The Southern Exposition

Atlanta, where the southern exposition is to be held, is sometimes called the Yankee City of the South, but the fact is its progress, push and energy, although it looks a great deal like a flourishing western town, are of the, New South. But few landmarks of the days "befør' de wah" remain, for the reason that General Sherman, when he started on his march to the sea, left little of the old Atlanta standing. The men of Atlanta were left to rebuild the little city of which they had been so proud. When peace came, its splendid at 10 o'clock a. m. All that certain lot or piece of land situate, lying and being in the Boro. of Philipsburg county of Centre and state of Penn'a bounded and described as follows: Beginning at the corner of north Centre and Spruce street; thence along said north Centre street north 33° west 66 feet to a post, thence north 57° east 120 feet to a post; thence south 33° east 66 feet to a post on Spruce street; thence along same south 57° west 120 feet to the place of beginning, being one half of lot No. 117 on the Town plot, and which above described, there-ou erected a large two story frame dwelling house and other necessary out-buildings. Seized taken in execution and to be sold as the property of Ruth A Jones. ALSO geographical position, which had gained for it the name of "the Gate City of the South," attracted enterprises from all parts of the country, as well as from foreign lands. Still, says a writer in the "Chautauquan" for August, a northerner long resident in Atlanta, "the credit for the building of Atlanta is due to men of the South, and Atlanta, though a Yankee city in her appearance, derives her greatness from the push and energy of the men of the South." And these are the men who have devised and carried forward the exposition that is to open on the 18th of September and close with the last days of 1895.

The visitor will miss in Atlanta many of the striking and interesting characteristics of the older southern cities, but he will be within easy access of the "old South." It is one of the healthies cities of the continent. Only two other cities of the country have an altitude equal to that of Atlanta, which is 1,100 feet above the sea level. Her summers are not so hot as those of the northern cities "Lying on the top of a mountain, she has in Kenesaw on one side and Stone mountain on the other peaceful guardians from which come the evening breezes to drive away in the heat of the day, and make blankets comfortable, the year round.

There is no need to go into details of what the exposition promises. Of course it will not be on so grand a scale as the Columbian show at Chicago, but there will be much at Atlanta, American in character, that was not seen on the lake shore. The main purpose is to show the world the unlimited resources of the southern country ; to show what people of the South possess, what they have done and are doing, and to bring the Spanish-American countries and islands done and are doing, and to bring the Spanish-American countries and islands south of us into closer contact commer-cially with the States. The negro building promises to be of great interest and to mark the progress of the race under freedom. It was designed by a negro architect, constructed by negro workmen hired by negro contractors, and within its walls will be displayed evidences of what the race has done the last 30 years. The leading men of the race all over the South have heartily co-operated in preparing this exhibit. The exposition grounds are just out-side of the city limits, and the enclosure, known as Piedmont park, covers a triffe less than 200 acres. There will be about 30 principal buildings, including the different States. Great things are promised of the woman's building, and what it will show. It is gratifying to know that it was designed by a woman
