Safety of the Atlantic.
 Less Danger on Trans-Atlantic Steamers Than in Walking Crooked Streets.
 Notwithstanding all the peril from fog and ice, and from the fury of cyclones and hurricanes, the steamers of the trans-Atlantic lines are so staunchly built and so capably handled that a man is less likely to meet with accidents on board one of them than he would be in walking the streets of a crowded city, writes a correspondent.
 Never before have so many passengers been carried as are now carried. The ships that were regarded as leviathans 15 or 16 years ago are as yachts compared with more recent additions to the various fleets. Scarcely more than ten years have elapsed since 16 knots was the maximum speed, now it is 20 knots, with the certainty of an almost immediate increase to 21 knots.
 The tonnage has been increased within the same period from a maximum of 5,000 to 10,500, and while ten years ago 200 cabin passengers were as many as any steamer could accommodate with a reasonable degree of comfort on one voyage, it is not uncommon now to find over 500 as the complement of one steamer.
 When steamers of 16 and 17 knots were built it was said that they were too large and too fast; and that they would surely come to grief, but experience has proved them to be as safe as any. In fact, those who are best qualified to know declare that the argumentation of speed promotes safety.
 That point was fully discussed by the captains of the principal lines not long ago, and the opinions expressed were almost unanimously in favor of the faster ships. They not only diminish the period of exposure to such dangers as there may be in the trans-Atlantic voyage, but from the superior power of their engines and boilers they are better fitted for overcoming these dangers. They are able to escape from areas of fog and storms sooner than slower vessels and are more easily handled in thick and heavy weather.
 From the rapidity with which they can be maneuvered, they can avoid collisions which would be inevitable under some conditions with slower ships; if a collision become unavoidable their impetus enables them to cut the obstructing vessel in two with comparatively little injury to themselves.
 It is not conceivable that the element of danger can ever be wholly eliminated from the navigation of the Atlantic; but notwithstanding the extent and difficulty of the traffic, and the size and speed of the ships which, flying to and fro in all kinds of weather, arrive in port at all seasons with a promptness and regularity quite equal to that of express trains on land, the number of accidents in proportion to the number of passengers is constantly diminishing.
The Manuscript Reader on a Newspaper
 Next to the exchange reader in the newspaper organization comes the man whose duty it is to receive manuscripts and examine them and prepare them for the press, to edit them, correct them, where the writer has made a little slip of rhetoric, to put the right word in or the right turn of the phrase, to clarify it all, to make the sentences clean. That is a hard job in the writing of a great many persons. They interject; they put substantives in parentheses. They do not begin and say the thing in its exact order, taking first the man and then what he did, and where he went, and then they mix it up and complicate it. The editor who examines the manuscript has to go through all these things and straighten them out and disentangle the facts that the writer has twisted up. And then he must correct the punctuation, mark the paragraphs where one idea is finished and a new idea begins.
 He also receives the correspondence. Letters from all over the world go into his hands. You will get a letter from Madagascar perhaps. Ought it to be published? There is a lot of news in it perhaps that is of no interest in New York or in Schenectady. He has got to determine whether it is worth while to put that in or to leave it out, although you may have to pay for it and not use it. Masses of matter are paid for in a large newspaper office that are never used. So you see, he is a very important functionary, and it requires a great deal of knowledge, a great deal of judgment, a great deal of literary cultivation, to be able to fill that position.—Charles A. Dana in McClure's Magazine.

Hastings Wins the Case.
 A Verdict Rendered for Three Thousand Dollars It Being Understood That It Was Vindictive, Not Cash, the Governor Was Seeking—An Understanding Reached Between the Parties to the Suit.
 JOHNSTOWN, June 21.—Governor Hastings to-day got a verdict for $3,000 against City Solicitor Francis Joseph O'Connor, of this city, for slander. The whole case was disposed of in about five hours and it was devoid of any sensational interest.
 Yesterday there were rumors that the action of Governor Hastings against the Johnstown attorney would not come to trial and there was talk of an amicable arrangement outside of court and today's proceedings showed that the rumors were not entirely without foundation, although the case was actually called and the prosecution brought in a lot of testimony in vindication of the complainant.
 It is now understood that a practical understanding had been reached and that Governor Hastings did not want anything more than a vindication. This he got in the verdict which the jury returned at six o'clock this evening without leaving the box.
 —The "Union Signal," of Chicago, organ of the Women's Christian Temperance union, urges the women of the Methodist Episcopal church to send to that office their suggestions, plans and thoughts as to the measures that ought to be taken by them in case women delegates shall not be admitted into the next Methodist general conference.

On June 20, 1837, Queen Victoria ascended the throne of England, succeeding her uncle, King William IV. Her reign of fifty-eight years surpasses in length that of any other sovereign of England, with the exception of George III., and, properly speaking, his is not an exception, during the last years of his life the kingdom was under a regent. The nominal sway of George III. covered more than fifty-nine years, but as he died in 1830 and the regency began Feb. 5, 1811, it will be seen that Victoria has far surpassed her grandfather in the length of her personal control. Next to her comes Henry III., of the house of Plantagenet, who began to reign in 1216, as a lad, and continued on the throne fifty-six years, dying at the age of 65.
 Of reigning sovereigns of Europe there is but one older, King Christian IX., who was born April 8, 1818, or a little more than a year before Queen Victoria, but he became King only in November, 1863, when she had already been reigning more than a quarter of a century. She has, in fact, been far longer on the throne than any other European monarch now living, next to her in length of reign coming Emperor Francis Joseph, who ascended the throne of Austria in 1848, more than eleven years after the accession of Victoria.
 —Wool prices have fallen to their present low level because the wool supply has increased. From 1884 to 1893 the product of clothing wool rose from 950,000,000 pounds of clean wool to 1,350,000,000 pounds, or 19.4 per cent. In the same time the population consuming this wool rose only 9.5 per cent. In four years past, since 1891, the output of all wools has risen from 2,456,773,000 pounds to 5,700,000,000 pounds, or 10 per cent. Population has not grown over 4 per cent. Under these circumstances price can only rise when consumption advances. In cotton this advance has taken place because a prodigious number of new uses have appeared; but with wool use is limited and prices show no tendency to advance as has wheat, partly under increased consumption and partly under a reduced yield.
 —California fruit of all kinds should be plentiful in the east this year. The season has been good for almost all kinds of fruit thus far, and the increase in the area of cultivation is notable. No less than 422,565 pounds of cherries and 30,000 pounds of dried apricots and prunes were shipped east from the one station of San Jose during the last week of May. The cherry crop of Santa Clara county this year will exceed $9,000,000 pounds, an increase of two million pounds over last year. Some of the lands in San Bernardino county, which a few years ago was listed on the surveys as "desert land," are this year yielding from $325 to $400 per acre in almonds.
 —"Yes, sir," said the long haired boarder, "I am fully satisfied in my own mind that woman should be vested with all the privileges of man."
 "I don't see why she shouldn't be vested," chipped in the cheerful idiot. "She has been coated the same as man, and if this bicycle business keeps on she will be trouts."
 The dinner bell rang, and in the mad rush ensuing the rest of the cheerful idiot's speech hit the empty air.
 —"In the life to come," shouted the evangelist, "there will be no marrying or giving in marriage."
 Those who were sitting near the Chicago woman heard a low cry of horror as she rose from her seat.
 "In that event," she remarked to the usher, as she left the church, "I've got no time to be monkeying here."
 —The only man living to-day of the eighteen, who, with John Brown, of Ossawatimie, struck the blow at Harper's Ferry, is Jason Brown, who resides at Pasadena, Cal., and he is older than John Brown, Jr., who died recently, at the age of 75, in his home, on Fort-in-Bay Island.
 The most wonderful cliff dwellings in the United States are those of the Mancos, in a southern Colorado canon. Some of the caves are five or six hundred feet from the bottom of the perpendicular sides of the canon walls, and how their occupants gained ingress is a mystery.
 A triumph of art over nature was illustrated recently when a well known English artist made a painting of some old beech trees in a Kent pasture, which he sold for $1400. The owner of the pasture sold his land and the trees together for $500, and called it a good sale at that.
 —She—I can't help thinking I have seen your portrait in the newspapers somewhere.
 He—Oh, no doubt; it's often been published.
 She—Then I am not mistaken. What were you cured of?
 —Dinwiddle—"I hear that Van Braam was overcome by the heat yesterday."
 Hiland—"It might be called that. He asked Singis if it was hot enough for him, and Singis knocked him down."
 —She—You must ask father for his consent.

 Why not?
 He's too close. He never gave anything to anybody in his life.
 —Mrs. Blues—Do you have to treat your cook as if she were a member of the family?
 Mrs. Gray—Goodness, no! We have to be very kind and polite to her.

 —No man ever accuses a pretty woman of having too long a tongue.

A Stubborn Woman.
 We read that when Jove had the ordering of mundane affairs, he promised to send rain on any day that would be agreed upon by the whole world. It was reported at last that they were all ready for rain at a certain date, except one old woman who wanted to make soap on that particular day. Women are often accused of being capricious and whimsical; but there is one point on which they all will agree—the desirability of being well, and looking well. Every woman, be she young or old, always wants to look her best; and in order to do this, it is necessary to attain that state of health which will impart a sparkle to her eye, a bloom to her cheek, and grace and symmetry to her entire form. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a panacea for all chronic "weakness" and derangements of function peculiar to the sex, and is beyond all comparison the great healer of women.
 —Summer is not a sure thing even yet in some parts of this big and varied land. In the northeast corner of Washington two weeks ago snow shovellers were working hard in an effort to open up the Slate Creek road, through the mountains, over which the snow was still thirteen feet deep.

 Hood's pills cure constipation by restoring peristaltic action of the alimentary canal.
 —A woman in Atlanta, Ga., is suing a local druggist for $1,000 damages because when she sent to his store for a certain corn cure he sent a substitute, which she claims, "poisoned her feet, made her suffer from anxiety, and brought her many weary nights."
 "THERE IS DANGER IN DELAY."

 —The Wilson bill which is doing so much for the country in other ways is going to give it a more uproarious Fourth of July than it has known for years, the reduced tariff on fire crackers having resulted in heavy importations which assure lower prices.
