TELL IT OUT.

Don't sit down and wait for trade: 'Tain't the way. Get a hustle, make a show, Push your business, make 'em go. Don't sit down and wait for trade: 'Tain't the way.

If you've anything to sell, Tell it out. Let your neighbors see you're 'fy.' Get up 'bargains,' don't say die. If you've anything to sell, Tell it out.

Origin of the Gypsies.

India is a land of many mysteries. Caste, for example, prevails there to a greater extent than in any other country of the world and as inheritance and civil rights depend upon the preservation of caste purity, it has always been hereditary, so that every person feels that he is born to a destiny which he would not avert even if he could.

Brahmins, baisyas, a trader, water carrier, sweeper or rope dancer, an elephant driver, charmer, urban warrior, ear piercer, beggar, vagabond, or whatsoever else he may be, never attempts to pass from his own line to another caste and as a consequence children, from generation to generation, pursue the same calling in which their progenitors had been engaged.

Its population, likewise, presents some unusual features for ethnologists say that there are not less than fifty different races in India, each having its own peculiar appearance, manner, language and religion.

The aborigines were rude tribes that are still represented in the central and southern parts by the Bheels, the Koles, the Gonds, and the Shanars. The Goojars, Aheers, Gwalas and Goordes, who are of Aryan origin, belong to the pastoral and cowherd tribes that can be seen in every part of the country.

In the 'Vale of Cashmere,' from whence come the famous shawls bearing his name, to be found probably the best representations of the early Hindoos; 'their women being beautiful as no other women are, and their men having attained to the perfection of the Asiatic physical man.'

The Khatries, though comparatively few in numbers at the present time, are another intellectually and physically fine people, and some of the most distinguished Hindoos pride themselves upon being descended from this particular class.

The Jats, a bold, robust and warlike race, coming at an early date from the north through the Bolan Pass, settled in the hill region of northwestern India, and being naturally a nomadic people, they gradually overrun the whole country, and at one time had such power that they obtained important victories over the Caliphs, themselves. Eventually, however, in the eleventh century, they were overcome and dispersed by Mohamad, prince of Ghuzni, and thousands of them, wandering westward, crossed the Hellespont, and led a nomadic life in various parts of Europe.

These people were without religion, and disregarding the admonition of the eighth commandment, became adroit thieves soon after their compulsory migration, if they had not been that before.

It cannot, at this late date, be definitely ascertained that the original Jat was specially a musician, a dancer, a merrymaker, bear leader, or peddler, nor if his black hair remained unchanged until old age, as does that of pure-blooded English gypsies. All of these things are, however, markedly characteristic of the wanderers or gypsies of India, and hence the conclusion is drawn that the Jat warriors were supplemented by other tribes among them the Dom, a race of gypsies found along the far northern frontier, where a portion of their early ancestry appear as the Domari, and who made mats and baskets and were inveterate drinkers of strong spirits. They show great skill as dancers, musicians, singers and acrobats. Their women are fortune tellers, especially by chiromancy, and make and sell mats baskets and small articles of wood, as well as bead work. The men flay animals, carry corpses and formerly showed such great aptness for these and other detestable callings that in several European countries they monopolize them. They eat with the greatest relish animals that died a natural death, and 'mullo balor,' or 'dead pig,' is considered by them a rare delicacy.

Taking all these facts into consideration, writers who have given close attention to the subjects do not hesitate to aver that the European gypsies are descendants of the Jats of India. There is a great similarity in their appearances, manners, habits, and customs. Their language—the Romany—agrees in the main with the Aryan tongue that is used by the Jats, and any one of the latter experiences little or no difficulty in conversing with and understanding an English gypsy. In short, the marks of resemblances in all respects are too striking to leave in the mind of the unbiased thinker any serious doubts regarding their identity.

Appendicitis; Grape Seeds Not the Only Cause—Skillful Surgical Operations.

All over the country many people have almost entirely given up the use of grapes and other small fruits on account of their fear of appendicitis. Indeed, so much has been said on this subject that such articles of diet are recorded as almost on the list of things prohibited. A physician of wide experience, and one who has performed many operations for appendicitis, says that in all of the cases that he has handled he has never found a seed of any sort as the irritating cause. Any little particle of undigested food may get into the entrance of this little sac, provided it is open far enough to receive it. It is not supposed to be necessary that any trouble begins immediately, although no one knows positively anything about it.

Appendicitis may begin by a cold, a strain, or any predisposing cause of inflammation. The question has often been asked why we have appendicitis, when a fortiori such a disease was never known. The only reason is that physicians have learned to locate what was formerly considered an inflammation of the bowels, or peritonitis, or an abscess, the cause and progress of which were involved in obscurity. Surgery has done much to alleviate human suffering, and if people would only use a little more intelligence and reason in matters of this sort, could do much more. Of course, it is not unnatural that the idea of an operation fills the average mind with horror. In years past this was almost equivalent to a death warrant. Very few people survived operations, and the suggestion was, indeed, appalling, but now well-equipped hospitals, modern appliances, antiseptics and skill have changed all this, and one may enter an operating room and go through the ordeal with 98 chances in 100 in one's favor, provided, of course, the system is in a condition to resist an ordinary shock.

It is said that appendicitis is not necessarily a fatal disease, but that proper care and treatment may oftentimes relieve the patient and do away with the need of an operation. Physicians, however, claim that in cases of this sort a recurrence of the disease is not unlikely. However, operations may be undergone with safety, provided the surgeon is skillful enough. If he is not, it is an unfortunate fact, which one must expect to face. Good surgeons are born, not made or educated, and if one can fall into the hands of the few men who have a positive genius for surgery, the undertaking is likely to be gone through with successfully, and the patient is ever afterwards thankful and comfortable. But in the ranks of the medical profession there are found many men who will not hesitate to operate for the sake of the experience it gives them. They always report a successful and brilliant operation, even though a few days later the patient may be dead, 'unfavorable symptoms having set in.'

YOUNG MEN TAKE WARNING.—Alas, how prevalent are those distressing diseases and weaknesses which make young men prematurely old, pale, listless, low-spirited, languid, easily tired, forgetful and incapable; fill mad-houses and swell the lists of suicides; separate husbands and wives; bring untold suffering to millions, even unto the third and fourth generations. The afflicted will recognize only too plainly to what class of maladies we refer. A complete and scientific treatise (sent only in plain sealed envelope) on receipt of ten cents, (the cost of postage.) If enclosed with this notice to World's Dispensary Medical Association, 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

A Few Choice Ways of Using Strawberries.

Strawberries are good enough just as they come ripe and delicious from the vines. But the following recipes may serve for added variety.

Strawberry Puff Pudding.—One pint of flour, two teaspoonfuls baking powder and a little salt sifted together; mix very soft with sweet milk. Grease several cups, and into each put a tablespoonful of the batter, then one of berries, and then another of batter. Place in a steamer and steam half an hour. Serve with sweetened cream or crushed berries and sugar.

Strawberry Charlotte.—Make a boiled custard of one quart of milk, yolks of six eggs and three-quarters of a cup of sugar. Fill a large glass dish half full of alternating layers of sponge cake and fresh strawberries. When the custard is cold pour it over the cake and berries. Beat the whites of the eggs to a stiff froth with three tablespoonfuls of sugar and spread over the top. It can also be ornamented with some of the largest berries.

Strawberry Bavarian Cream.—One quart of berries put through a colander, one cup of sugar; add one-half ounce of gelatine that has been soaking in one-fourth cup of water for two hours. Set it on the ice while you stir it smooth, and as soon as it begins to set, stir in a cup of whipped cream. Pour into moulds and when ready to serve lay whole berries around it, or cut slices of them to lay over it.

Strawberry Pie.—Bake an empty under crust and when it is perfectly cold fill with berries; sprinkle thickly with sugar, and pour over all a meringue made from the whites of two eggs and a little sugar. Set in the oven until nicely browned—this will not cook the berries much, so their natural flavor is retained.

Strawberry Cake.—Bake layers of sponge cake as for any layer cake; for the filling use mashed berries and whipped cream sweetened to taste. The berries need not be mashed fine, but crushed just enough so they will stay in place. Pour the cream over them, add another layer of cake and so on.

Strawberry Ice Cream.—One quart of berries mashed in a bowl with one pound of sugar; put through a sieve; add one quart of sweet cream and freeze.

NEWTON HAMILTON CAMP-MEETING.—The J. V. C. M. will commence Tuesday, August 11th, 1896, and continue ten days, in charge of the Rev. A. R. Lambert of Harrisburg, Pa.

These grounds are well known for its beautiful growth, excellent water, purifying air, and in fact, one of the most desirable locations for camping purposes in the State of Pennsylvania. The grounds will be open for occupancy of tents August 1st. The hotel will open the same time for the reception of guests.

CONSUMPTION CURED WITH GRAPES.—This fell disease has brought a blight to many a promising life, and sadness to many a home circle. There is one remedial agent that will assist nature in throwing off this terrible disease, viz: Speer's Port Wine. It has been used by hundreds with wonderful success; has checked the progress of disease and brought thousands back to health. Its property is to make new blood. For sale by druggists.
