A Letter From the Black Republic. An Interesting Story of the Life and Customs on the Island of San Domingo as Told by a Centre

Dear WATCHMAN :-

PUERTA PLATA, R. D., July 19th, 1896.-The Island of San Domingo, the second largest of the West Indies, is divided, politically, into two parts: The western and by far the smaller, being the Republic of Haiti, the "Black Republic." The language spoken is a "patois," badly corrupted French. As your readers probably know, the whole island was for a long time alternately under Spanish and French rule. Back in the days when a man's sword was his fortune, and "might made right," when the "old buccaneer of the Spanish Main," was a menace to all shipping interests, as well as to the peace of Europe, when Spain was a first-class power, and knew how to fight; I say, in those olden times, if the chroniclers can be believed, this island was a

During the Napoleonic wars a black slave. styling himself the "Black Nepoleon," raised an army in Haiti, fought the French and made the island free. The inhumanities and cruelties of the man are facts of history. He was a tyrant in every sense of the word. His tyrannies and cruelties made his position so insecure that he had a castle built, high upon a mountain peak, about twenty miles from the coast, near the city of Cape Haiti. Up this almost perpendicular mountain side he made his slaves draw all the material for building, furnishing and defending the cas-

He, however, changed his mind, and concluded to let me have it. When he went to get it he found the box he kept them in was locked up and that he had left the key at home. I drew two conclusions; First, that a man might make some money at the Cape by selling key chains and, second, that the P. M. must get a salary, and not a percentage of the money taken in

I had very little faith in their virtue for nowadays advertisers will do anything and say anything to get their mixtures on the market. However, in spite of the feeling, I tried them. In fact I had to try something. I was struck in the back eight or nine years ago while helping to build a house for a cousin. Ever since then I have had trouble with my back, not continually but at intervals, it always seemed to pass away of its own accord and return just as mysteriously. A cold sometimes caused a recurrence and this may have been at the bottom of the last attack. The trouble was centered in the right kidney and I could feel the shape of it, as I imagined I could from the soreness, I could press it with my thumb and it would cause increased pain.
