Lenten Luncheons.

Eggs and Fish Predominate—Dainty Recipes for Serving in Many Forms.

Eggs and fish form a pleasing substitute for meat at any and all seasons. During Lent they are, of course, in great demand, and housekeepers are frequently sorely perplexed to know how to give variety to the cooking of these commonplace articles of food. The following tried and true recipes will therefore, help to give variety to Lenten luncheons.

Baked Eggs.—Break each egg into buttered cups and set the cups in a pan of water. Place in the oven until the whites begin to thicken. Serve on toasted bread or a mound of rice, having made dents in the rice with a spoon for the eggs.

Breaded Eggs.—Boil hard and cut in round, thick slices. Season with pepper and salt. Dip each in beaten raw egg, then in fine bread crumbs and fry in hot butter. Drain free from grease and serve with a sauce made by boiling up together a cup of broth, a half teaspoonful of chopped parsley, a little salt and pepper and adding three tablespoonfuls of cream.

Spanish eggs.—Rub the inside of the frying-pan with a slice of onion. Pare one raw tomato and cut it into bits. Put it into the frying-pan with a tablespoonful of butter and cook for five minutes. Beat six eggs well, and at the end of five minutes put them in the pan with a level teaspoonful of salt and one-fourth of a teaspoonful of pepper. Stir constantly until the eggs begin to thicken. Then pour into a hot dish and serve at once.

Codfish pudding.—Take two cupfuls of cold mashed potatoes, put them over the fire, add half a cup of milk, and stir constantly until the potatoes are hot. Beat until light, then add one cupful of shredded codfish, beat again, stir in carefully the well-beaten whites of two eggs, a saltspoonful of pepper; turn into a baking dish, brush the top with the yolk of an egg, and bake in a quick oven fifteen minutes.

Whitefish Salad.—Boil some whitefish, sufficient for a salad. When ready, take it out of the water. Boil gently in the same water half a package of gelatine and whites of two eggs. Strain, and set aside to cool. Remove the bones from the fish and place in a layer on a platter with some sharp gravy poured over it. Next a layer of beets, pickled cucumbers and hard-boiled eggs, all cut in thin slices; then fish with gravy, and so on. Continue until all the fish is used, the last being gravy. Garnish with capers, pieces of the fish jelly and pickled beets.

Crimped Fish. Soak slices of any firm white fish in strongly salted water, with two tablespoonfuls of vinegar, and boil for about ten minutes. Drain the fish, arrange on a platter and remove the skin and bones. Serve hot with oyster or lobster sauce, or cold with mayonnaise or tartar sauce poured into the space left by the bones. Garnish with water cress.

Thousands Dead and Dying.

The Japanese Beat the Celestials in Datto-China Will Ask Italy to Seek Arbitration to Settle the War.

LONDON, March 10.—The Central News correspondent in Tokio telegraphs that on March 7 Gen. Nodzu's Japanese army attacked the Chinese at Tanchang. A hot artillery fire was opened and under its cover three bodies of troops stormed the town. The Chinese numbered 10,000 or more. At first they fought stubbornly, but eventually they broke and ran, throwing down their arms and making no effort to save standards or baggage. Although the Japanese loss was but 100 killed, the Chinese left more than 2,000 dead and dying. All the enemy's war material was captured. The town caught fire during the fight and before night was burned to the ground. Gen. Nodzu has been promoted to the rank of marshal.

The Chinese are making great preparations to defend Formosa against the expected landing of the Japanese.

Rome, March 10.—The Chinese Minister to England will present to King Humbert on March 14 the Chinese envoys, who, it is reported, will seek to interest the king and cabinet in a plan to end the China-Japanese war by arbitration.

London, March 10.—The full text of all the protocols and other correspondence in connection with the recent abortive peace propositions of China to Japan, has been received here. The documents were laid before the Japanese parliament February last. They confirm the telegraphic advices heretofore published that when the Japanese learned that the Chinese delegates were not clothed with powers to complete preliminaries of peace, the Japanese government refused to treat with them and the Chinamen returned home. Count Ito believes that China was not in earnest about the matter at that time.

Four Mummified Bodies.

Found in a Small Cavern on a Farm near Petersburg, Ky.

CINCINNATI, March 9.—(Special.)—John Bachelor discovered on the Dr. Terrill farm, near Petersburg, Ky., today a small cavern in which were four mummified bodies.

They were in a sitting posture, were small in stature and of dark complexion and had been wrapped in bandages of some material resembling cloth, but which crumbled to pieces when touched. Like other human mummified remains which have been found in that region they are supposed to have belonged to a race which preceded the red Indians.

Church Going: A Lay Sermon.

There is a popular idea that church-going is not important, that being good is quite sufficient of itself, and that staying at home on Sunday is an evidence of breadth of mind.

There are many standpoints from which these ideas can be viewed, and there are many grounds on which a defence or an advocacy of church-going could be based. The intention in these few lines is to suggest a single thought on this subject.

Of all the acts of a man's daily life that which most particularly distinguishes in the eyes of the world a professing Christian from non-Christians is church going. The world cannot see the workings of the mind, the world cannot detect shades of belief, the world cannot see any difference as a rule between the business or professional dealings of the members of a church and those of non-members, but the world does see churches and does see people go to them and participate in the services, and when a man or a woman by the public act of attending church goes on record on that side it has a tremendous moral weight in the community.

It will be easy to pick out people and say, "Oh, he doesn't fool anyone by going to church; we know him," and it may be that there is no one who does not seem more or less hypocritical in the eyes of someone. But each person who goes to church serves to make up the grand total of all those who go. Every one counts. The greater the number who go the greater the effect on the public in general. If nobody went we would have the French Sunday at the time of their revolution, the strongest influence for good would be gone, and we would lapse rapidly not only into immorality but barbarism.

We do not believe there is anyone who doubts the vast civilizing and elevating influence of the churches simply from their existing and being carried on as such.

Now, if because a certain portion of the people of any community attend church public good is done, can it be doubted that more good would be done if a larger portion attended church?

It is the duty of every person as a citizen to go to church. For anyone who pretends to care for the public welfare, who pretends to a desire for the elevation of his fellowmen, who looks for an increase of civilization and the raising of the moral average of men no additional reason should be necessary.

It is a weekly publication of his approval and interest, and while he might not be able to tell either just where or how his going has done particular good, yet he can rest assured that as one of the total of those who go he has done actual telling work for civilization and for the gospel.

Grip Is African Fever.

A Traveler Who Has Gone Through the Dark Continent Says So.

Up two flights of stairs under the roof of a double tenement house on Catharine street lies S. John Kuno, African pioneer and missionary, sick with African fever. After a four years' experience of missionary work under the tropics he has returned with the usual missionary reward—a consciousness of duties well performed, a troublesome and incurable disease, and a large wad of photographs.

The African fever is really a cross between malaria and influenza. Your head aches, you shiver and roast by turns, and when it is through with you you are so weak that you generally die as a matter of preference. The doctors claim you can't have it in a temperate less than 52 degrees, but Mr. Kuno says he knows better. He has had it this week. Moreover, he goes further and advances a new theory for scientific consideration.

The grip, he says, as far as he can learn, is nothing more than African fever in a mild form. What is more the disease started a few years ago, just after a lot of African missionaries had returned home and he is personally convinced that African fever was among their baggage. The African disease, he says, the doctors know nothing about, and he thinks we treat the grip too mildly, being too much afraid of quinine. The dose for African fever in the medical book is two grains at a time, but in Africa the old hands take as much as 120 grains at a crisis, putting it down literally in handfuls. He himself has taken so much that it has permanently affected his hearing, a continuous buzzing going on in his head like a spluttering telephone.

Lebanon County English.

"The most beautiful girl I ever saw, either in face or form," said the bachelor doctor, "was over in the good old Pennsylvania Dutch county of Lebanon. I met her at a party and fell in love with her even before I knew she was worth $100,000 in her own right and before I had been introduced to her. The moment I saw her I resolved to try to win her. I was dead gone. I couldn't rest until I was introduced.

"An embarrassing silence followed the introduction. I had expected a friend and I hadn't seen him. He broke the embarrassing silence by asking my enquirer if she had noticed whether he was present. A flush deepened her cheeks. Her beautiful eyes grew brighter. Teeth of matchless white gleamed between her red lips as she opened them to reply. And this is what she said: "I haven't saw him yet. I guess he hasn't come already. "That was good Lebanon county English, but somehow I didn't try to win the girl."—New York Sun.

Its Origin.

The expression, "Mind your Ps and Qs," arose from an old custom of innkeepers marking down the scores of their customers on the wall or door with a bit of charcoal. Q stood for quart, P for pint, and a hint to mind one's Ps and Qs was equivalent to the reminder that he was drinking too much.

The Governor's Weakness.

As the oil people, producers, refiners and dealers, generally voted last fall for Governor Hastings, and against Colonel Stinger, who was on record as a stout defender of their interests, they should be sparing of their censure on the governor for his approval of the Marshall or Standard bill repealing the law against the consolidation of pipe lines. The executive did precisely what it was natural to expect he would do. We do not think the reasons he puts forth, however, are entitled to much weight. He should have taken the advice to a lame judge: to refrain from giving his reasons after decision; the decision might be all right, but the reasons were pretty sure to be all wrong. The governor says in adopting the unusual course of defending his action before it was assailed, that the act of 1883 prohibiting the consolidation of pipe lines is of a most unusual character in this state, and finds justification for his action in the fact that no law has been passed preventing the consolidation of competing street railroads. The reason is not far to seek. The street car railway lobby and influence prevades the legislature, just as the power of the Standard does when that powerful corporation chooses to exercise it, as it did in forwarding the Marshall bill. A bill to authorize the consolidation of competing street car lines passed the senate the same day the governor approved the Standard bill. Its constitutionality is doubted.

The same reasons precisely exist for prohibiting the consolidation of competing lines and street railways that exist for prohibiting the consolidation of competing railroads. This latter prohibition was engrained in the constitution of Pennsylvania after a tremendous struggle, and represents the settled policy of the state. That effective laws have not been enacted to enforce the prohibition, as repeatedly urged by the legislature by Governor Pattison during his two terms as governor, was because the railroad lobby has always fought such laws and found willing servitors in the legislature just as the Standard did, not only in the legislature, but in the governor's office, on the Marshall bill.—Pittsburg Post.

An Awful Chapter in Crime.

The cable brings from Germany one of the most remarkable criminal stories in history. It is a tale of murders committed by boys of tender years for the sole purpose of escaping from the reformatory to prison.

It surpasses ordinary understanding how the human instincts could be so totally wanting in boys of such an age. The murders were deliberate, executed with fiendish coolness and followed by no apparent qualms of conscience.

The story is also a sad commentary on the German reformatory where the boys were confined. The fact that all the boys in a department were aroused by the cries of one of the victims without leading to official interference indicates the grossest negligence in the care of the inmates. The anxiety of the boys to change to a prison to escape from the reformatory is equally indicative of a discipline during their waking hours far from reformatory in character. There is evidently necessity for reform in some of the German reformatories that should extend to the management as well as to the inmates.

An Honest Boy.

A story of Scotch honesty comes from Dundee. A small boy had taken the prize for an exceptionally well drawn map. After the examination the teacher, a little doubtful, asked the lad: "Who helped you, with this map, James?" "Nobody, sir." "Come, now; tell me the truth. Didn't your brother help you?" "No, sir; he did it all."

Fired-out—Bin over to Restville lately?

Tired-out—"Naw, der's no use. Dey's all got padlocks on de chicken coops, bulldozers in de yards an' local option in town."

"Perhaps you would not think so, but a very large proportion of diseases in New York comes from carelessness about catching cold," says Dr. Cyrus Edson. "It is such a simple thing and so common that very few people, unless it is a case of pneumonia, pay any attention to a cold. There are a great many cases of catarrh and consumption which have their origin in this neglect of the simplest precaution of every day life. The most sensible advice is, when you have one, get rid of it as soon as possible. By all means do not neglect it." Dr. Edson does not tell you how to cure a cold but we will take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It will relieve the lungs, aid expectoration, open the secretions and soon affect a permanent cure. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by F. P. Green.

"Ah," said the old printer, who had just struck a job as waiter in a quick lunch place, "this is like old times. Here I am distributing pi."

To cure sick-headaches is either possible or it is impossible. If it is impossible, forget it; if it is not impossible, try for it. First and foremost, try Ramond's Tonic Liver Pills (and Pellets). SADLY AFFLICTED BOILS AND ERUPTIONS CAUSED BY IMPURE BLOOD.

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA MADE HER WELL, STRONG AND HEALTHY.

"When our little daughter was six months old an eruption of the skin appeared, and shortly large boils came which were filled with watery matter and which caused the child much suffering. She would scratch until the blood would flow, later crusting over. One physician said the cause was teething, and another thought it was scrofula. All treatments, remedies, baths, saives and plasters, were of no avail. Anna grew pale and became weaker, and from day to day LINGERED AND SUFFERED until she was 4 years old. I was completely discouraged when I happened to notice a cure by Hood's Sarsaparilla of a boy suffering from a complaint similar to that of my child. I bought one bottle and after giving it to Anna a few days I noticed satisfactory improvement. Before the bottle was entirely used she had greatly changed and after a few weeks the disease had disappeared. The child had a good appetite and became well, and IS STRONG AND HEALTHY, without any ailment. I am very thankful for the benefit Hood's Sarsaparilla has been to our child and we heartily recommend it." CHARLES SULLER, 156 Antietam Street, Detroit, Mich.
