FARM NOTES.

SEEDING TIMOTHY IN SPRING. - The most common method of seeding timothy in this State is to sow on winter grains in autumn or spring, but preferably spring. In my experience spring seeding has always given best results, although I have occasionally secured a crop from sowing with fall wheat by means of the seeder found on most wheat drills. For sowing timothy on winter grains in spring I generally apply the seed with some kind of a seeder at the rate of ten to twelve pounds per acre when the ground is yet frozen, usually about the middle of March. The freezing and thawing cover the seed by the time the weather is warm enough to germinate it, and no further atenough to germinate it, and no further attention is necessary. Results will be satisfactory if during the spring and early summer rains are sufficiently frequent to keep the plant growing and enable it to get a good root growth. Should the season, however, be dry during the fore part, results will be disappointing. This has been notably true for the past four or five years, and other methods had to be adopted.

One that has proven quite satisfactory is to delay the seeding until the frost is all out of the wheat ground and the surface is quite mellow, and go over the field first with a light smoothing harrow. This will cover the seed to a sufficient depth and compact the upper layers of the soil so that enough moisture will be re-tained to induce germination and supply the young plants until roots are sufficiently developed to draw moisture from below. It is often advisable, however, to go over the field with a roller after harrowing. This will further compact the soil and assist in retaining the moisture. To one who has had no experience, this harrowing the wheat might appear to be a bad practice, as some of the plants are apparently torn out and roughly used. Experience proves, however, that instead of being a detriment, it is an advantage, resulting from a compact of the soil or a stirring around the roots. In a forty-acre wheat field, half of which was treated in this manner, and half of which was left untreated, the portion harrowed grew more vigorously and produced more wheat of a better quality than the other. I have tried this for a number of seasons, and the result has always been the same.

This method does not furnish a hay crop the first year, and to do this I have found that seeding timothy alone is by far the most satisfactory method. I prepare a piece of ground in the spring as for sowing oats, harrow it until the surface is moderately fine, then sow on the timothy seed, and go over the field once with a smoothing or brush harrow to cover it sufficiently. if conditions are favorable a crop of hay can be secured the first year. The young grass sometimes cannot keep down the weeds the first season, so when they are six or eight inches high the field must be gone over with a mower. Allow the tops to remain, and they will form a mulch for the young grass which will be greatly beneficial. Some season the growth will be sufficiently strong to keep down the weeds after that. If, however, it is not very vigorous, the weeds will have to be mowed twice. With this method a hay crop the first season must not be expected but a good crop is usually obtained, and a first-class yield will result the following

The main point of sowing grass seeds of all kinds is to have them covered just enough to enable the young plants to get considerable root growth before dry weath er comes on. This can only be done by having a firm, compact soil and the seeds moderately well covered. The old practice of sowing seeds on top of the ground, plowed or unplowed, must be discontinued, as droughts are now so frequent that the method is wholly impracticable.

—In crossing a registered Ayrshire sire with a registered Jersey or Guernsey the offspring would be simply a cross bred ani-mal, without the value which would belong to either parent as a pure bred ani-

Both sire and mother are from a long line of clear, well defined tendencies in certain directions. These tendencies are what are known as breed characteristics, which have been bred in and for so long a time as to establish a prepotency in each, contrary somewhat to the other. Where prepotencies clash with each other, there does not result a congenial union, or, as we say in breeding, they do not "nick"

You would gain nothing by such a cross, for if the calf was a male his breeding power could not be in a straight line, but would naturally be confused. In a word, he would have no well established prepo-tent power, either in the Ayrshire direction or the Guernsey or Jersey direction. We must always breed with some definite idea of direction, purpose, result.

But the case is different when it comes to breeding grades with thoroughbred sires. For instance grade Ayrshire cows, when bred to registered Jersey or Guernsey sires, produce almost invariably most excellent dairy cows, having good constitutions, decided dairy temperament, a good long flow of milk, with a considerable increase of per cent. of butter fat over their mother. In this case, the breeding potency of the female is not so strong as that of the male, and no warring tendency is set up. The 'nick' is kindly and a tendency is established for increased richness of milk, with a little or no decrease of flow. When the union was the other way, a registered Ayrshire sire and grade Jersey or Guernsey cow, we would actually look for an increase of the Ayrshire qualities in the off-spring, because of the control of the superior potency of the sire. Prepotency any given direction is the result of breeding in a straight line for many generations. The life currents all set in one direction. There are no cross purposes in the blood. For this reason every dairyman should For this reason every dairyman should make it a point to have a registered bull at the head of his herd. He should select according to his desire. If for milk rich in butter fat, select the Jersey or Guernsey. If for large quantity of milk, and of necessity less rich in butter fat, select either the Holstein or Ayrshire, and keep breeding in a straight line. Some farmers who have never studied well these "lines of life" and what their results will be are very much given to the making of "hash" in their breeding. You will see them in their breeding. You will see them shifting from Jersey to Holstein, then to

Sigsbee Says It Was Treachery. The Commander of the Maine Declares His Ship

WASHINGTON, April 11.-The House committee on foreign affairs met at 10.30 this morning. Captain Sigsbee, Admiral Irwin and several experts in explosives had been summoned to give testimony regarding the blowing up of the Maine. Representative Quigg, of New York, before he entered the committee room, said that Spain would be held responsible for the blowing up of the Maine. He is in favor of reporting a resolution instructing the President to drive Spain from the western hemisphere. "I think there should be concerted action be-tween the Executive and the two houses of Congress,'' said he. "The President should call both committees to the White House this afternoon and read the message to them. The message should hold Spain strictly accountable, and the answer of Congress should be a resolution directing him to drive Spain from the western hem-isphere. That resolution should be report-ed to both houses to-morrow immediately after the message goes in and in my opin-ion passed without debate."

It has developed that the House committee on foreign affairs made a tentative proposition to the Senate committee on foreign relations to meet in joint session to secure concerted action, but up to the present time the Senate committee has not acepted the invitation.

Captain Sigsbee, of the Maine, was the first witness examined by the committee on foreign affairs this morning.

BLOWN UP BY A MINE. Captain Sigsbee, in the course of his examination before the House committee on foreign affairs, stated it to be his opinion that his vessel, the Maine, was blown up by a submarine mine located by the Spanish authorities. As to whether it was fired by the Spanish authorities or not he declined to express an opinion. He told the committee what he had testified to before the board of inquiry about the buoy to which the Maine was anchored being the most unfrequented buoy in the harbor. The position in which the ship was placed, he said, was such that he could have fired upon both forts at the same time.

The committee is to meet again to-night to prepare the text of the resolution to be submitted to the House. The members of the committee from the information they have believe war is inevitable unless Spain makes a square backdown. An intimation is thrown out that a declaration of war will not be made just yet, in any event, because consul-general Lee has cabled that it will require several days to get the Americans

The foreign affairs committee of the House at noon adjourned until to-morrow. The members had all pledged themselves to secrecy, the only thing they would admit being that Captain Sigsbee had been before them. Mr. Adams, acting chairman, came on to the floor of the House with a large photograph of two starving Cu-ban girls. Members crowded about him as he displayed it for inspection.

The Republicans of the House foreign affairs committee were hurriedly called together at 3 o'clock this afternoon
