Sometimes when we read attentively the New York papers we come to the conclusion that they have entirely lost sight of the fact that outside their own little environment of say 2,000,000 people there is a big American republic of nearly 70,000,000 souls who really have something to say how this grand country of ours shall be ruled and governed.

Democratic Watchman

Bellefonte, Pa., Oct. 23, 1896.

And the Band Plays On.

The strange Hanna-McKinley political alliance in Philadelphia in the name of "national honor" and "sound money" is on the verge of dissolution. It is the result of a question of spoils. The fight for sheriff these between Miles, the regular Republican nominee, and Crow, the independent Republican, is to be a battle to the death between the Combine and the Combine elements of the party. In such a fight it has been found expedient to lay "national honor" and "sound money" on the shelf. And the band plays on.

Of course each faction wants the votes of all the "republicanists" and "anarchists" it can get, and as there is no Democratic candidate for sheriff in the field, the Democratic city committee having, however, endorsed Crow, there is some that animated contest among the respective wings of the "national honor" party for "anarchist" votes. But it takes two to make a bargain and the "anarchists" are not fools. And the band plays on.

Philadelphia Sunday papers were an interesting study. That staunch protector of "national honor," Col. McClure, almost forgot to call honest Democrats "Popocrat Anarchists" in his Hannacret Times. These Democrat "anarchists," you will observe, have again suddenly become necessary in Col. McClure's business, which, as Quay's anti-Combine leader, is to annihilate "Lobbyist" Martin's Combine. The Colonel is now in a quandary as to how he can still denounce Democrats as "anarchists" and "popocrat" while he is at the same time land them in his net as supporters of pure and undefiled Crow municipal government. It must be admitted that the Colonel has on his hands a job of some delicacy. And the band plays on.

In the same predicament with the Times is the Hannacret Revue. These papers, together with the Register and Register, charge Martin and Miles with furnishing Democratic leaders Squire McMullen, Peter Monroe and William M. Rump with about 20,000 Miles and Bryan tax receipts. McKinley, they say, is to be benefited, to save Martin and Miles. They charge that the Democratic leaders named above refused to go into the deal until they had Martin's assurance that for every Democratic vote Miles gets, Martin is to give them a Bryan vote, and that orders to this effect have been secretly issued by Martin to the Republican ward workers. And the band plays on.

There comes the Press and other old line Republican Combine papers, who also would be glad to have some of the "anarchist" vote. These papers charge for Crow Republicans with purchasing 30,000 receipts for Crow and Bryan. The Press says editorially that the Crow leaders "have been depended upon to provide the money to buy tax receipts for delinquent Democrats to vote for Bryan and Crow." The Times admits that 25,332 such receipts were purchased. And the band plays on.

The disgusting pulling and hauling of gold bug papers over the spoil of office will give the public an idea of the sincerity of those journals when indulging in such high-sounding rot as "national honor" and "sound money" in politics they do not know what honor means, and all kinds of money is sound to them in a political deal. But it's an ill wind that blows nobody good, and it is now predicted that Mr. Bryan's vote in this city will reach probably 100,000. If it does, McKinley will not have over 20,000 majority there. And the band still plays on—Lancaster Intelligencer.

Wage Earners, Read This!

We commend the following to the special attention of railroad men, who think free coinage will be an injury to their business.

"The big Pennsylvania system that has never been wrecked and has gone on year after year making money for its owners and paying the best wages in the country is not going to join in the bulldozing tactics employed by some of the other roads. Its employees are going to be let alone to vote as they see fit and no attempt will be made to coerce them in the slightest degree. A prominent official of that road who lives in Pennsylvania was interviewed by the Pittsburgh Post and had the following to say:

"That would be an insult to their intelligence," he said, "and were we to attempt to scare our men over to the Republican side or the Democratic side, they as American citizens would declare their independence by voting on the outside of us from us. I don't like the idea of some of the papers trying to scare the voters by telling them of dire consequences to follow the success of a party. It looks too much as if they thought the people were children or fools and had to be influenced by bugaboo stories. Then again, such attempts to scare the people, while they fall of their purpose to create votes, do tend to hurt business. It looks too much as if everything, including the prosperity of the nation was being sacrificed for politics. All the big roads prosper when labor prospers and when labor is unremunerative the roads are in the hands of receivers. I think we need a change of some kind, because it won't do to say that times are good enough when two-thirds of the big railroads are on the verge of bankruptcy. No, I won't discuss the silver question, because that is something that has already been explained by able writers for and against it, and if a majority of these 70,000,000 American citizens declare for either gold or silver either metal will do, and the conditions will be so readjusted that business will flourish just as long as it is alone. We are suffering from the curse of politics and professional politicians who believe in keeping up a constant agitation so that only one year out of every four is free from depressions brought about by political disturbances."

More than two weeks ago a high official on the Pittsburgh road told me just much the same thing, and it is true beyond question that this is the course that will be pursued. This will give a feeling of relief to those men on other roads who have been coerced. If the Pennsylvania system with stock quoted above par can get along under free coinage of silver without sending all its employees to the poor house, it is reassuring. It shows what has been stated many times before, viz., that the action of some of the other roads was simply a bluff and the attempt to make men believe that in the event of the free coinage of silver the road would be utterly ruined was simply for political effect."

President Garfield said: "Every man who is opposed to the use of silver coin as a part of the legal currency of the country is an enemy of the people. Every man who is opposed to the legal use of both metals I disagree with. I would endow two with equality and make free coinage."

The Benefits of Silver.

How Free Coinage Would Affect the Farmer Who is Mortgaged.

How would the free and unlimited coinage of silver affect the farmer who has a mortgage on his farm?

1. How would it affect the one holding the mortgage? Ohio Farmer.

1. The only way in which a farmer usually raises money to pay his mortgage or the interest on it is by selling his products. If these are constantly falling in price it is the same as though his mortgage and the interest on it were getting greater. In other words, it takes a greater number of bushels of his products to procure the same number of dollars. Suppose, instead of borrowing $1,000 and agreeing to pay $60 a year interest the farmer had borrowed 1,000 bushels of wheat when wheat was worth $1 a bushel, and had agreed to pay sixty bushels of wheat per year interest. There then would have been no doubt of the fairness of the transaction. If he had borrowed it for ten years he would have delivered sixty bushels of wheat every year, and at the end of ten years would have returned 1,000 bushels of wheat, and every body would have said that he was an honest man. The farmer who ten years ago, however, borrowed $1,000 and agreed to pay $60 a year interest, has found that he has had to give more than sixty bushels per year to pay his interest, and that if his debt is now due, it will take more than 1,000 bushels of wheat to procure $1,000 to discharge the debt. In other words, year by year, the dollar has imperceptibly increased in value until, within twenty-three years it has become twice as valuable when measured in all commodities in general. The farmer does not understand how this has been. He knows that it is very distressing to him, but if he objects he is told that he is an anarchist and a repudiator, and the man who demands twice the value he loaned is considered honest. The free and unlimited coinage of gold and silver would stop the fall in prices of farm products.

2. The lender of money should receive, when the loan is due, money whose purchasing power is the same as that which he loaned. He is entitled to no more; he should receive no less. The trouble with the gold standard is that year by year it has been giving an unearned increment to money lenders and holders of securities calling for a fixed number of dollars. We maintain that by using all the gold and all the silver we could get as money we should have a dollar whose purchasing power would not be increasing year by year, and thereby robbing the debtor. At the same time it would return to the creditor the full amount which he is justly entitled. —Cincinnati Enquirer.

A Self Evident Fact.

Every corporation in the United States, if it really has the right, would be in favor of the free coinage of silver. —New York News.

It Would Not Drive Money Away.

(OBJECT LESSON BY GEO. G. MERRICK.)

"Upon the restoration of silver to coinage into full legal tender money all gold (money and metal) would leave the United States." —This is answered below by George G. Merrick:

As the advocates of the single gold standard for money have persistently insisted that such would be the result following the restoration of the rights of mintage to silver; and as these advocates are principally bankers and bank agencies, or such agencies as are more or less dependent upon or employ-

MARK HANNA'S GREAT FAT-FRYING ENTERPRISE.

The Trusts to Contribute $10,000,000 to his Campaign Fund.—$5,000,000 of this will Stick to the Fingers of Republican Politicians;

[NEW YORK WORLD—GOLD ORGAN.]

Mark Hanna admits that it will take much money to educate the people sufficiently to insure the election of his candidate, and the fat-frying is now in full blast. The gigantic trusts and combines, all of which have benefited in the past by the system represented by Mr. McKinley and further hope for future benefits, are expected to contribute liberally to the republican campaign fund, and already the assessments necessary has been decided upon.

The trusts are expected to contribute $10,000,000 towards the election of Mr. McKinley. As the total capitalization of the various trusts now doing business in defiance of law is about $1,500,000,000, the enormous sum of ten million dollars can be raised without a heavy assessment. It will necessitate a contribution of one dollar from each trust for each $150 of capital stock, or about two-thirds of one per cent.

The amount the principal trusts will therefore be called upon to contribute can easily be determined and is shown with approximate accuracy.

The name and amount of each trust was printed in the World, but our limited space will not allow us to produce each one separately. There are 136 trusts in the list, beginning with dressed beef and provision trust of $100,000,000, which was assessed $665,000. The last on the list is the Tube company combination, capital $2,500,000, assessed $16,500. The total capital represented in the 136 trusts is reported at $1,505,560,000; assessment amount, $9,561,610.

The largest check will have to come from the Dressed beef and provision trust. This monopoly will have to raise $665,000, and if you are compelled to pay a few cents more on each pound of beef, lard and bacon you buy in the immediate future, you may know that you and other consumers are paying this assessment and that Messrs. Armour, Cudahy, Swift, Fowler, et al., are not losing anything in their effort to protect the credit of the United States.

The smallest amount will come from the trust that controls the little wooden skewers that bother you when you try to carve your rib-roast. The output of those wooden pins is controlled by a trust which has a capital of but $60,000, which is ample for the purpose, however. The trust will assist Mr. Hanna to the extent of $400.

The two coal trusts, with an estimated capital of $100,000,000, an estimate carefully and reliably made by the Philadelphia Times, from which the figures of capitalization are taken, probably too low. As the price of coal has recently been advanced and the advances are threatened, the $665,000 that they will contribute to the election of their friend will not be missed. That is, by the trust. But every consumer, and especially the poor people who buy coal by the basket or ton, will feel the extortion.

There are certain expenses incidental to the conduct of a campaign which are legitimate and must be met. When money is used only for these legitimate expenses the men having the expenditure in charge can make an accounting. But when the sum to be expended is as enormous as the amount which will be spent under the direction of Mark Hanna this year, no such accounting can be made, is ever expected or desired. It is a secret known only to the men who handle the boodle, and contributors must trust to their "honor."

A gentleman who is familiar with the conduct of campaigns from a ward election to the struggle for the presidency is authority for the statement that not one-half of the money contributed is ever expended for the purpose intended. It passes through so many hands, the fingers of which are sticky, that only a small percentage reaches the man who regards voting as a commercial transaction. This being the case, it will be seen that the $100,000,000 to be raised by the trusts offers many advantages to the practical politician.

Ten million dollars is an enormous sum of money. No one appreciates this better than campaign managers. It is so large that one-half of it will make 100 men rich. Given the opportunity to spend such a sum without having to show vouchers or receipts, and the job becomes entrancing. The trust managers who raise this fund at the bequest of Mr. Hanna will never know what becomes of it. Perhaps they will not care. But hundreds of palms are already itching to handle the sum, and architects have already been asked to prepare plans for fine houses that will be paid for out of this fund.

It may interest the dishonest managers of dishonest trusts to know that of the $10,000,000 which they are expected to contribute, $5,000,000 will be used to corrupt voters and $5,000,000 will be stolen. This statement is made on the authority of a United States senator, to whom the facts were given by the secret agent in charge of Republican collections.

There is an increasingly large demand for copper in the world now-a-days, the overwhelmingly predominant supply of which comes from this country. The export trade consumes monthly, it is said, an average of over 22,000,000 pounds, which is more than the entire output of eight of our richest mines. The Calumet and Hecla yield 7,000,000 pounds a month, and six other Michigan mines collectively furnish monthly over 4,000,000 pounds. The great Anaconda mine of Montana, which some headlong partisan writers have seemed determined lately to make a silver mine of, yields nearly as much as do all together the seven other most productive American mines, or 10,250,000 pounds each month. The European copper yield looks very small set alongside of that of this country. During the first eight months of the present year Europe produced 57,124 long tons of this metal, while the United States in the same period produced 134,775 similar tons. Copper is also produced in Chili and in Australia.

What Trees to plant.

The Soils Which Yield the Best Results in the Least Time.

One of the most important questions for the forester to answer is: What kinds of trees will yield the largest results in the least time and over the least area? For the cone-bearing trees one may safely, so far as we are concerned, put down the white pine as undoubtedly heading the list. The reasons are obvious. For one, it will grow over a wide area, its natural range being from Newfoundland to Northern Georgia. Of course, its extreme limits are given in the above statement, which, however, shows its great adaptability. The second reason is that the only soil limitation is that the land shall not be too rich. In the third place, it will grow quickly. For example, one may expect to find lumber of this species good enough for almost any purpose grown in half a century. It is true that it will not at this age be "cock pine," or even be fully matured, but it will be as good as the most that now finds its way to the market.

Some very rocky hillsides, or serpentine ridges, the red cedar will be a much better crop than nothing, even if it will produce but three or four crops in an ordinary lifetime. It is a tree whose goodness has been its bane. It must be remembered that both red cedar and white pine are peculiar woods, each having utilities which no other wood can fully meet. Then, again, there is that variable tree which the lumberman recognizes as yellow pine, pitch pine, jack pine, but which the botanist calls Pinus rigida. It lingers out a wretched sort of existence in the trade of Cape Cod and Nantucket, attains a lustier growth on the Jersey coast and off in the interior of the state of Pennsylvania, on the sandiest ridges, it sometimes sends up a shaft 80 feet tall. Its growth is very slow and its wood is none of the best, ordinarily, though one does hear of special sticks whose strength rivals that of the Georgia pine, but then this same rather despised tree, is specially adapted to certain locations and it does not yield readily to the forest fire after it has once passed the sapping period. Indeed, one man rather bluntly stated that an occasional burning helped the jack pine. There is no good reason why we should not get much good, short-length lumber panels and waists from this tree. Some of the most beautiful finish in natural wood comes from the pitch pine.
