Facts About the Harbor and the City of Havana.

The bay of Havana is one of the finest harbors in the world. It is sufficiently spacious to hold 1,000 large ships and deep enough to allow them to load and unload at the wharves. It is easy of access. The entrance is 980 feet wide and 4,200 feet long. Havana presents a picturesque appearance from the sea. At one time the city was surrounded by walls, but they have been demolished of late years. The erection of wooden structures has been prohibited since 1772 and the houses are mostly of stone, with flat roofs. White marble is lavishly used in decorations. Cafes, restaurants and clubs are very numerous and well patronized and there is little of that home life which forms the mainstay of American cities. The streets are narrow, the water supply good and the sanitation bad. There are over twenty churches. The principal is the cathedral, built by Jesuits in 1724, containing the tomb of Columbus, and richly frescoed walls. There are seven hospitals, orphan asylums, home for vagrants and several charitable institutions. Theatres, public drives, promenades and gardens are numerous. The city has a large trade in tobacco, sugar, cod fish, flour, lard, wine and oil. There are over 100 first class cigar factories in the city. The Royal and Imperial factory of La Honraez occupies a square and makes 2,532,000 cigarettes daily. Havana is strongly fortified. The famous El Morro castle was erected in 1589 and fort La Punta in the same year. The castle of Artes dates from 1763. Cabana castle has accommodations for 4,000 men; it fronts the bay for 800 yards and is defended on the land side by three bastions. The city was originally founded in 1515; in 1528 buccaners laid it in ashes. The pirate, Jacob Scro, plundered it in 1555 and Drake threatened to take it in 1585. The English, under Pocock and Albemarle, captured it in 1762, but it was returned to the Spaniards in exchange for the Florida.

Steamers ply regularly between Havana and the principal North and South American and European ports. The population of the city and suburbs is about 250,000, including about 75,000 free negroes and slaves. The average rate of mortality is 27 per 1,000 annually. Yellow fever is prevalent from June to September.

Mrs. Manning Elected.

She Defeats Mrs. McLean and Mrs. Brackett for President General of the D. A. R.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—The election of officers of the Daughters of the American Revolution, assembled in congress here, was not finished to-night. The vice presidents general and historian general yet remain to be elected. Mrs. Daniel Manning was elected president general, receiving 396 votes. Mrs. Donald McLean received 110 votes, and Mrs. Rose Brackett 22. Mrs. A. D. Brackett, of Virginia, was elected vice president general in charge of organization of chapters. Mrs. Charles A. Stakley, of Washington, was re-elected chaplain general. The recording secretary general elected was Mrs. Albert Ackers; Register general, Miss Sue Hetzel; treasurer general, Mrs. Mark B. Hatch, these being also of Washington. Other officers elected were Mrs. Robert S. Hatcher, of Maryland, assistant historian general, and Mrs. Gertrude Bascom Darwin, librarian general.

When the nominations for the 20 vice presidents were reached Mrs. Page Morris, of Minnesota, was nominated for vice president of that State by Mrs. J. B. Beal, who said she represented the regents of St. Paul chapter and the general voice of that chapter. An objection was raised by Mrs. Torrence, not against Mrs. Morris personally, but because she was unknown to the Daughters of the State. She said Mrs. Newport, State regent, was the candidate for the State. Mrs. Newport declined to have her name used, saying she had not resigned her office of State regent to seek a higher office, but preferred to serve the organization as a high private. The discussion over this nomination was quite animated. After Mrs. Newport's withdrawal Mrs. Torrence said Miss Mesosa did not wish any office, but Mrs. Mesosa's name stands for election. Among the nominating speeches which attracted attention was that of Mrs. C. B. Bryan, of Memphis, who named Mrs. Donald McLean for president. Mrs. T. J. Latham, of Memphis also received praise for the manner in which she placed in nomination Mrs. Keim.

Burial of Miss Frances Willard.

The last rites over the body of Frances Willard, president of the Woman's Christian Temperance union, were performed at Evanston, Ill., Feb. 24th. The city was in mourning, schools and business houses being closed and flags at half mast out of respect for the dead leader. Private services were first held at "Rest Cottage," Miss Willard's home, at which were present only the relatives and most intimate friends and the officers of the Woman's Christian Temperance union. A prayer was offered by Mrs. L. M. Stevens, acting president of the Woman's Christian Temperance union, and after the hymn, "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," had been sung by those present, the casket was conveyed to the First Methodist Episcopal church, which was filled to the doors, and where the final services were held, led by Rev. Dr. Frank M. Bristol, Miss Willard's former pastor. Addresses were made by President Henry Wade Rogers, president of Northwestern university; Rev. Dr. Charles Little, Mrs. Louisa Rounds, Mrs. John S. Dotter, of Iceland; Mrs. Katherine L. Stephenson and Mrs. Clara Hoffman. The casket was covered with flowers, almost every country and state being represented by some floral piece. Interment was in Rose Hill cemetery.

The following is a complete list of the maiden names of the mothers of the Presidents of the United States: Washington, Mary Ball; John Adams, Susanna Boylston; Jefferson, Jane Randolph; Madison, Nellie Conway; Monroe, Eliza Jones; J. Q. Adams, Abigail Smith; Andrew Jackson, Elizabeth Hutchinson; Van Buren, Maria Hoes; Harrison, Elizabeth Bassett; Tyler, Mary Armstrong; Polk, Jane Knox; Taylor, Sarah Strother; Fillmore, Phoebe Millard; Pierce, Anna Kendrick; Buchanan, Elizabeth Spear; Lincoln, Nancy Hanks; Johnson, Mary McDonough; Grant, Hannah Simpson; Hayes, Sophia Birchard; Garfield, Elizabeth Ballou; Arthur, Malvina Stone; Cleveland, Annie Neale; Harrison, Elizabeth Irwin; McKinley, Nancy Campbell Allison.

Willow Culture in Europe.

Europeans cultivate willow alongside of wheat. France leads, and Germany and Holland stand high in willow culture. In Germany there are 40,000 persons engaged in making willow baskets, and 50,000 acres of land are used in growing the willow for them. The culture of the willow is the simplest thing in the way of cropping. A twig stuck into the moist ground is all that is required. Nature does the rest. For fine basket work Salix amygdaloides is the queen of willows, although Salix purpurea and viminalis are also extensively used. In France the willow grower does not hesitate to plant good wheat lands in willow. In regions where lumber is scarce baskets replace cases, boxes and trunks. In the region of La Trémouille and Aracchon there are large plantations of willows and factories for the manufacture of rough baskets in which to ship their famous oysters. It is in the Low Countries the willow is used most. It serves for baskets of all kinds, fences, cattle racks, wagon tops, trunks, boxes and even the signals along the river and painted willow wickerwork. Foraminis wood they make their indispensable sabots, or wooden shoes. It serves still another purpose; when planted alongside their many dikes, it holds them in place and it constantly catches the sediment, increasing the depth and fertility of the soil. The beneficial effects of willows along the banks of streams and rivers cannot be over-estimated. The fertile soils washed down from the farm lands, instead of flowing into the sea, are caught by the willows along the shore. In that way streams are narrowed and consequently deepened. Away up in the mountains in France, where, owing to deforestation, the streams rush with much destructiveness down the steep mountain sides, they wind willow twigs in the shape of a hammock and throw it across the stream. These twigs soon sprout, take hold of the soil and force the stream to move in a zigzag way.

An Indian Mother's Devotion.

Wrapped Her Baby in Her Own Clothing and Perished That the Child Might Live.

Passengers by the Danube bring the story of the suffering of a party of Indians on the Dya trail. On Feb. 7th this party, including two squaws, started from Lake Linderman to the coast. They were out only a short time when a storm struck them and completely obliterated the trail. They roped a balsam log together and succeeded in making a little progress in this way. They had not proceeded far, however, before the rope snapped like a thread, throwing the two squaws a considerable distance down the mountain side. The heedless bucks left them there to perish, proceeding slowly along the trail until they reached a plateau.

In the meantime the woman, nearly up to their necks in the snow, sought to find the trail. One, encumbered by an infant strapped on her back, was soon compelled to abandon the search. Her companion left her, saying she would return with help if she herself could reach it. The couple were unstrapped her child and as the storm grew and cold became more intense, she stripped article after article from her own body to keep life in her child. When found next morning by a party of men who were crossing the trail, the full extent of her devotion was seen. In a half kneeling position the poor squaw was discovered stripped almost to the skin, with her hair warm and full of life, clasped in her arms. Nearly every serviceable portion of upper clothing had been taken from her body to keep warmth and life in the little one, and it was also discovered that even in this half nude condition she had managed to crawl along the trail after her party a considerable distance before death came.

For tickets, itineraries, and full information apply to ticket agents; tourist agent, 1196 Broadway, New York; Thomas E. Watt, passenger agent western district, Pittsburg, Pa.; or address George W. Boyd, assistant general passenger agent, Broad street station, Philadelphia.

Legal holidays have been increasing of late years in Pennsylvania in arithmetical ratio with each session of the Legislature. We have now twelve full legal holidays and fifty-two half holidays, the equivalent of thirty-eight full holidays in all. The legislature should be petitioned to stop right here. It has given us enough and to spare. The last legislature added the local election day and Lincoln's birthday, both in Feb. to the list of holidays, making three full holidays, besides four half holidays in a single month, and that the shortest one in the year. June, August and October, very good holiday months, have no full holidays at all. Perhaps there are not too many legal holidays if they were more evenly distributed throughout the year; but to appoint three within the short compass of eleven days, as we will always have in February until as the present law is changed, is a palpable absurdity.

—There is a rumor the Superior court is in danger of going to pieces, on account of the dissatisfaction of the judges with the business that comes to their tribunal and other reasons. Reader talks of resigning because of bad health, within a year, and, it is said, has gone to Europe for an indefinite time. One point of complaint is, that it is irksome to hold court so many different places in the State, the very thing the Court was instituted for, so that people of small means could reach it without the trouble and expense of going to the Supreme court.

"What a wonderful painter Rubens was!" remarked Mr. Jones at the art gallery. "Yes," assented Mrs. Jones. "It is said of him that he could change a laughing face into a sad one by a single stroke." "Why," spoke up little Johnny, in disgust, "my schoolmaster can do that."

Words of Wisdom.

When a girl comes home from school, and is as nice and modest as a girl who has not been away to school, it is a sign that she has extra good sense.

Personal consciousness is, perhaps, a higher and more satisfying proof of a life beyond the grave than any historical or logical proof that can be offered.

If some dealers worked as hard to build up their own business as they do to tear down that of their competitors, there wouldn't be so many failures to record.

"That love which is based on the mutual esteem of pure hearts, refracting and reflecting the ray of good qualities on each other, is alone productive of earthly joy."

If you want to accomplish anything as it should be done, you must go about it coolly, moderately, faithfully, heartily. Hurrying, fretting, fumbling, spluttering, will do no good.

If you mean to do something worthy of being remembered, mind your work well, but never mind your fame; leave that to time. He is the lawful administrator of all such affairs.

When the burdens of life rest heavily upon us, when sometimes a weight of despair seems to be settling down upon our hearts, then we know the value of sympathy, the need of a helping hand.

Principles are the demand of the honest men who believe something and who will not swerve from what they believe, and who are not time servers, weather cocks, fickle and variable; these are the characters most necessary to-day to the stability and progress of society.

Even With Her Cross-Examiner.

"Now," said the lawyer who was conducting the cross-examination, "will you please state how and where you first met this man?"

"I think," said the lady with the sharp nose, "that it was—"

"Never mind what you think," interrupted the lawyer. "We want facts here. We don't care what you think, and we haven't any time to waste in listening to what you think. Now, please tell us where and when it was that you first met this man."

"The witness made no reply. 'Come, come,' urged the lawyer. 'I demand an answer to my question. Still no response from the witness. 'Honor Your Honor,' said the lawyer, turning to the Court, 'I think I am entitled to an answer to the question I have put.'"

"The witness will please answer the question," said the Court in impressive tones. "Can't," said the lady. "Why not?"

"The Court doesn't care to hear what I think, does it?"

"No."

"Then there's no use questioning me any further. I am not a lawyer and can't talk without thinking."

So they called the next witness.—Cleveland Leader.

Influence of Wealth on Morality.

On the influence of wealth on morality, the Breslau statistician, Neefe publishes an interesting paper, in the Zeitschrift fuer Hygiene and Infektionskrankheiten. As a criterion of the means, the amount of the rent paid was taken. In 1893 there died of every 1,000 living persons who paid a rent up to 300 marks, 20.7; with a rent of 301 to 750 marks, 11.2; the rent ranging between 751 and 1,500 marks only 6.5; the average being 17.6 persons. While according to these figures the morality of the Breslau poor population is three times as large as that of the rich, it is in reality much larger, because the deaths not included therein (servants, journeymen, persons who died in the hospitals, etc.) may be assumed to belong almost exclusively to the first class. The greatest difference in the morality was, of course, shown by the babies; more than half of those born alive belonging to the poor population died in babyhood, while the deaths of babies of the rich amounted to only one-sixth.

Young Mr. Ware's Measles Took.

Late in January a Bangor boy named Ware took a boat from Bangorport for Sargentville where he soon fell sick with the measles, a disease which has not visited the eastern shores of Hancock county for some years. Immediately after young Ware was taken sick measles became popular. Spreading from Sargentville to Deer Isle, they invaded every school district, causing the schools to close and the directors busy for weeks. Moving out in wider circles, the disease swept through Sedgwick and Brookville, and crossing the Bagaduce invaded Castine. The Eastern Maine Normal school was in session, and nearly every student either came down with the measles or hurried home to have the disease where good nursing was handy. Up to date more than 400 persons have had the measles, and two have died from the disorder.—Bangor Daily News.

Hypnotizing a Hen.

"Did you ever hypnotize a chicken?" asked Police Commissioner Kind the other night. "It's dead easy. Just catch your hen, place it on the floor in front of you with its tail toward you. Take a piece of chalk and draw a straight line, beginning at a point just under the hen's head and extending a foot and a half or more. "The bird will fasten its eyes on the chalk, and in a twinkling almost she is unconscious of anything but that line. You can cuff and kick her about as much as you please, but her gaze will immediately return to the chalk line. When I was sailing before the mast it was not an unusual thing on a calm day, when there was no work in sight, to see a dozen or more sailors, each with a hen in his hands, drawing chalk marks. It is the most perfect case of complete hypnotism I ever saw. Just try it some time if you don't believe it."

Experimented with many others, but never got the true remedy until we used Dr. King's New Discovery. No other remedy can take its place in our home, as in it we have a certain and sure cure for coughs, colds, whooping cough, etc." It is idle to experiment with other remedies, even if they are urged on you as just as good as Dr. King's New Discovery. They are not as good, because this remedy has a record of cures and benefits is guaranteed. It never fails to satisfy. Trial bottles free at F. Potts Green's drug store.
