An Unmitigated Steal. While Republicans never cease, when Democrats are in power, charging them with extravagance, they lose their keenness as watch dogs of the treasury when they themseves are in control. A case in point is now at hand. The bill, providing annual clerks for members of Congress, will require an expenditure of $427,000 each session, and double that for two years; and the bill provides the money shall be paid to the Congressmen, and by them paid to the clerks. But why are not these clerks put on the pay roll? This would prevent Congressmen putting any of the money in their own pockets as they are charged with doing. If the appropriation is meant to pay the clerks, there could be no harm in putting their names on the pay roll, and having them paid as other employes of the House are: but, if it were intended that Congressmen should rob a part of the clerk's salary and charge the government $1,000 a year for what costs them $300 or $500, they are pursuing the proper course. A Washington correspondent, interested in this waste of public money says: "The House of representatives is becoming prodigal in a selfish manner. The passage of a bill providing annual clerks for members of the House will necessitate an annual expenditure of $427,000. The reprehensible feature of this extravagance is the provision that the money shall be paid to the Congressmen, and by them paid to the clerks, instead of putting the clerks on the pay roll. It is an open secret that very many of the Congressman draw the full amount of $100 per month, and pay their clerks or stenographers as little as possible. One Congressman living at a prominent hotel in Washington, who draws $100 per month during the session, employes a bell boy, who writes shorthand, to typewrite his letters at ten cents each, the aggregate per the ware-house? month being about $25. Thus the Congressman pockets about $900 per annum, in addition to his regular salary. The appropriation for annual clerks is an unmitigated steal from the public treasury." This is a leak that should be stopped in some way, and would be if people thoroughly understood it.

General Weyler's Tobacco Edict.

General Weyler's edict against the exportation of tobacco will seriously affect American merchants as well as Cuban planters. It seem to have been framed with a double end in view. First, by post-poning the carrying into effect of the proposed embargo for several days it will enable a few governmental favorites at Havana who have stocks on hand ready for export to extort exhorbitant profits from inintending purchasers for this market; and then by cutting off foreign competition it will place the Cuban planters who have not been able to bring their crops to market at the mercy of a small ring of manu-

The imports of Havana leaf tobacco into this country in 1895 amounted to nearly 26,000,000 pounds; and it remains to be seen whether a despotic Captain General will be permitted to lay an enterdict upon our trade in a time of peace and indefiance of treaties of amity and commerce. An embargo is strictly a war measure, and implies the existence of a conflict between two legitimate belligerents-a state of affairs which the Spanish aethorities in Cuba have persistently asserted does not exist.

Damage to Trees by Electric Wires.

ably follows a season of rain, when the wet leaves are good conductors of electricity and carry it from the wires to the trees. In some cases the death of trees has been caused by wires supposed to be thoroughly insulated, the covering having been rubbed off the wires by the friction of the branches when moved by the wind. The evidence that the trees have been killed by electricity is furnished by the fact that in num-berless instances the trees through which the wires pass died in an hour dur-ing a storm, while those standing a few feet from the wires were uninjured. These results will raise the question as to the liability of electric light companies for the damage caused by the killing of shade trees.—Scientific American.

The Foe that Jackson Feared

How It Was Vanquished by a Captain Who was a

"About daylight of the day before the second battle of Manassas," said the Confederate officer at a recent reunion of the blue and the gray. "I was ordered to report to Gen. T. J. Jackson, with a detail of 100 men, for special orders. I went at once to headquarters and presented the orders I had received. Gen. Jackson came out, and, beckoning me to follow him, rode some fifty yards from his staff and then turned to me and halted. "Captain, do you ever use liquor ?" he asked. "No, sir," I replied.

"A smile lit up his rugged face as he said, 'I sent for a special detail of 100 men under command of an officer who never used spirituous liquors. Are you that man ?''

"Yes, sir,' I said, 'I was detailed on that account.

There are some people who remind you of a chestnut burr. They appear to have batteries of prickly points trained on all sides to warn one against any but an armed approach. There are knights not only of the sorrowful but severe countenance. Their motto seems to be "don't touch me." Their manner chills the most ardent desire to become upon good terms with them. They warn off all approaches as an iceberg does a ship full of people. And yet their exterior may do their real feelings great injustice. In reality they may have a heart which longs for friendship and sympathy which they are denied by their unfortunate outward demeaner. Like the boy who persists in spite of stuck fingers in opening the prickly burr and is rewarded by obtaining the succulent chestnut, so he who persists in getting beyond the outward and forbidden aspect of the people under discussion will often be astonished at the wealth of human affection he will discover.

But there are few persons who will care depends the success of the present move- to attempt an intimacy with people who apparently do not invite or wish for their friendship. And in fact they should not be expected as a rule to make any such attempt. If people want the good will of their assciates they should make the fact patent themselves. It is largely a matter but unless you can resist temptation to drink you cannot carry out my orders. Do of habit, whether a man presents a forbidding or inviting exterior to the world. If easy, and more so, to look pleasant as it is to look grum. If one chooses he can walk the streets with his eyes on the ground seeing nothing beyond a step ahead or else men can get it as they pass, and then take your picked men into the building and looking before, around and above, and taking in all that is beautiful and interesting spill all the liquor there; don't spare a within the range of vision. So a man can drop, nor let any man taste it under any be pleasant or otherwise in his appearance circumstances. This order I expect you to the rest of the world as he choose. Of course with some people it is more difficult than with others to put on a pleasant front, but perseverance will accomplish that as everything else.

> By being pleasant we do not mean that a man shall go through life with a silly to the thoughful mind than to witness such because the stamp of insincerity is too clearly revealed. But one can be pleasant in his demeanor without being hypocritical. If a stranger, for instance, asks you a question, the tone and manner of your reply will at once convey to him whether you are willing and gratified to be of service to him or not and make him decide if it is worth while for him to attempt to continue the conversation. A gruff monosyllabic answer will often prevent an intimacy which might prove very profitable to the man who delivers it.

Some people have a habit of preventing some liquor. FANS REPAIRED.—Fannie, or as her family called her, Fan had lost her beau and she was afraid she never would be paired. She hated the thought of being single all her life. One day she saw in a store window the sigh "Fans Repaired." Laughingly she said to a friend. "There is hope for me yet. I may be re-paired."
"Of course you may" said her friend, "if you will take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, that wonderful cure of woman's complaints and tone up your system. Do you wonder your beau left you when he found you always complaining, looking pale as a ghost and all that. Young men won't knowingly harness themselves for life to a walking corpse or a peripatetic infirmary. Take the remedy and get infirmary. Take the remedy and get well." Fan did and has been satisfactorily re-paired. For nursing mothers or those about to become mothers. "Favorite Prescription" is a priceless boon. It lessens the pains and perils of childbirth, shortens labor. promotes the secretion of an abundance of nourishment for the child and shortens the period of confinement.

-Out in Ohio there has been another good illustration given why persons shouldn't play ghost. Two young men wanted some fun and dressed themselves up as spooks and started out to scare people. Another young man saw them and thinking they were ghosts sure enough, fired at them, planting a bullet in one's arm and another in the other's heel. As one will only practice he will find it just as it turned out the boys got more fun than they cared for and will leave off playing spook for some time to come.

SALES TALK

Hood's Sarsaparilla has enjoyed public confidence and patronage from the beginning to a greater extent than was ever accorded any other proprietary medicine, because it possesses greater merit and produces greater cures than any other. These are facts easily proven, if you are interested, by asking any dealer in the United States. All advertisements of Hood's Sarsaparilla, like Hood's Sarsaparilla itself, are honest. We have never deceived the public, and this with its su-perlative medicinal merit, is why the people have such an abiding confidence in it, and buy it almost to the exclusion of all
