

FARM NOTES.

-An orchard well managed may be made to pay several times as much for the made to pay several times as much for the land occupied and the labor spent as the best field on the farm. But it will be a poor investment if it is neglected and suf-fered to go to ruin. Cultivation is indispensable to enable the soil to contribute its fertility to the trees. The surface must not be left untouched, to become covered with rank weeds or moss, to lie bare and barren. There is nothing better than a crop of clover, and this should be permitted to die down and decay on the surface. A plow should never be suffered in an orchard. Only the surface should be stirred, lest the fine feeding roots be injured and the trees checked in their growth. A good harrow-ing in the fall and two or three in the summer will be all the cultivation an orchard requires.

Half a century ago it would have been considered presumptuous to advise farmers to put manure on the orchard land and millions of bushels of apples rotted on the ground because there were no proper places for storage. Now there are appliances for paring, grinding, pressing and evaporating which perform such work rapidly, and the orchards are plowed, manure and fertilizers applied, and the trees kept well pruned, with better varieties from which to select. There never has been a time when the farmer did not at least have an apple orchard. He may have neglected other fruits, but there were but few farms that did not produce apples, and it may be added that with the apples used on the farm, the cider, vinegar, apple butter, the propor-tion dried, and the number fed to the stock they were profitable, while good prices were obtained for the limited number sent to the cities and towns.

At the present day the farmer finds not only the apple crop profitable with good management, but also peaches, pears and small fruits, but it seems that he has a greater number of insect enemies to combat. The farmer who succeeds is the one who understands the importance of destroying and who begins the work early. The Bordeaux mixture and kerosene emulsion is now well known and are indispensable to all growers of fruit. The importance of the liberal use of fertilizers and the cultivation of fruit trees and vines has also been demonstrated. The strawberry is one of the early fruits, and the demand is great during the season, but so rapid has been the improvement in that direction as to render it necessary for every grower to adopt the best varieties in order to sell. In fact, the strawberries of the present day equal plums in size, and they are also of excellent quality. In making new beds in the spring only the best varieties should be used, and they should be given good cultivation and liberal manuring. Following strawberries come raspberries and black berries, with grapes later in the season, these four crops being the principal small fruits, each one of which will give a profit or cause a loss according to the manner of treatment and mode or marketing. What to do with the surplus fruit is always store apples until late in winter and he cannot avoid having some fruits that are of second grade. The mistake made by the grower is indeavoring to sell his second grade fruit by mixing it with the best by which method he reduces the price and receives no more for the whole in he would for the best only. What should be done is to establish factories to can or evaporate the excess, or do the work on the farm. A prominent grower states that much depends on the variety even when apples are to be evaporated, as a barrel of the greening apples dry out to 20 pounds, the second grade to 16 pounds; but Baldwins will dry out to less weight. About three bushels of apples make a barrel, but when properly packed a peck more may be added. The question to consider is if it is not better to evaporate the second grade apples than to waste them. Cider vinegar is below the demand in supply substitutes being used, and there is an excellent demand for pure fruit jellies. This country is securing a firm hold in Europe for the sale of apples, which fact has assisted prices here, but nevertheless there has been an enormous waste every year because growers could not afford to ship second class fruit to advantage. In the meantime hundreds of consumers could not obtain a full supply in some sections, and in winter there is no oversupply of evaporated fruit. When trees are set out they usually have a tag describing the variety attached either to the stem of the tree or to some limb. This is necessary so long as the tree is out of the ground. But after it is set, a map of the orchard, with each tree located on it measure, but will prevent a great amount and described, should take its place. As of suffering. the tags are generally attached to trees by wires, this, as the tree grows, prevents the circulation of sap, and, unless removed soon, may cause the tree to be nearly girdled by the wire.

board of fish commissioners and the Penn-sylvania fish protective association have is-sued a circular calling upon all similar bodies throughout the state to elect delegates to the state convention to be held in Harrisburg on the 15th of next month. The circular says among other things :

"The legislature having failed to make the usual appropriation to the board of fish commissioners of the state, it becomes the duty of the friends of fish culture and protection to raise the necessary funds to enable the latter to carry on its work. Governor Hastings, who has interested himself in the matter, proposes that $25,000 be ad-vanced in $500 subscriptions, on the under-standing that the next legislature be asked to refund the money. His excellency is having subscription and receipt papers pre-pared by the attorney general of the state and in due time these will be ready for distribution and use. UPON HAVI

"The objects of the convention are : For the purpose of pledging and raising funds to assist in carrying on the work of the state board of fish commissioners during the next two years ; to suggest some plan of co-operative work by which laws in the interest of the protection and increase of fish may be more surely enacted by future legislatures," etc. It is suggested that each association en-

Situation at Hastings.

Summonses Against Officials to Recover the "Fifth" Ton-Mitchell Mine Altogether Idle.

In spite of the fact that the Mitchell mine operators at Hastings seemed to have reached a satisfactory agreement with the men who had gone out on a strike, the plant has been shut down and is now altogether idle. It is rumored that this is caused by the fact that the mine is about to pass into the hands of other parties, but who these parties are or the reason for the change is not made public.

The trouble at Sterling, No. 8, at Hastings, is still on, and thirty-two of the men have taken a new step by suing the offi-cials of the mine for the value of the "fifth ton" taken off them. The suits average about $10 apiece. Suits have been started against W. P. Duncan, J. L. Spangler, James L. Nicholson, William A. Nicholson, Donaldson Nicholson, George and Ed Nicholson and others.

The miners say that the explanation published as to how the "fifth ton" was taken does not cover the case. They declare that, in addition to having to dig tons with 42-7-1y as much as 2,500 pounds of coal in them, they have been robbed of every fifth car DOLLAR they put out.

nything. The glowing accounts of Klondyke gold the problem which the grower desires to solve. He can sell the best, but he cannot metal itself, sent by express to the United States mint. It was in the form of dust, sewed up in a buckskin bag, and it aroused not a little curiosity among the mint officials, who looked upon it as the starter of a golden stream that will flow from the Klondyke fields to Uncle Sam's melting pots. In the bag were just 117.37 ounces, worth at current prices about $1,955. It represented three years of hard work and privation by A. P. Cotlan, a Russian miner. Dr. Tuttle, the chief refiner, and Charles H. Howell each purchased an ounce of the Klondyke gold from him for a souvenir.
