He was an excellent worker and although he had not had regular employment for a year he did office and house cleaning right along 'til he announced that he was going to Elmira to hunt work. Friday morning he got on a freight train and went as far as Lock Haven, where he bought a ticket to Williamsport, the home of his father and mother. Arriving there on the mid-night train he attempted to get off before the train stopped and slipped and fell with his left foot right under the wheels. He was carried to the hospital where it was found that only the front part of his foot was injured and nothing was said of an operation to his parents, who got to the hospital soon after they were notified. Harry seemed so well and suffering so little from his foot that after staying with him a time they left, expecting to go back in the afternoon. But before they got back, and without saying one word to the parents about it, the physicians etherized him and started into cut off the front part of his foot, but "he stopped breathing" and that ended their operation.
