and wanted to get as far as he could and return, and accordingly gave him a ticket. The rustic boarded the train and took a seat next to the window. The train started and gradually increased in speed. The passenger jumped up and down with ejaculations of pleasure so great that he finally commenced to swear. A minister of the Gospel who sat in front of him turned around and said:—"Say, young man, do you know you are going to Hades?" The young man turned his attention to the divine and said: "I don't give a d—n, I've got a return ticket."—Milwaukee "Sentinel."

A kindly heart and genial nature may be the Scotch poet's definition of a gentleman, but to the world at large these are the corner-stones, from which should spring the finer architecture that complete the structure.

A severe rheumatic pain in the left shoulder had troubled Mr. J. H. Loper, a well known druggist of Des Moines, Iowa, for over six months. At times the pain was so severe that he could not lift anything. With all he could not get rid of it until he applied Chamberlain's Pain Balm. "I only made three applications of it," he says, "and have since been free from all pain." He now recommends it to persons similarly afflicted. It is for sale by F. P. Green.

SPRING MEDICINE

Is a necessity because the tonic of winter air is gone, and milder weather increased moisture, accumulated impurities in the blood and debilitated condition of the body, open the way for that tired feeling, nervous troubles, and other ills. The skin, mucous membranes and the various organs strive in vain to relieve the impure current of life. They all welcome

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA to assist Nature at this time when she most needs help, to purify the blood, tone and strengthen the laboring organs and build up the nerves.

PURIFIES THE BLOOD. "Last spring I was entirely worn out. I would get so weak and tired that I would be obliged to leave my work and lie down. My family physician did not relieve me and I decided to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. I have taken four bottles and am greatly improved in health." Mrs. J. R. NOLAN, Mohawk, New York.
