Wesley's Love Story.

Discovery of a Strange Romance of Early Days in Georgia .- Loved a Girl But Feared to Wed. Religious Scruples Wrecked Pretty Sophia Canston's Life .- Abided by the Bishops De-

In an old library of the South, where letters and papers have been stored away for two centuries, has been unearthed a strange story; nothing more nor less than the love life of John Wesley, in George. It is a strange history passion, of self-searchings, of the tyranny of the early religious conscience of sorrow and resolve. Wesley, the preacher, the missionary, the founder of a church, is the last man from whose breast one would have expected to wrench such a secret, and yet, when all's told, it presents his character in no light new or unfamilar. This is the tale. When James Oglethorpe sailed westward to become Governor of a colony peopled with convicts and the flotsam and jetsam of the London workhouses, he took John Wesley with him as a civilizing influence. Wesley was then a young man of brilliant parts, a fellow of Lincoln College, Oxford, on £300 a year; handsome, pure and Quixotic. His brother, was the Governor's Secretary.

The ship was delayed by storms and the passengers were thrown upon their own resources for entertainment. The most interesting person on board, so far as John Wesley was concerned, was Miss Sophia Canston, niece of one of the fortune hunters whom Oglethorpe had induced to follow him to the New World. This was not only because young women were few on board the colonial vessel, but because this young woman was extremely attractive.

BEAUTIFUL AND ACCOMPLISHED. She was beautiful. She was highly educated. She sang with a voice that fascinated him. And, most potent of all, she listened with flattering interest his preaching. The two became friends. She sang Charles Wesley's psalms with him, and listened to all he nad to say about experimental religion. Governor Oglethrope was well pleased with the turn affairs were taking, and used every means to throw the young people together. By the time Georgia was reached, the boat had shipped an extra passenger with wings and a bow and arrow. When the settlers landed, the usual occupations of newly-arrived colonists seemed to have put an end to Wesley's lovemaking. Oglethorpe went on to the site of Fredrica, accompanied by Charles Wesley, and Delamotte, his inseparable companion. The rest of the English set about raising tents or barkcovered huts along the square and streets of Savannah. John Wesley went with some of the Germans, because he had begun the study of their language on board ship, and desired to pursue that study. Amid the noise of the rice birds the fort at Savannah was raised and Wesley built his parsonage and school-

Mr. Cranston, Sophia's uncle, was made chief magistrate, and store-keeper, and his niece made herself quite charming as Wesley's pupil in French, and an earnest seeker after the exquisite pleasures of experimental holiness. THE RECOGNIZED BELLE.

Sophia was the official belle of the place. She and John Wesley were the most conspicuous figures in society and were consequently thrown together very frequently. Governor Oglethorpe looked upon the affair as settled, and so did the people of the colony. Oglethrope wished to see it settled, because he wished to keep Wesley at Savannah, instead of letting the young missionary wander off as had been his original intention to preach to the Indians. Wes-Delamotte taught school, preached and held love feasts, and in the evening sang psalms. Mr. Delamotte taught about 40 children to "read, write and cast accounts." Before school in the morning and after school in the evening Mr. Wesley catecrized the "lower class" of children, and endeavored to fix something of his own spirit into their minds as well as their memories.
At night, when the candles burned and their work was done, and the still woods about them gave back no echo to their voices Mr. Wesley had the women and young men meet at the church for a a severer catechism of their Bibles. The few hours left from this teaching he spent partly in studying German with Bishop Nitschma, teaching Greek to Mr. Delamotte, helping Charles Wesley with his sermons and reading French with Sophia Canston. There are pretty word pictures in these old letters of the two young people sitting together under the trees in the public park, or walking together to the love feasts in the evening. One can see the tall, lithe figure of Wesley, priest-robed, classic-faced, thrilled with a first, strange, human see himself in the situation. He kept himself quite busy, built a parsonage, in which he lived in the stern, pleasureless, methodical way which afterward gave a name to his religion; and he rendered up the account of his meagre expenses to the honorable trustees of Georgia. He visited Fredrica often to preach to the settlers there. He studied the Indian language, still in hopes of going among them At times he slept upon the ground, and when morning came discovered his clothes to have been frozen to the earth, as well as his long abundant hair. Once he was nearly drowned in the icy river, but these were the ordinary experiences of early missionaries.

But now came the crisis of the human side of the story. Oglethorpe determined to hasten matters between Wesley and Miss Canston. Accordingly he made a dinner at his own house, and Crimaldi, his foreign servant, tampered with the Cypress wine, but whether by the General's direction or not was never quite clear to Mr. Wesley.

In the evening Sophia Canston was there, and the General had her sing for them some old love songs of England and Scotland, and snatches from the operas of Londan. She danced, too, and recited, and completely overwhelmed the pious youth with her beauty and accomplishments.

DISCOVERED HE WAS IN LOVE.

That night, under the palmetto trees near the Governor's house, with the dark-eyed, handsome girl beside him and with her entrancing voice in his ears; with the Cypress wine and Grimaldi's decoction hot in his blood, John Wesley became aware that he loved

The revelation was a shock to him, for he had been preaching celibacy since he was a small boy. He had felt himself wedded to the church, to his great faith and mission in life. The strife of spirit threw him into a fever.

Miss Canston did the only thing that a young lady in her state of mind could do. She nursed him, and he allowed her to. This circumstance was sufficient proof to their friends that marriage was certain. If more proof were needed, he raved of her in his delirium. Miss Canston brought her aunt to hear him, and between them they fancied him quite decided to marry Sophia. He asked her many times if she would or could marry him, "and if he should, indeed, marry her." He went through with the marriage ceremony of the Church of England for the benfit of imaginary couples who stood at his bedside. After his recovery Wesley's friends came to congratulate him on his engagement. But ever since his miraculous rescue from fire to his childhood he had been convinced that he had been singled out by his Maker for some special purpose, and now here he was prostrating himself before an earthly idol and forgetting his mission.

TOOK THE BISHOP'S ADVICE.

Alarmed for his soul he rushed to the Bishop and the Moravin mission-aries for advice. They had the same hard, unrelenting convictions which tormented Wesley, and they advised him to give up his idol and turn to his God. Wesley knew not what to do. He wandered in the forests praying aloud for light as to his walk before God. He knelt under the blooming grape vines, and shielded by the long gray moss from any living eye, sought wisdom and

That night he asked advice a second time of the elder.
"We have considered your case," said

the Bishop. "Will you abide by our Then the Bishop said: "We advise you to proceed no further in this mat-

"So be it!" said Wesley, and that was the end. Poor Sophia was heartbroken. Her relatives were incensed and compelled her to marry a Mr Williamson, though she begged Wesley to intercede in her behalf. Even after she married she wrote to Wesley, and cast pitiful glances at him until in his desperation one day he forebade her to attend Holy Communion. He explained this afterwards on technial grounds, but the tide had turned and the people of Georgia were against him.

CHARGED WITH SLANDER,

A charge of slander was instituted, but the assailants, knowing that they had small chance of success, delayed the trial from week to week until life in Georgia became unbearable. He made leave the colony But even in this the Canstons thwarted him. He was forbidden to leave the province.

He never went out that Sophia did not pass and repass him several times, and often she was known to look in up on him when he was at prayer in his own house.

During all these trials he continued to conduct his parish as usual, although he was a sort of prisoner at large. 6 o'clock one evening, the little flock gathered in the church for prayers. Wesley led as usual. Delamotte was there with the friends who still remained loyal. After the service Wesley was seen to return to his home. But the faithful Delamotte had planned an escape from his slow corture. Three faithful friends led the young clerical through the darkness to the pier. Their an Indian skiff bore him down the river. A sailing vessel was in waiting and soon John Wesley was leaving the land of his love forever.
