Successful Man.

We hear in these days a great deal about successful men. But who are successful men? Are they the men who make money, and gather together fortunes? This is an important question; important both for ourselves and our children. If money-making were the end of life, then those who make it are, indeed, successful. But it is not the end and aim of any true life. In a high sense the object and purpose of that life are truth and righteousness; truth in religion, philosophy, art, science, politics; and righteousness in all its ways and words.

It cannot too often be sounded in our ears that money is a means is greatly to be desired; but when sought exclusively as an end it is apt to become an ignoble and corrupting pursuit. As a means it gives independence and the leisure to pursue the true and the beautiful; to search out the secrets of Nature and make them available for the service of mankind; to cultivate art, both in its principles and expression; to explore the mysteries of being; to raise and elevate the thoughts above what is sordid and low, and fix them upon things above; to aid in works of beneficence and charity; and thereby promote the well-being and happiness of our fellow-men.

The men who accomplish results like these—and we may add that most of them can be accomplished without wealth, however important as an adjunct—are the successful men; the men whose names survive in song or story, and live in the thoughts and in the gratitude of mankind. The man who dies rich and nothing more leaves no enduring name. He is buried and forgotten. His speculations, his schemes, his endeavors in adding to his coffers, all come to naught. He is not remembered. Burns and Goldsmith, on the other hand, were poor in their day, and generation, but they left behind them treasures that time has not tarnished and names that the world will not willingly let die. Were they successful or unsuccessful men? No doubt their individual happiness would have been promoted if they had cultivated habits of prudence, self-denial and forethought. We are not disparaging the virtues of industry and thrift. They are most valuable to the individual and the community. But we are asserting that the men who make money getting and accumulation the end and not the means are not, in any true sense, the successful men of our day, or any other day, though they reach the goal of their ambition, and that their names inevitably sink into obscurity and nothingness. They leave behind them no works that keep alive their memory, and "applauding honors" desert their ashes. Many, indeed, like Girard, who apparently concentrated all the energies of their lives upon accumulation, have another and different end in view. It is not the accumulation for its sake of the accumulation, but to use it for a great and noble purpose. Such men are benefactors and are crowned with immortal honor.—Pitts. Record.

Hastings and the Presidency.

Governor Hastings is said to have recovered sufficiently from his recent defeat as to be again endeavoring to arrange some sort of a combination with the best hind for the presidency. For this purpose he is ready to secure assistance from any quarter where it can be obtained. If the discredited combine can be said to him he will serve it. If Senator Quay can be mollified to such an extent as will allow of his giving assistance and comfort to the Hastings presidential boom, Dan will only be too glad to cater to the desires of the junior senator.

There is little doubt that Governor Hastings desires most ardently to be president of the United States. He harbors the foolish idea that the 240,000 majority that he secured last fall was meant for him personally and not as a natural outburst against the party that was in power at the hard times. The governor is likely to have his eyes opened some day as to how much value there was in his presidential boom.—Altoona Times.

McCarthy Not a Nominee.

Harrisburg, Sept. 17.—There is no truth in the report that Judge McCarthy intends to run for Superior court judge on nomination papers. The story is the creation of some of the Hastings Republicans. Intimate friends here of the judge declare that he has never thought of becoming a candidate since the Democratic convention, and would not consent to pass as a nominee except as the regular selection of the State convention.

Editorial Job for Stanley.

New York, Sept. 17.—Henry M. Stanley, M. P., and explorer, has accepted the appointment of associate editor of Bishop William Taylor's monthly pictorial publication, "Illustrated Africa." It was during his recent brief visit to New York, en route to Canada, that Mr. Stanley became associated with Bishop Taylor in the present work.

F. Marion Crawford is a broad-shouldered six-foot man, with azure eyes, though why he parted company with his blonde Vandrey beard is still a matter of conjecture among connoisseurs of manly beauty. He is married to an equally handsome wife, who has inherited the wonderful grey eyes and superb physique of her father, General Berdan. He is forty-one, and is a prodigious linguist, a marvelous musician and an expert fencer.

A little girl who had mastered her catechism confessed herself disappointed "because," she said, "though I obey the fifth commandment and honor my papa and mamma, yet my days are not a bit longer in the land, because I am put to bed at seven o'clock."

The Village Sheet.
How the Country Weekly Papers Stir the Memories of Many a City Man and Woman Who Have Spent Years Away From the Scenes of Youth and Fun.

"Thursday is always a red letter day for me if I am at home," said a well known banker as he sat in his library on that day of the week with his wife close by, "and it is such a day because it is then that I read my country papers. That is what my wife and I were doing when you came, and I was thinking what a delightful visitor one's country weekly is. It does not interfere with the city newspaper. A metropolitan daily covers the city and the world is altogether great and wonderful, but the village weekly insignificant as it looks, is almost as indispensable to every right minded man who began his life in the country."

"There must be thousands, even tens of thousands, of these papers taken in New York, for a great proportion of the men and women of New York are country born and many were country bred. To them the village paper published wherever they hailed from is a printed letter from home, and it is a thousand times more complete than any letter they ever received. The amateur correspondent would or could write."

"Do not let me interrupt your pleasure. Finish reading your budget of news."

"No," said the banker. "I will talk about it a moment more instead. If were not for these two newspapers that come to me every Thursday from Monmouth county, N. J., where our old homestead is situated, I would not have nearly as sensible an idea of my position in life and my relation to the world as I have. Here I read every week of men and women grown to manhood and womanhood whom I knew as little toddlers—even as babies in arms. My wife and I have just read of a fine performance on the piano by the daughter of a man who was a little too young for me to play with when I was a lad. That little boy has grown up and got children, and so I am made aware that the gray hairs in my head and over my ears have come to me naturally."

"One needs his wife by him in order to read the home weekly intelligently. She for instance, has called my attention to the advertisement of a great boot and shoe store, the proprietor of which was the baby in arms in a house where I once went regularly every Wednesday and Sunday night to visit a pretty girl of 17, who might have had me for a suitor—I say she might, who can tell?—if she had not very ostentatiously shown a preference for another fellow. She is a farmer's wife now, and in a recent copy of my country paper I read of her being down with diphtheria. Just fancy having a dangerous disease like that in a farming section, eight miles from a doctor, and a devilish poor, old foggy, narrow minded country doctor when you get him."

"You talk as if you were very old."

"Oh, no," said the banker. "My age is very little over 40, and if my paper shows me that little toddlers of my boyhood are now 30 or 35 and keeping stores it also encourages me in the contrary way, for here, in an account of a guessing party last week, are the names of two or three old beaux when I was a schoolboy. I suppose they were 30 or 35 at the time, and now they are 60 or 65. My wife, who goes to the country more frequently than I, assures me that they still look about as they did when we were children. You see the delightful and comforting moral of such news is that there is a heap more contrast between a boy of 16 and a man of 26 than there is between a man of 40 and one of 50 years. I see here in town how men who take care of themselves seem to stand still after they are fully grown."

"Thank God the decay is nothing like as rapid as the development of manhood. Follows when they get past 40 grow a little deeper lines in their faces, develop a little more under their waists, and show some gray hair, but that is all. If they are careful, they do not get old in a hurry. Old John Anderson, the man who made millions from chewing tobacco, was a wonderful example of what a man could do in the way of preserving his figure. Long after he was 60 he was as spare and jaunty as any fellow of 30, and so he remained till he died—dried up and blew away, as we used to say in the country."

But you are forgetting the best that we get from the country weeklies," said the wife. "For me they are most delightful because they carry me back to the fun and frolics we used to have when I was a schoolgirl. Ah, dear, when I used to take off my shoes and hide them in the bushes as soon as I got a mile from home, where I could run barefooted without my mother's finding it out."

"That is not all that you have told me you used to hide, my dear," said the banker, with a merry twinkle in his eyes.

"Oh, my little hoops, you mean," said his jolly wife, nothing daunted. "That is true enough. They used to get in the way when I wanted to climb trees and fences. I took them off, also, and then I was free. With only my little girl friends around me, and with all of them of one mind, what did it matter?"

"Adelaide is right," said the banker. "What a host of lively memories came back tonight with the village papers! What skylarking and homely pleasures we both experienced again! There was an advertisement that a certain hotel at Oceanport was open for sleighing suppers and dances. So it used to be in my time—the same creaking old tavern, I suppose—and what visions of rosy cheeked, sparkling eyed maidens, and of tucking them in the bottom of a sled, and of getting one—this one here—off alone in a shiny new cutter, and of finding a dance going on; all these things came up again just from reading that hotel keeper's card."

"If you knew the people who are mentioned in our two country weeklies, we could talk to you interestingly for an hour of the news we got from them to-night, but you don't, so we had better change the subject."—New York Sun.

It is not the great things which we would do if we could that will count in the end, but the little things we could do if we would.

A HINT TO YOUNG MEN.—Alas how prevalent are those dread diseases which make men prematurely aged, pale, listless, low-spirited, languid, easily tired, forgetful and incapable, all mad-houses and swell the lists of suicides; separate husbands and wives; bring untold suffering to millions, even unto the third and fourth generation.

A complete and scientific treatise on these ailments, prepared by an association of medical men who have had vast experience in their treatment and great success in their cure, will be mailed in plain sealed envelope, secure from observation, to any sufferer sending ten cents (the cost of postage), enclosed with this notice to World's Dispensary Medical Association, 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

A prominent ocean steamship agent estimates that there were about 100,000 Americans abroad during the summer. If they spent $100 each in travel or otherwise in foreign countries they left ten millions of dollars behind them. There are those who think it is ten times that much.

When a person begins to grow thin there is something wrong. The waste is greater than the supply and it is only a question of time when the end must come.

In nine cases out of ten the trouble is with the digestive organs. If you can restore them to a healthy condition you will stop the waste, put on new flesh and cause them to feel better in every way. The food they eat will be digested and appropriated to the needs of the system, and a normal appetite will appear.

Consumption frequently follows a wasting of bodily tissue because nearly all consumptives have indigestion. The weaker Digestive Cordial will restore the stomach to a healthy condition in a vast majority of cases. Get one of their books from your druggist and learn about this new and valuable remedy.

"Politics," said the self-made man, "always reminds me of something I noticed when I set out in life as a sailor." "What was that?" "There's no good knowin' the ropes unless you've got a pull."—Washington Star.

NOTHING SUCCEEDS LIKE SUCCESS.—The success of the Spee, N. J. Wine Co. in producing an extra quality of Grape Brandy is marvelous. They rely alone on the grape for body and flavor, and hence there is a wide and growing demand for this Brandy which rivals the old brands of Cognac, France.

Nothing is finer or richer than Spee's Old Clime Brandy and his Old Port, five to fifteen years old. For table use their Claret, Sauternes, Burgundies and P. J. Sherry are unsurpassed. For the sick room, hospital and Sacramental purposes their Unfermented Grape Juice is recommended and used by both physicians and divines. Sold by druggists.

Physicians report that the poisoning of 300 persons at the Lutheran Mission festival at Tracy, Indiana, was caused by contaminated drinking water, but the source of impurity is unknown. The sick are slowly recovering.

The market is full of cough mixtures, but one trouble with most of them is that when they do a little good the patient has to take so much that he gets to loath the taste. The Pineola Balsam is superior to other cough remedies because it is agreeable to the palate and its good effects are immediate. In a few days an ordinary cough is gone altogether. Bronchitis and asthma are more stubborn, but they too are cured by Ely's Pineola Balsam. A remedy worth trying. Twenty-five cents is all it costs.

Quay and Hastings are both in retirement just now. But the one is rejoicing while the other is sulking.

Tired, weak, nervous, means impure blood, and overwork or too much strain on brain and body. The only way to cure is to feed the nerves on pure blood. Thousands of people certify that the best blood purifier, the best nerve tonic and strength builder is Hood's Sarsaparilla. What it has done for others it will also do for you—Hood's Cures.

Hood's Pills cure constipation by restoring peristaltic action of the alimentary canal.

Corn shipments from Kansas and Nebraska have started East, causing a dearth of cars for other business. Every available car has been taken into the corn territory, and is being sent out as fast as it can be loaded.

WEAK AND LANGUID

"Our little Katharine, when but 3 1/2 years old, had whooping cough. She was attended by leading physicians, but did not get well. She lingered along from day to day, poor, weak and languid. She could scarcely do anything. Her flesh was soft and sallow. She was slow, dull and without ambition. I therefore decided to give her Hood's Sarsaparilla. She soon began to crave something to eat. From that time on, she steadily improved and today she is in the full enjoyment of good health. Her flesh is solid, her cheeks rosy, appetite good and her sleep sound and refreshing. She is full of life and as mischievous as she can be." Mrs. M. A. Cook, 31 Fulton St., Peabody, Mass.
