Uncle Dick Oglesby.

Two Characteristic Stories of the Genial Ex-Governor of Illinois.

I think it was during the Cleveland-Blaire campaign that ex-Governor Oglesby, of Illinois, "Uncle Dick," as he is familiarly known, first made a stay of any length in New York.

He and a companion had a sumptuous luncheon, ordered of course by the introducer, who wound up by inviting the governor to smoke. The clerk at the cigar counter handed out some fine Havana cigars. Uncle Dick was about to take one, when some thought arrested his hand, and he asked: "What's the price of those?"

"Twenty-five cents," was the reply. "Holy smoke!" ejaculated the governor. "Put 'em back! Put 'em back, quick!"

"But, governor, this is my treat," said his friend. "Daren't do it! Daren't do it! Put 'em back!"

"Yes, but governor—" "I tell you I daren't do it. Why, man, if they should ever find out in Illinois that I smoked a 25 cent cigar in New York, they'd turn me out of the club and would ruin me politically forever. Daren't do it! Ten cent cigars are good enough for me in New York and 5 cents at home."

Uncle Dick always prided himself on his success in campaigning when called upon to reach a man's vote through his family pride.

On one of his tours he passed through a country town in Illinois, where he came suddenly upon a charming group—a comely woman with a bevy of little ones about her—in a garden with a high picket fence in front of it. He stopped short, then advanced and leaned over the front gate.

"Madam," said he in his most ingratiating way, "may I kiss these beautiful children?"

"Certainly, sir," the lady answered demurely, "there is no possible objection."

"They are lovely darlings," said Uncle Dick, after he had finished the eldest. "I have seldom seen more beautiful babies. Are they all yours, marm?"

"Of course they are—the sweet little treasures. From whom else, marm, could they have inherited these lisp, curls, these rosy cheeks, these profuse curls, these comely figures and these musical voices?"

The lady continued blushing. "By the way, marm," said Uncle Dick, "may I bother you to tell me an estimable husband that Richard J. Oglesby, Republican candidate for governor, called upon him this evening?"

"Alas, sir," quoth the lady, "I have no husband."

"But these children, madam—you surely are not a widow?"

"I feared you were mistaken, sir, when you first came up. This is an orphan asylum!"

"Lady vs. Woman." Within a few years there has been a marked shrinkage in the newspaper use of the word "lady." We notice in these times that "many women," instead of "many ladies," were somewhere, "that the streets were thronged with women rather than with ladies, or that a woman rode on horseback were formerly a lady. The women have taken the place of the ladies in the dance, and the woman doctor has superseded the lady doctor; and we hear more frequently of the women than of the ladies who frequent the theatres, churches, and stores. There are a number of able and successful women politicians, women writers and bicyclists.

The change does not mean that women are less "ladylike" than they used to be, but perhaps that they are more womanly. It does not mean that men are less polite than they formerly were, or that chivalrous manners have fallen into utter decay, or that the gentleman, as well as the lady is a back number. It would be a cause of profound regret if the change had any such significance.

The Sun from which the foregoing was taken attributes the "shrinkage" in the use of the word "lady" to the growth of equality between the sexes. Be it for this reason or any other, it is something that must please all sensible people. The word "lady," for a great while, has been run into the ground, and many of its uses and applications are vulgar and disgusting. "Lady saleswoman," for instance, and "Sales-lady," and "a lady wishes to take in washing," are almost past endurance. Originally the word "lady" meant a "feeder of the poor,"—loef dian in Saxon, a very good application of the word, and, in this sense, we hope it may never run out. We agree with the Sun, that a hundred years ago it would hardly have been safe to call a lady a woman in some circles, but since then the world has moved in this sense and many others. Now we are pleased to say no more honored name can be applied to a member of the female sex than woman; and, when she is a "womanly woman," we have reached the acme of honored names. The word woman has attained a new and greater dignity than ever before. The woman, the right kind of woman, is all a lady is, or can be, and more too.

The capitalists of North Adams, Mass., at a meeting held recently decided to build a million-dollar cotton mill, which is to be the largest in the United States. The starting of such an enterprise in such a locality has a twofold significance. It shows that New England need have no fear of losing her supremacy as a textile center, and it makes plain that even the renewed confidence on the part of capital in the fact that the prosperity induced by a wise tariff system has come for a long stay—stay enough, at least, to be known as an era in the financial history of the country.

—Alter it's all over how much we love the dentist who tells us that it was the worst tooth he ever pulled.

The New and the Old Epoch.

During the four years of the McKinley tariff the revenues of the Government fell $120,000,000 short of the expenditures, as is shown by the official records. This is the source of the deficit with which the Secretary of the Treasury has been obliged to wrestle, and which workmen of calamity, in their recklessness and mendacity, continue to attribute to the Democratic tariff. But if the tariff mongers have been able to practice successfully upon popular credulity in regard to the Treasury deficit and the causes of business depression in the past, they cannot do anybody concerning the present situation. The prosperity of nearly every department of American industry speaks for itself in a language which the most ingenious partisan manipulation of trade returns can no longer prevent. If the Democratic defeats of last year were due to the new tariff, so much the worse for the unscrupulous partisans who shamefully misrepresented and slander that measure. The people have found them out, while the Republican party has a barren victory as the result of a conspiracy of calamity shrieking.

The last ten months have afforded daily proofs of the great reform accomplished by the new tariff. Almost down to this hour the calamity organs have predicted the ruin of trade and industry, the continued reduction of wages, the starvation of workmen, and the complete bankruptcy of the public Treasury. In the midst of their ululations the very reverse of all their prophecies of evil has come about. Everywhere the greatest activity reigns in mills and workshops. New factories are in process of erection, and the capacity of old factories has been enlarged. Every day the telegraph announces advances of wages, and these advances, too, in the very industries that the new tariff had doomed to destruction in calamity howling predictions. In foreign markets the demand for the products of American manufacturing skill and ingenuity is steadily increasing. American woolen fabrics have penetrated to the very centre of the English woolen industry. Baldwin's locomotives are whistling already on the Great Siberian Railroad of Russia; Distons' saws are humming in the great forests of New Zealand; and for electric power are shipped from America planning mills to Brazil and Argentina; American iron ore is sent to Germany, and American coal to Newcastle; the increasing receipts of the railroads of the country indicate the growing activity of internal trade; the farmers are receiving higher prices for their products, and the wages of American workmen have greater purchasing power since the brutal tax of the McKinley tariff has been reduced or repealed.

While relieving industry and commerce, the new tariff has already indicated in ten months a revenue capacity equal to the average of the McKinley act, with all its iniquities and extortions. Under the new auspices prosperity promises to march onward with mighty strides, in face of all the dismal predictions of calamity. In this situation the Democracy may contemplate with complacency, if not with absolute indifference, the Republican threats of reviving the dead issue of McKinleyism as the means of escaping from the live issue of honest money. All that remains for the Democracy to do is to unite once more upon the Jacksonian platform of sound currency, and the tariff mongers and cheap money swindlers will be taught a lesson in 1896 that will never be forgotten in the political history of this country.

It is becoming more and more apparent that the calamity howlers and the free silver lunatics have begun their campaigns against the Democracy a year too soon. Before the meeting of the National Convention, twelve months hence, the Democracy will present a united and resolute front to all their foes. There is a kind Providence that looks out for the Democratic party; for it is the party of the people, with their honest impulses, and with their occasional faults and failures.

—Read the WATCHMAN.

—To such an extent has the horse been superseded by electric and cable railroads, the bicycle, and other new methods of transportation, that the question of what to do with the thousands of horses on the ranches in the West and Northwest has become a serious problem. Large bands of horses in Oregon and Washington now have almost no value. The railroads refuse to ship them East unless the freight is paid in advance, fearing that the animals will not bring enough to pay the freight bills, and it is costing the owners more to keep and tend the horses than they are worth. Horses that a few years ago were worth $50 a piece have lately been sold for $2 to $5 each. A manufactory for utilizing the now useless horses by turning them into oil, glue, and fertilizing material, extracting the tallow, and in various ways making use of the hair and skin, is actually being built near Portland, Ore., a corporation with considerable capital having been organized for the business. This company has recently bought between 5,000 and 6,000 horses at an average of $3 a head, and it will be easy, it is said, to get as many more as needed at the same price. One band of 1,100 horses, grazing in Oregon and Idaho was bought for $2,000. The fertilizer is to go to Hawaii for use on the sugar plantations. The concern will not go into the business of canning horse meat for human consumption either here or in Europe. Some sentimental objections have been made to the enterprise, but those interested declare they are doing a public good in ridding the country of the now useless horses.

—J. Douglass Perkins is a prominent business man of Coatesville. He is the owner of a feed and grain warehouse in that town, and for about a year past his place has been overrun with rats. Last week he decided to try a unique plan to clear his warehouse of the rodents, which have become so numerous. He set a live trap, and the next day he had five large rats. Of this number he killed three and the other two he put belts on and then loosened them in the warehouse, where they had been caught. It has been successfully tried as a means of driving away all the rats by causing great consternation among them at the sight and contact of those with bells. This is a novel means of exterminating rats, and the owner of the house hopes that his scarecrow theory may prove effective.

JUST WHAT'S NEEDED.—Exclaims thousands of people who have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla at this season of the year, and who have noted the success of the medicine in giving them relief from that tired feeling, waning appetite and state of extreme exhaustion after the close confinement of a long winter season, the busy time attendant upon a large and pressing business during the spring months and with vacation time yet some weeks distant. It is then that the building-up powers of Hood's Sarsaparilla are fully appreciated. It seems perfectly adapted to overcome that prostration caused by change of season, climate or life, and while it tones the blood, purifies the system, it revitalizes the blood.

A genius has devised for sleeping cars a system of beds made of rubber bags, which are to be stretched over steel frames and inflated with hot air from the locomotive. In fifteen minutes an entire car can be made ready for the night. What a cinch! such a convenience in a boarding house would be for the hired girl.

USE IT IN TIME.—Catarrh starts in the nasal passages, affecting eyes, ears and throat, and is in fact, the great enemy of the mucous membrane. Neglected colds in the head almost invariably precede catarrh, causing an excessive flow of mucus, and if the mucous discharge becomes interrupted the disagreeable results of catarrh will follow, such as bad breath, severe pain across forehead and about the eyes, a roaring and buzzing sound in the ears and oftentimes a very offensive discharge. Ely's Cream Balm is the acknowledged cure for these troubles.

The largest check ever drawn on a bank was one for $12,278,750. It was drawn by G. W. Young in favor of Thomas A. McEntyre, of Brooklyn, New York.

Said Nature to Physic "what pity that we Who out to be friends should so seldom agree. My strength is exhausted, my energy dead, From the roll of blue pills discharged at my head."

It is not strange that Nature should remonstrate against the use of those gripping and drastic blue marble, with which old fogies of medicine persist in dosing their patients. They are not only revolting in appearance, but oftentimes actually injurious in their effects. Yet nature needs some help in overcoming obstinate dyspepsia, constipation and liver troubles, and fortunately she has a very valuable assistant in Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, which, small as bird seed and sugar-coated, never fail to act effectively though soothingly.
