Abolish the Tramp.

There is great danger the tramp may become a permanent institution in America, just as the beggar class in England and some of the continental countries is a distinct element of the population, and the occupation goes on, in regular descent, so that generations have piled it and take no more shame than if it was honest labor. Children are trained to regard it as the work of their lives. It has its organization and laws and regulations very much as reputable occupations have. In some parts of our country the tramp is a terror to women and children, and their predatory operations are not only a nuisance, but a loss to the farmers and suburban residents, that counts up in the course of the tramp season. The tramps first made their appearance in these states in numbers that marked them as a distinct and growing class of the population during the panic of 1873. They were born to us during an era of high protection.

Massachusetts has been so overrun with tramps that a legislative committee has recently investigated their condition and numbers, and what measures could be adopted to get rid of them. This committee finds that they exist by the unwise bounty of the people past whose homes they tramp and levy contributions, and that instead of being coddled or having the dogs set on them they should be taken into custody wherever found and handed over to the law, and by it compelled to work for the bread they eat. The plan of the commission is both elaborate and heroic. It provides for the creation of a board of trustees, who are to purchase 2,000 acres of land, at a cost of not over $50,000, in the northern part of the state, mainly wild or unimproved, but suitable after proper clearing or drainage, for agricultural purposes or mining. Inexpensive houses are to be erected on the land, also farm buildings, barns, and stables; roads are to be laid out over it and drains constructed, and all male tramps between the ages of 17 and 30 are to be put on the place and kept at work clearing it, planting and reaping crops, and earning their living. If any tramps voluntarily ask to be sent to the farm, their request will be granted for one year; but if apprehended as tramps they are to be sentenced to the farm by court or police magistrates for two years, or until "reformed."

If this plan should be carried out the tramp will be driven from Massachusetts to other pastures and more agreeable laws. But the state will perform an important service to all other communities by showing a way by which the tramp nuisance can be stamped out. The most vigorous measures now adopted against them are the cartoons of the humorous papers, but the disease has passed the laughing phase.

Another War Cloud.

The relations between Sweden and Norway have now become so strained that on Friday last the Swedish Chamber of Deputies voted $4,000,000 to the government to supply its immediate wants in the event of war breaking out, or to send Swedish troops to Norway in case of a revolution there. It was also on that day that the people of Norway celebrated the eighty-first anniversary of the adoption of the free Constitution of May 17, 1814; an event which marked an epoch in European history. In that year Norway revolted against Denmark, which had sought to reduce her to the condition of a province, and the separate Constitution was adopted. But when the Napoleonic wars came to an end, Bernadotte, King of Sweden, demanded that he should have Norway under his rule in return for his aid to the allies in overcoming Napoleon. From that day to this, Norway has been under the dominion of Sweden, but with an independent Parliament and a Ministry for its local government. Norway has had many struggles with the King of Sweden during that time, growing out of the divergent commercial interests of the two countries, as well as their natural difference in temperance and national aims. Only recently King Oscar refused to accept as Premier of Norway the leader of the Radical party, which alone has a majority in Parliament, his objections being more personal than political. At one time his attitude towards Norway was a very sensible one, and the change in it is charged by the Russian press to be due to the influence of Germany, whose interest it is to have the Scandinavian peninsula, as well as the Norwegian frontiers of Russia, under the firm control of a devoted ally.

The sympathy which Germany is showing for Sweden has assumed such a phase that the Berlin newspapers are discussing the possibility of a German squadron having to be sent into the Bay of Christiania, while the St. Petersburg press is talking of the probability of a Russian fleet being dispatched to Stockholm. Sweden undoubtedly fears that if she consented to a separation with Norway, Russia would soon acquire a powerful influence over that country; while, on the other hand, Norway longs for complete independence, being convinced that Sweden is anxious for an offensive and defensive alliance, as well as a commercial union with Germany. It is now evident that all possibility of a friendly understanding between Norway and Sweden is at an end, and this last move at Stockholm is a very significant one. The Swedish army has a nominal strength of 40,000 men, while that of Norway numbers 30,000 men. The navies of the two countries are small and are maintained solely for coast defense, so that war could not be waged on a great scale. The gravity of the situation lies, however, in the fact that the quarrel of the two little kingdoms is likely to develop dangerous friction between Germany and Russia.

A Sad Case.

"Please give me something, sir. I am much to be pitted." "Why, what's the matter?" asked a benevolent old gentleman. "I had a blind child—he was my only means of subsistence—and the poor boy has recovered his sight."

Eaters of Arsenic.

The Strange Custom That Prevails Among Styrian Peasants.

For many years the habit of arsenic eating by the people of Styria, a duchy of Austria, has been known to the scientific world. Travelers who have passed through Styria have come back with reports on this practice, saying that the people of that country were accustomed to taking a white mineral, which was arsenic.

That this was so was denied by many, who, according to the Washington "Star," said that the mineral was nothing more or less than chalk. There was much discussion over the matter, and the subject proved itself of such interest and importance that scientific societies took the question up and investigated it, and it was pretty well proven that such a usage did exist, but not so widespread as was generally supposed. Many physicians have gone there simply to investigate this practice of arsenic eating. While some of them have found out much about the custom, others have come away no wiser than they went, owing to the secrecy which exists among those addicted to the habit. As it is against the law to obtain arsenic without a prescription from a physician, of course those who do so are anxious to keep it quiet. There are also found among the peasants of Salzburg and Tyrol those who follow the same practice. In these regions several arsenic works are situated, and the only way the employes can stand the poisonous fumes is by taking the drug internally, at first in small doses and gradually increasing the dose until the system tolerates large quantities.

It is probably from these arsenic workers that the custom spread to others, principally to the lower classes, as hunters, wood cleavers, stable grooms and charcoal burners. All forms of arsenic are taken—the pure arsenic, the red sulphide and the yellow sulphide, or orpiment. The arsenic eaters begin with a dose about the size of a pin's head, and increase this amount gradually until they are taking a piece about the size of a pea.

The habit is generally begun at the age of 15 and continued up to the ages of 70 and 75. The users of hidri, as arsenic is known among the peasants, are generally long-lived people, but unless at the age of 50 they commence to gradually discontinue the use of it, they invariably die a sudden death, and the fact that death occasionally occurs from hidri-eating shows that even the Styrians are not invincible to the deadly effects of this drug.

The reason for this custom is asserted by some to be for their personal appearance, but the fact that the habit exists principally among the male sex disproves this. It is said by the peasants themselves that it is done to make them strong and healthy, and they really are strong and healthy people. Enormous quantities of the drug are taken by some of them. In one well-authenticated case, the man, a manager of some arsenic works, took daily a dose of 23 grains, each dose large large enough to kill several men unaccustomed to its use. Another strange thing about this case is, the man began at first by taking three grains, an amount which we would consider decidedly dangerous. On several occasions he attempted to leave off taking the drug, but was made violently ill, only to recover on resuming his usual allowance.

Monkey Pockets.

I suppose you did not know that monkeys had pockets, save those in the little green coats organ-men sometimes compel them to wear. But that is a mistake; their real pockets are in their cheeks. The other evening, coming back from the sea by train, I travelled in the next compartment to a little bearded monkey and his master. The little creature's day's work was over, and perched upon the sill of the carriage window he produced his supper from those stowaway pockets of his, and commenced to munch it with great enjoyment. Several times the platform had to be cleared of the boys and girls who had come to see the little friend who had been amusing them all day, off on his journey. At length a porter, whose heart evidently was warm toward little folks, allowed them to slip in and remain. All the officials felt the attraction of that window, and the stoker, with smiles upon his grimy face, openly addressed the little monkey as "mate." Even the station master, as he passed, I noticed, cast a sly glance toward the monkey, although he could not, of course, be seen to join the crowd of admirers. A cheer was raised when the train was set in motion and the monkey glided slowly away from big and little spectators.

The Colonel's Triumphant Veracity.

"That snake, gentlemen, was at least ninety feet—"
"Ha, ha! Ho, ho! Rats! Scat! Come off, colonel! Give us a bigger one to begin the season with—"
"Yes, sah, it was ninety feet and it might be ninety-five—"
"Ach! Where's the Munchausen, De-Foe, Eli Perkins' Wiggins—"
"But it couldn't have been less'n ninety feet from—"
"From tip to tip of his wings! Hip! Whooray! Colonel's found the sea serpent, dragon and woolly horse, all combined—"
"No, sah, not from tip to tip, neither, sah! "
"Ninety feet from what, ther, colonel? "
"Why, sah, ninety feet from me, an' I was blamed cahful 'at he didn't get any closah, sah—"
"Come up, colonel, come up! "
As they were downing the last round one of the skeptics quietly asked: "Colonel, how long, really, was that snake? "
" 'Bout four feet, sah! "

The World of Women.

Weak, nervous, delicate, overworked women need a strength builder, a tonic for their nerves, and a cure for that awful internal trouble that is wearing out their lives. Thousands of women have found such in Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. Mrs. Christiana Beal, of Jonesport, Me., writes that her daughter had been a great sufferer from female trouble, and after repeated trials of doctor's prescriptions and other so-called cures, all of which gave no relief, she used Favorite Remedy and it permanently cured her.

If you have headache, uterine catarrh, irregular menstruation, leucorrhoea or irregular monthly periods, sickness incidental to change of life, or any of the attending evils that are present in female complaints, use Favorite Remedy; it will build up quickly the run down constitution, dispel those tired looks and feelings, restore the nervous system and permanently cure you. Our daughters grow up weak and delicate; mothers can avoid such conditions by giving them Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy.

A Grammarian.

Boys and girls who are studying grammar will appreciate the humor of the situation when, according to an English periodical, a flunky who was proud of his grammar, in announcing the arrival of a Mrs. Foot and her two daughters at a reception, bawled out: "Missus Foote and the two Miss Feet."—Harper's Young People.

"A country minister remarked to his wife Sunday noon: "There was a stranger in church this morning." "What did he look like?" asked the wife, who was a woman first and a minister's wife afterward. "I didn't see him." "Then how did you know there was a stranger there?" "I found a dollar bill in the contribution box."

"A WORD TO THE WISE IS SUFFICIENT."—I suffered terribly from roaring in my head during an attack of catarrh, and became very deaf, used Ely's Cream Balm and in three weeks could hear as well as ever.—A. E. Newman, Graling, Mich.

One of my children had a very bad discharge from the nose. Physicians prescribed without benefit. After using Ely's Cream Balm a short time the disease was cured.—O. A. Cary, Corning, N. Y. Price of Cream Balm is fifty cents.

Professor Alexander Graham Bell the inventor of the telephone, is verging toward 60, but is robust, almost, as a lad. His early ambition was to be a great composer and musician. His favorite laboratory hours are between 11 o'clock at night and 4 in the morning, and he thinks his best work is done near dawn.
