Japs Know No Kiss.
 Effort to Resent an American Teacher's Ocular Laboratory Habit.

Concerning kissing in Japan, Mr. Zoji Takado, a Japanese gentleman of Shikoku, told an amusing tale the other day. He said: "In my country we have not the kiss. It is a custom unknown. The husband never kisses the wife. The mother never kisses the child. To the Japanese mind the custom appears disgusting. Think, then, of what we endured in the tale I will relate to you."

"I was a youth at the time, and one of a class of forty young men who learned English and other things of a Christian missionary woman from America. Every day when that lady met us at the school her first act was to kiss us all."

The expression of repulsion upon the face of the narrator at this moment was almost tragic. He continued: "We dreaded that kiss beyond any pleasure of study, but we were powerless. The lady told us it was the English custom to express kind feeling and affection, and she loved us all. At last it drew near to the holiday time of Christmas, and we consulted together about a gift, which might help us and gratify our teacher. We decided to buy her a doll. We did so. It was a Japanese doll, very tall, and Mr. Takado held his hand breast high to show the stature.

"That doll cost many dollars of your money, for its raiment was very rich, of silk and embroidery. My comrades appointed me to write the address of presentation. I express in it all our affection and good wishes, and said that to show always how much we appreciated the kindness of our teacher we desired to offer her a beautiful doll, which we hoped she would be pleased to kiss instead of us.

"Then we awaited the next meeting of the class in suspense. When it was the day and the time our teacher came. She did not kiss us. She sat down with tears in her eyes. When she spoke she thanked us from the bottom of her heart for the gift we had presented and said: 'I love you so much more for it, my dear pupils, that I will not kiss you once—you must each kiss me twice.' And we had to do so—eighty kisses!"

Oklahoma as a State.

It seems as if it was but yesterday that the first white pioneers pitched their tents in the Territory of Oklahoma; yet already its population numbers 300,000, and they are knocking lustily for admission to statehood. As if by magic much of this wilderness has been converted into fertile farms, and the wealth of the inhabitants of the Territory is estimated at not less than $40,000,000.

The two great staples of wheat and cotton grow side by side in this favored land, while it is well adapted for the cultivation of all the fruits of the temperate zone. According to the Governor of Oklahoma, the whole region is adapted to agriculture. This, however, must be taken with some grains of allowance for official zeal. In the western part of the Territory there is a considerable stretch of land within the arid zone, and in which two out of three crops fail, as is the case in the dry belt of Kansas. But the region is adapted to the pasturage of cattle, which promises to be an important branch of the production of Oklahoma. There is no lack of minerals in the Territory, as lead, iron, copper and zinc have been discovered. Mines of coal have been opened, and petroleum has already flowed from its wells. In these conditions manufactures will soon follow.

Oklahoma has already more inhabitants than had Idaho and Wyoming when they were admitted into the Union, and it promises soon to overtake them both. But the Indian Territory should be consolidated with Oklahoma upon its erection into a State. The two Territories, together, would form one of the greatest agricultural states of the Union. There is no good reason for cutting up this region into two states, when it would make one great and homogeneous Commonwealth.

A Politic Sheriff.

He Was Quite Willing to Accommodate the Gentleman He Was Going to Hang.

"The most polite man I ever knew," said J. D. Evans, of Mississippi, to a Star reporter, "was a colored man down in my county. He belonged before the war to Col. White, one of the most cultured and polished gentlemen in the South. During reconstruction days Tom was elected Sheriff and the first day he held the office a white man was sentenced to be hanged. I knew the doomed prisoner and at his request was with him several hours a day for the last week of his life.

"The sheriff came in the first time I was there and, addressing the prisoner, said: 'Scuse me, Marster Bob. I jess come fur jess a little advice. You see, we are rather ob us as used ter ceremonies on occasions of dis kin' an' I jess wants ter know how you' would like ter hat de gallows, facin' de sun or de other way.'

"The prisoner told him to have his face away from the sun.

"'Thank yo', Marster Bob. I'll done hab it that way. We don't want to make no expositions ob ourselves by not doin' what is propah on sich events.'

"Upon the next occasion the sheriff came in:

"'Mars Bob, scuse me one moment, gemmen. I jess wants ter hab yo' show me once mos' how you done tie de knot. Mos' curious knot I eber seed.'

Upon the morning of the fated day, as I went in, the sheriff had the doomed man's foot throw over a chair and was blacking his boot, the other one having already been polished.

"'Mawnin', sah,' he said to me, 'Mars Bob jess gittin' ready. I done borryed a suit an' necktie fer de cunnel an' jess slickin' 'im up. Den I gits inter my own dress suit dat I had made a puppus, an' Mars Bob an' me, we gwine ter be de bes' dressed ob anybody.'

"Arranged in full evening dress, the convicted man and the Sheriff mounted the scaffold when the time came. 'All right now, Mars Bob,' said the sheriff, as he adjusted the cap. 'Scuse me, sah, jess a minute,' and he touched the fatal spring."—Washington Star.

Force of a Bird's Flight

Some idea of the terrific force with which a bird passes through the air may be gained from the fact that a short time ago a common curlew flew right through a piece of plate glass a quarter of an inch thick at Turnberry lighthouse, Ayrshire.

Great Disappointment.

She—I hear you got a little brother for a New Year's present. Ain't yer glad?
 He—Now!
 She—Did yer want a sister?
 He—Now. I didn't want no brudder nor no sister neither. I wanted a fight-in' dorg an' a pair o' skates!

A Modest Beggar.

A beggar stopped a lady on the steps of a church.
 "Kind lady, have you not a pair of old shoes to give me?"
 "No, I have not. Besides these you are wearing seem to be brand new."
 "That's just it, ma'am—they spoil my business."

Sherman's book is said to have brought him in $127,000 already, at a royalty of $1 a copy. It would have taken him more than two years to make as much as that by being President.

Secretary Olney has now attained the distinction of being the best-dressed man in the cabinet.

'96 Will Be a Great Year.
 And The Pittsburg Dispatch Will Tell All About It.

This year promises to be a remarkable one for news. There will be national conventions, which everything indicates, will be more than usually exciting, and an election of vital importance. There are wars and rumors of wars, and international complications almost without number. It is the year in which the Greater Pittsburg is to be inaugurated, and the new era in Pennsylvania politics bids fair to make matters lively from one end of the State to the other. The Pittsburg Dispatch will have the most accurate, complete and exclusive reports of these events, and of all others that will transpire. The Dispatch is now the only newspaper, not only in America, but in the world, which has a staff correspondent inside of the lines of the revolutionary army in Cuba, insuring prompt and trustworthy information of the great struggle which is attracting so much attention. What other papers get by hearsay and rumors the Dispatch receives direct from its own staff on the spot.

But while the news is of the first importance the other features which go to make up the modern newspaper-magazine will receive even more attention than in the past. Nearly all of the really prominent authors of the two hemispheres have been engaged to write for the Dispatch during 1896. The list includes: A. Conan Doyle, Rudyard Kipling, Sarah Orne Jewett, Harold Frederic, Justin Huntley McCarthy, Bret Harte, Anthony Hope, Mrs. Burton Harrison, John Strange Winter, S. Baring Gould, Frank R. Stockton, S. R. Crockett, and in fact, practically all of the famous authors whose novels and tales delight the reading public.

The ablest scientific and economic writers will vie with the most noted humorists to both instruct and entertain. The department devoted to the fair sex and the household will be placed on an even higher plane, if that be possible, than before.

On January 1 the Dispatch published its New Year's feature, a comprehensive chronological record of the events of 1895. This has been imitated, but never on the scale of the original in the Dispatch. It is something which alone is worth a year's subscription as a work of historical reference, in which all subjects, local as well as general, are treated.

At 2 cents a copy, 10 cents a week, or 15 cents with the Sunday issue, delivered through carriers or newdealers. The Dispatch is the best value on earth.

The Baby in the West.

The Oregonian has awarded a $150 prize for the best definition of a baby. The Heppner lady who won the prize sent in this answer: "A tiny feather from the wing of love, dropped into the sacred lap of Motherhood."

The following are some of the best definitions given:

"The bachelor's horror, the mother's treasure, and the despotic tyrant of the most republican household."

"The morning caller, noonday crawler, midnight brawler."

"The only precious possession that never excites envy."

"The latest edition of humanity—of which every couple think they possess the finest copy."

"A native of all countries who speaks the language of none."

"About twenty-two inches of coo and widdle, with and scream, filled with suction and testing apparatus for milk, and automatic alarm to regulate supply."

"A thing we are expected to kiss and look as if we enjoyed it."

"A little stranger, with a free pass to the heart's best affections."

"That which makes home happier, love stronger, patience greater, hands busier, nights longer, days shorter, purses lighter, clothes shabbier, the past forgotten, the future brighter."

Bismarck's Lower Lip.

"It is There," Says He "and It is Very Much There."

The monument which is being erected in honor of Prince Bismarck on the Radeberg was the relief portrait of the Prussian statesman, which was executed by sculptor Pfromm, where the dining hall served him as a studio, the work being done mostly while the Prince sat at the breakfast table. While the finishing touches were being put to the relief portrait the Prince made critical remarks about the artist's work, and called particular attention to his lower lip. He said: "The artists have always made my busts without giving me justice as far as my lower lip is concerned, and that is wrong; it is there, and it is there very much—but not too much—for that would indicate fullness; that was never one of my qualities; and I have always been amenable to argument if better opinions than mine were given. But a well-formed lower lip indicates perseverance."

Upon the completion of the artist's work the Prince took the modeling spatula into his own hand and engraved, personally, his well-known "W. B.," giving the medallion a signature which no other Bismarck portrait has ever received.

Clerical Orders on the Pennsylvania Railroad.

The Pennsylvania railroad company announces that clerical orders for the year 1896 will be issued to ordained ministers of the gospel located on its system east of Pittsburg and Erie inclusive, on the same conditions as prevail at present. Clergymen who desire to avail themselves of this privilege should make application to the nearest ticket office of the Pennsylvania railroad, so that the orders may be issued before the close of the present year.
