Where Are the Birds?

From many parts of the country there comes a complaint of the absence this spring of the song birds which are always such welcome visitors. Just when the blossoms are beginning to show themselves on the apple trees there is nothing more delightful than to hear the melody of the robin, the thrush and the other birds which make morning and evening music. Even the birds which have only a few twittering notes add a charm to the opening beauty of spring, and some of the most delightful memories of life are associated with these bright and cheery visitors.

In a few days from now nearly all the birds which leave us in winter for a milder climate ought to be here, and yet but few of them have returned to their usual haunts. It is true that the winter was a very hard one, but there have been others equally as severe without any noticeable diminution in the number of spring birds, and the reason for their scarcity must lie deeper. It is a common thing to attribute it to the reckless slaughter of gayly plumaged birds, the feathers of which are to deck the head-gear of beauty. There is no doubt that much destruction has been wrought in this way, and that the effort to create a more humane sentiment in the matter has not met with much encouragement.

But women are not the only ones who can be accused of having a share in this slaughter of the innocents. Men are not altogether blameless. They do not seek themselves with feathers, but they have other tastes to gratify, and for which some one must suffer. It is said that during last winter all kinds of birds were ruthlessly shot, and even netted in the Southern States, many of them not to adorn some piece of feminine head-gear, but to tickle the palates of gourmands, who delight in "a large cold bottle and a small hot bird."

Year after year a war of extermination has been waged by the "shot hunter" on the bobolinks. That bird, the song of which is the incarnation of merrily, rollicking melody, is the "rice-bird" in the Carolinas and the "reed-bird" along the Delaware, the Susquehanna and the Potomac, and both North and South it is being annually shot down in thousands for the delectation of epicures. So it is with many other things large and small that have helped to make our country picturesque. The buffalo is almost extinct, the wild turkey is being thinned down, the grand old forests full of "those green-robed senators of mighty woods—tall oaks, branch-chimney to the earnest stars"—have been hewn down. The wild pig is in many places a thing of the past, and when some rare specimen of the feathered tribe is met with it is at once shot down, stuffed and placed in the cabinet of the ornithologist, who writes an essay upon it. If our song birds are also to go what will there be left for us?

A Triple Instrument.

Telephone, Telegraph and Typewriter in One Machine.

A number of industrial citizens are organizing a company in Pittsburg to supply a system of communication which will combine the advantages of the telegraph, telephone and type-writer. The plan has got beyond the experimental stage, and is not only in actual business operation in other places, but the machine can now be seen in Pittsburg doing all that is claimed for them. The system is the property of the United States Planting Telegraph company.

The machinery consists of a one horse dynamo of 500 volts, and two generators of one-half horse power each, and of 110 volts. The printing instruments are all similar, and resemble a combination of a type-writer with a telegraph instrument. By operating the keys, 30 in number, the message is printed on the telegraph tape, both on the sending and receiving instruments; there are also attachable instruments by which the messages are printed on pages instead of tape. They will print about 30 words a minute. The types are set on a wheel in a printing machine. The pressing of the keys on that machine creates a sufficient current to operate the curious instrument called the alternator and cause its ratchets to move a more or less distance, and this revolves the wheel with the types to the proper point.

Each subscriber can call any other and print his message on the latter's instrument, whether he is present or not. This obviates one of the great annoyances of the telephone—that of the person for whom the message is intended being "not in." The same single wire system used by telegraph companies is employed in this system. The messages are secret. They cannot be read by sound nor received either by the central office or any other subscriber than the one they are intended for. Every subscriber is his own operator, and retains a copy of his message. There is none of the delay frequent in the use of the telephone by reason of inability to understand what is being said, the message being printed out in full before the receiver's eyes. There are no batteries required in the subscriber's offices.

Every Villager Burned Out.

Buffalo, N. Y., May 11—Every house in the village of Oakfield, Genesee county, was destroyed by fire between 12.30 and 3.30 this morning, and the refugees are encamped in the neighboring fields. Among the buildings destroyed are Chamberlain's block, dry goods and grocery store; Harris & Chapin's hardware store; Weaver's furniture and undertaking establishment; H. C. Martin's dry goods and grocery store; the Arnold Hotel, the Barnes House, Odd Fellows' Hall, Dr. Tugtli's drug store and a number of dwellings. The loss will be about $75,000.

Water and Its Cost.

Some Facts Concerning Water Works and Supply of the United States.

The first works for a public supply of water in the United States were built at the city of Boston in the year 1652, and nothing further was done in that direction for more than 100 years. At the present time, for not less than 25,000,000 of Americans the question of water supply presents no difficulties. For domestic use, for business purposes, or for fire protection, an abundant supply is to be had at the turning of a valve. Not only is the supply abundant, in most cases, but the use of it reaches extravagant figures. In the year 1894 Chicago used 238,000,000 gallons of water per day, and Philadelphia 197,000,000 gallons. All this water was pumped from the source of supply to reservoirs or standpipes for distribution. The city of New York has a gravity supply of water, and uses 183,000,000 gallons per day. On the basis of these figures, it appears that every man, woman and child in Philadelphia requires 160 gallons of water for daily use; in Chicago about 150 gallons and in New York about 95 gallons. In some of the smaller cities the per capita consumption reaches even higher figures. Thus Buffalo is on record, in 1890, with a daily consumption per capita of 136 gallons, and Allegheny, Pa., at the same time with a daily per capita of 238 gallons. If these figures are compared with the per capita consumption of the city of London—40 gallons per day—it will be seen what lavish use is made of water in American cities, and some conception will be formed of the great system of works required to supply such demands.

Sleepy Grass.

It Grows in Mexico and Has a Strange Effect Upon Cattle.

In some parts of New Mexico there grows a grass which produces a somniferous effect on the animals that graze upon it. Horses, after eating the grass, in nearly all cases sleep standing, while cows and sheep almost invariably lie down. It has occasionally happened that travelers have stopped to allow horses to feed in places where the grass grows pretty thickly, and the animals have had time to eat a considerable quantity before its effects manifested themselves. In such cases horses have gone to sleep on the road, and it is hard to arouse them. The effect of the grass passes off in an hour or two, and no bad results have ever been noticed on account of it. Cattle on the ranches frequently come upon patches of this grass, where they feed for perhaps half an hour, and then fall asleep for an hour or more, when they wake up and start feeding again. The programme is repeated perhaps a dozen times, until either obliges them to go to water. Whether, like the poppy, the grass contains opium, or whether its sleep-producing property is due to some other substance, has not been determined.

Strawberry Sherbet.

Take a quart of fresh, ripe strawberries, three pints of water, the juice of one lemon, one tablespoonful of orange-flower water, three-fourths of a pound of white sugar. Crush the strawberries to a smooth paste, add the rest of the ingredients, except the sugar, and let the mixture stand three hours; then strain the liquor through a cloth over the sugar, squeezing the cloth hard. Now stir until the sugar is dissolved, strain again, and freeze it. In making sherbets or water ices, boil the water and sugar, but do not heat the fruit juice, as both color and flavor will be injured.
