The St. Paul Would Not Slide.

The Tallow, Was Poor and Would not Melt .-People from Far and Near Who Had As. sembled to See the St. Paul Take Her First Dip Were Sadly Disappointed-For Two Hours They Tried to Start Her.

PHILADELPHIA, March 25 .- By reason of the poor quality of tallow supplied to be used upon the ways, 25,000 people were disappointed to day in their expectation of seeing the Inter-national Navigation company's second new steamship—the St. Paul—launch-ed, as the big hull stuck stubbornly and despite every effort could not be started from the docks into the river.

After two hours hard work in the efcompany, reluctantly announced to the people upon the guests' stand that the attempt to launch the St. Paul, would be abandoned to day, as even if they could start her by continuing at much could start her by continuing at work sensitive plant. with hydraulic jacks and tugs, the "The sensitive plant," says Mr. Bal-water to float the ship in safety. But two similar experiences have ever been undergone by the Cramps, and the officers and directors who were present to-day were much chagrined at the failure, although it was one that it was impossible to foresee.

After the dispersion of the crowd the shorings were replaced beneath the bilge and side of the St. Paul.

Mr. Cramp made an inspection of the ways and found that the sole diffitallow was placed upon the ways on has been cold it is possible that it may have become too solidly frozen. It is not yet definitely decided when another effort to launch the St. Paul will be made, but it will be in about two weeks. This delay is in no way due to any mechanical work that it is necessary to do in regard to the launching of the steamship, but it is necessary to wait for the full flood tide, and there will not be one before that time. When the St. Paul is launched it is improbable that as large a crowd of as many people will be invited to be present as there was to-day, but the Cramps do not propse to allow to-day's failure to send the vessel off the stocks without ceremonies of some kind.

Mr. Ballou had once a curious experience with this plant in Cuba. He was the guest of an English physician at Cereto, and while sitting one day on the broad piazza of the bungalow, he spoke of the thrifty sensitive plant which was close at hand.
