Democratic Watchman
Bellefonte, Pa., June 14, 1895.
Planting and Burning.
The five very dry days beginning with and succeeding Decoration Day created a condition in many of our wooded regions favorable to forest fires. At once the papers contained accounts of forest fires in Elk and McKean counties in this State, in which the immediate loss amounts to several millions of dollars in value, and the ultimate loss through the denudation of the hill sides is incalculable.
On April 27 despatches were published from many different points in the State reciting the fact that Arbor Day had been observed the day before and that many saplings had been planted by the school children and others for the retosing and adornment of their neighborhoods. This planting was not as general as it should have been. The date assigned was rather late for successful tree planting, but in many counties of the State no interest was taken in the day at all. At the same time that a few hopeful souls were endeavoring to do something, however little, toward restoring the forests of the State forest fires elsewhere were destroying rapidly a thousand fold more trees than will be planted in many Arbor Days. This awful destruction of square miles of valuable standing timber by a single fire running unchecked for days after a period of drought is the discouraging fact in the forestry question. Of what avail is it to attempt to restore before we cease to destroy?
These forest fires all have their origin in the carelessness, selfishness or viciousness of men. They can be checked and to a large extent prevented by watchfulness and the imposition of severe penalties on those who cause them. The fire wardens bill aimed to accomplish this, and though it involved no very great expense it, with all the other forestry bills, has failed. The Legislature did much to redeem itself in this regard by the passage of the bill establishing a Department of Agriculture, in which is securely anchored a Bureau of Forestry. The influence of this bureau will be constant and permanent. It will teach the people of Pennsylvania to put a just valuation on the forest wealth, to make judicious selection of trees for planting and plant them everywhere, line the road sides and the hill sides and cover the earth's nakedness, unless the space is needed for some more urgent use. When planted they must be cared for and where nature has planted them with liberal hand they need even greater care and watchfulness to prevent their destruction by fire.
The failure of the fire wardens bill is a great misfortune. It would be an unrelieved calamity did we not have a Bureau of Forestry to keep attention fixed on this vital need and give assurance that it will be supplied hereafter.
The Making of Mustard.
Interesting Facts About the Colman Industry in England.
Norwich, England, as a city owes its success to mustard. The commercial importance of the town was, we gather from an article in the English Illustrated, at one time declining very rapidly, but the manufacture of the condiment by the Messrs. Colman practically saved it. This industry employs more than 2200 men, women and children, and it is for the making of mustard that engines of many hundred horse-power, driving scores of different machines, are constantly kept going. Mr. Colman's works have a river frontage of the best part of a mile, and cover at least 25 acres of ground.
THE GROWING OF MUSTARD SEED.
Under the direction of Mr. J. J. Colman, M. P., the mustard seed has been grown on an increasing area of East Anglia. It is also grown in the neighborhood of Selby, in Yorkshire, and large quantities are imported from Holland. Two kinds of seed are used. "The brown seed has the pungency, and is more expensive; the white seed is almost tasteless, but by its capacity for fermentation, enables a little of the brown to 'go a long way.' It is by the judicious combination of the two varieties that the proper color of mustard is obtained."
Hens.
The following is a boy's composition of hens:
"Hens is curious animals—they don't have no nose, nor no teeth, nor no ears. They swallow their wittles whole and chew it up in their crops inside of 'em. The outside of their hens is generally put inter pillows and feather dusters. The inside of a hen is sometimes filled with marble and shirt buttons and such. A hen is very much smaller than a good many other animals, but they'll dig up more cabbage plants than anything that ain't a hen. Hens are very useful to lay eggs for plum-pudding. Skinny Bates eat so much plum-pudding once that it sent him into the colicery. Hens has got wings and can fly when they get scared. I cut Uncle Williams' hen's head off with a hatchet and it scared her to death. Hens sometimes make very fine spring chickens!"
"Teach the children to discern right from wrong. Teach them that if anything seems wrong to them they are not to do it, no matter if people do say it is proper, and that if it is right they must go on regardless of what people say. We are, doubtless, all familiar with households where the mother always asks, 'what will people say?' whenever a subject is brought up for consideration. Of course, a reasonable amount of respect ought to be paid to the rest of the world, and public opinion is often a healthful restraining power. But to take public opinion as a rule of action, and invariably be guided by it, shows a weakness and lack of will and reasoning power."

Saving the Colors.
From time immemorial the armies of every warlike people have set the highest value upon the standards they bore to battle. To guard one's own flag against capture is the pride, to capture the flag of one's enemy the ambition, of every valiant soldier. In consequence, in every war between peoples of good military record, feats of daring performed by color-bearers are honorably common. The civil war was full of such incident. Out of very many, two or three stand as especially noteworthy.
One occurred at Fredericksburg on the day when half the brigades of Meagher and Caldwell lay on the bloody slope leading up to the Confederate entrenchments. Among the assaulting regiments was the Fifth New Hampshire, and it lost 180 out of 300 men who made the charge. The survivors fell back sullenly behind a fence, within easy range of the Confederate rifle-pits. Just before reaching it the last of the color-guard was shot, and the flag fell in the open. A Captain, Perry, instantly ran out to rescue it, and, as he reached it, was shot through the heart; another Captain, Murray made the same attempt, and was also killed; and so was a third, Moore. Several private soldiers met a like fate. They were all killed close to the flag, and their dead bodies fell across one another. Taking advantage of this breast work, Lieutenant Nettleton crawled from behind the fence to the colors, and bore back the blood-won trophy.—Harper's Round Table.
A Confederate Monument.
It is Dedicated in Chicago on Memorial Day.
In one corner of Oak Woods cemetery, there have stood for years, many rows of short white stones, which mark the last resting places of 6,000 men who in the days between '61 and '65 wore the Confederate gray, and who far from their homes and friends sealed with their lives, their devotion to the "lost cause." Today there stands above these lowly stones, of white, a tall and beautiful monument, erected partly by the sons of the south and partly by men of the north.
On Decoration day, above those grass-grown mounds, the grizzled veterans of the Grand Army of the Republic and the white-haired warriors of the south, clasped hands and realized that war is over. The dedication of the Confederate monument marked such a blending or, rather, such an eradication of the two great sections as the nation has rarely seen before.

—There is no stopping the signs of business and industrial revival over the State, but the organs appear to have no knowledge about it. Here is the great Cambria Iron Company at Johnstown increasing wages ten per cent. The Pennsylvania Steel Company restoring the scale rates paid before the depression of 1895, the Cornwall iron ore mines working under a fifteen per cent. increase, the Keystone fittings and Reading Iron Company running operations in full under a wages addition, the Pencoyd Iron Works with orders booked ahead for two years and double turn the rule and the Scranton mills sharing in the wages increase of the day. All this in the last week and, as matters of news, the organs should be generous enough to size up to the opportunity of pushing a good thing along.
—The whippoorwill, lover of lonely spots and moonlight, is now crying to the moon. The much-abused word weird properly fits the note of the whippoorwill. Familiar as the syllables are in legend and story, many persons do not recognize them on first hearing the bird's call. Taken separately, the syllables suggest the rapid whetting of a scythe. The bird, with his soft gray-mixed plumage, large eyes, hairy mouth, and silent, mysterious flights, fits well with his cry. You hear him calling from some inky spot of shadows near where a flood of moonlight falls. Even wood wanderers seldom see the bird, and one may pass a whole summer in a region where whippoorwills call every night without once encountering one of the singers.
—It is said that there are in Kansas twenty well-built towns without a single inhabitant. Saratoga, in that State, has a $30,000 opera house, a large brick hotel, a $20,000 school-house and a number of fine business houses, and yet there is not a single person to claim that city as his home. At Fargo a herder and his family constitute the sole population of what was once an incorporated city.
—Mr. Charles C. Harrison, who has just been elected provost of the University of Pennsylvania, signalized the event by the gift of $500,000 in memory of his father, the late George Lieb Harrison, LL.D. This munificent fund is to be designated "The George L. Harrison Foundation for the Encouragement of Liberal Studies and the Advancement of Knowledge."

—An exchange speaks wisely in giving the following very sensible advice: "Drink nothing without seeing it, sign nothing without reading it, and make sure that it means nothing more than it says. Don't go to law unless you have nothing to lose; lawyers' houses are built of fools' heads. In any business never wade in water where you cannot see the bottom. Put no dependence on the label of a bag, and count money before you accept it. See the sack open before you buy what is in it, for he who trades in the dark asks to be cheated."
GOOD HEALTH—And a good appetite go hand in hand. With the loss of appetite, the system cannot long sustain itself. Thus the fortifications of good health are broken down and the system is liable to attacks of disease. It is in such cases that the medicinal powers of Hood's Sarsaparilla are clearly shown. Thousands who have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla testify to its great merits as a purifier of the blood, its powers to restore and sharpen the appetite and promote a healthy action of the digestive organs. Thus it is, not what we say but what Hood's Sarsaparilla does that tells the story and constitutes the strongest recommendation that can be urged for any medicine. Why not take Hood's Sarsaparilla now?
—Lime water is an important factor in the nursery, and no mother would neglect its use if she realized its effect on the bones and teeth of growing children. When placed in milk it adds a sweeter flavor, if no more than a teaspoonful is used to a tumblerful of milk. It may also be used for indigestion.
—"I have two little grand children who are teething this hot summer weather and are troubled with bowel complaint. I give them Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and it acts like a charm. I recommend it for children with bowel troubles. I was myself taken with a severe attack of bloody flux, with cramps and pains in my stomach, one-third of a bottle of this remedy cured me. Within twenty-four hours I was out of bed and doing my house work." Mrs. W. L. Dunagan, Bon-aqua, Hickman Co., Tenn. For sale by F. P. Green.
