Interested in Minerals

Main's Woman Geologist and Her Fortunate Fir of Sodalite.

Mrs. A. C. Merchant was a Maine girl of ordinary school education, but with a passion for study far in advance of her station. One day she found a very beautiful blue stone in a cow pasture at South Litchfield, and finding that the ledge was composed of it sent it to a neighboring college. The curator wrote back that it was a very rare mineral and asked her price for it.

In a few years the mineralogists of the Johns Hopkins university, the Peabody museum at Yale, Harvard's geologist, th Smithsonian, and even great men in the old countries, were writing her for specimens. She sent off her goods by the box and barrel, and in return won distinguished friends and received beautiful boxes of minerals.

It is told that a great professor who was visiting at Poland Springs and who had driven over to see the country once stopped before her door and asked how she came to have a beautiful crystal which lay upon her doorstep. "Professor L. of Harvard sent it to me," she said. "Why, do you know Professor L.? He's a great geologist. He has promised me a piece of sodalite, and I am to get it in a few months now. It's rare mineral indeed. Do you happen to be interested in miner-

The kindly face in the door fairly beam ed upon him as she answered: "I know, very little about them, sir, though I wish I did. But as to the sodalite, I can give you a piece of it. Just wait till I get my sunbonnet and I'll show you a piece as big as this house.

The professor smiled incredulously, but waited and walked with her down the very much worn path to the mine. There he nearly lost his head. He jumped about, picked up pieces and fairly kissed them in his delight. He came back several times and finally loaded a sugar barrel with specimens and sent them to his home. the free gift of Mrs. Merchant.

A few weeks after the depot master dropped her a card notifying her that a heavy box waited at the depot for her. Two hours after she opened it and handled over and over again rare tourmalines, crystals and pebbles from the golden and pearl lined shores of California. At the time of her death the collection had been variously estimated at from $2,000 to $3,-000 in value. - Boston Transcript.

Wanted a Round Trip Rate. It is related with excellent touches of realism by a local railroad man that some years ago in Omaha his road sold a round trip ticket for a corpse. He was sitting in the general office one day when in shambled a meek looking

"How do, Mistah D.?" said he, with bow and a scrape.

"How are you, sir? What can I do for "W'y, Mistah D., kain you tell me what am de rate to Lincoln?'

"One dollar and sixty-five cents." 'Well, what might be de round trip rate? "Three dollars and thirty cents." That was easily answered.

"Does you make a diffunce fo' 25 peo-

"No. It's the same rate no matter how many go."
"Well, Mistah D., look heah. What am de rate from Lincoln up to Omaha?"

"One dollar and sixty-five cents." "What is de rate fo' a corpse?" "One dollar and sixty-five cents."

"Well, now, what's de round trip rate fo' a corpse?' "Why, I guess it would be $3.30. But what do you want to carry a corpse around the country in that way for?" "Well, Mistah D., you see we's kin' of tied up. One of ouah membehs o' de Daughtahs of Ruth an Sons of Abraham died heah yistiddy. We want de membehs of de order in Lincoln to see deceased, but it costs too much money fo' 'em all to come to Omaha. So, if de round trip rate fo' a corpse is $3.30 we'll take de deceased down to Lincoln an put him on exhibition an bring him back to Omaha fo' de berrial. Jus' make out a ticket fo' him, Mistah D., an it'll he'p us out a lot."-Michigan Times.

Blind Men's Dreams.

One of the most intelligent inmates of a blind asylum, who came into the world blind, says that he never dreams of the things he has read about and never dreams of any thing or person that he has not in some way come in personal contact

He dreams of music, of the voices of persons he knows, of such incidents as might happen at the home or in some place in which he has actually been, but never of incidents in other places or in other lands. Even although he has read descriptions of localities, of natural beauties, of the appearance of a street or a city, no idea of what they look like comes to him in the fancies of his sleep. There is a class of blind people who be come blind when quite young. Such blind people never dream of any scene or object except those which have remained in the memory from what they actually saw bethey became blind. - Pearson's Weekly.

Renting by the Month. New Method of Economy In Keeping a Driving

"What's a horse club?" asked the man in the silk hat.

"Didn't you ever hear of one?" re ed the man doing the bulk of the taking. "I think not. Go ahead and tell us." "Well, you know it costs more than a good many people want to spend to keep a horse and vehicle, whatever kind it may be. Indeed in the cities it is quite beyond the means of most. In the smaller towns of the country it is more nearly possible, for a horse may be boarded at any country livery stable for $10 a month, and some times even less, if done by the year. But even under such favorable circumstances there are many people who don't like to own a horse and board him at a stable, where he may be badly treated, or he may get sick and die, or keep him at home where he is liable to be worse treated than in a livery stable. That being the case, I know of a liveryman in one of the towns I visit, a place of 6,000, who is enterprising enough to make the effort to meet the wants of that kind of people. This man went around among his acquaintances until he found 25 who were willing to pay him $10 a month each for the use of a horse just what they would pay for the board of one if they owned it. But they did not want it go to any other person. "Then he began buying up secondhand buggies and phaetons and good serviceable horses until he had $2,500 invested in the private livery plant, as he called it. He had to hire only one extra hand, and he had room in plenty, so the additional ex-pense beyond feed was not much. He had been running his plant a year when I saw him, and he told me that the entire expense was $150 a month, and that he took in $250 cash every month, leaving him a net profit on his $2,500 investment of $1,-200 a year, and every member of the horse club was so pleased that he was booked for another year, and there were a dozen ap-livery horses; so he agreed to give each patron the same horse always and not let plicants for membership.

"Of course he lost something by putting some of his good customers into the club, but he got them for the year that way, and he was willing to lose one $2 drive to pick up 40 50 cent ones. Now," concluded the drummer, "that you have learned what a horse club is, perhaps you might suggest it to your friends in the country and let them try it once."-Washington Star.

Freedom Threatened.

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge Tells Why America Rebelled Against England.

America rebelled, not because the coronies were oppressed, but because their inhabitants were the freest people then in the world and did not mean to suffer oppression. They did not enter upon resist ance to England to redress intolerable grievances, but because they saw a policy adopted which they rightly believed threatened the freedom they possessed. As Burke said, they judged "the pressure of the grievance by the badness of the principle' and "snuffed he approach of tyranny in every tainted breeze." They were the every tainted breeze." They were the most dangerous people in the world to meddle with because they were ready to fight, not to avenge wrongs which indeed they had not suffered, but to maintain principles on which their rights and liberty rested. The English ministry had begun to assail those principles. They were making clumsy and hesitating attempts to take money from the colonies without leave of the people, and George in a belated way was trying to be a king and revive an archy of Charles I. Hence came resistance, very acute in one colony, shared more or less by all. Hence the congress in Philadelphia and the great popular movement starting as if inevitably in that quiet colonial town among the freest portion of the liberty loving English race. - Senator Henry Cabot Lodge in Scribner's.

Meant Business.

Deep gloom and recklessness struggled for supremacy on the expressive countenance of the young man. He fiercely rejected the cup of soothing tea his sister were shopping together!" "No matter," persisted the encouraging young woman. "No matter. Don't you give her up-if you really like her, as I'm sure I don't see why you should, for if ever'

"All right; I will. But I was only going to say that you'll be a foolish boy if you give her up just because you happened to see her with 'that fool Peters' in "They're engaged. I could see that," persisted the unhappy one.

"How could you? Was it a jeweier's?

Was he fitting rings to her fingers?' "No! It was much worse. It was a stove store, and they were pricing gas ranges. Now do you believe?" And the skeptical sister announced her entire conversion to the engagement theory .- New York Journal.

Spoonsful and Mouthsful.

Heaven forfend that with rash hand I should rip open the chronic controversy as to the proper plural of spoonful et hoo genus omne. At present, and for the present, that controversy is happily slumbering, and I would say, nonmolestar il can che dorme. It is very sure to wake up ere long and vex us. Yet I cannot refrain from citing one word of that class which, strange to say, has hitherto been overlooked in the controversy and which yet ought to be decisive of it. That word is mouthful. Now if the advocates of spoonsful, etc., have any pretensions to consisten-cy, they must doubtless maintain that the proper plural of this word is mouthsful. Well, if so, I would only submit that if any person should be directed to take a mouthsful of milk or tea he would be tempted to ask-like Sydney Smith when enjoined by his doctor to take an occasional walk on an empty stomachwhose?-Notes and Queries.

Edwin Booth

The Generosity of the Great Tragedian to His Fel low Actors.

The members of his own family and his nost intimate friends never heard of half the good he did.

Sitting in his room in the Players, when his physical decay was first be-coming manifest, I told him of a letter I had just received from the daughter of one of the old comedians, in which she offered the club a portrait of her father. Booth had received a letter from her to the same purport. Would I write for both of us in reply? Her note was on his desk across the room, that black bordered one on the top of a pile of unanswered epistles, he said, just at my hand. I picked it up and read aloud, "My dear Mr. Booth, how can I ever thank you for your great liberality"- "No, no; not that one-the next." The next began, "I do not know what to say to you for your wonderful generosity"— "No, no; not that either." And he picked up the whole package and threw them into an open drawer, ashamed that I should unwittingly have discovered some of his beneficiaries

Another old friend of Booth, a superan

nuated actor, and a very aged man, lunched with him one day at the Players. The weather was threatening as he left, and his host sent him home in a carriage. The guest was very much affected when they parted, and tried to say something, in a half tearful way, which Booth would not let him utter. After he had gone some one spoke of the gentleness and sweetness of the veteran's character, and said it was to be hoped that he had managed to save enough to keep his body and his soul together for the little time that was left to him here. "Oh, yes, he's all right!" replied Booth. "He has something to support him comfortably as long as he lives, poor dear. And I'm glad of it." After Booth had passed away it was learned that the something, more than enough, was furnished by Booth, who had invested $9,000 in an annuity to cheer his fellow player's declining years. But he did not even hint of such a deed. He simply said, "I am glad of it!"—Laurence Hutton in
