FARM NOTES.

The Selection of Trees, Climbers, and Their Dis-

and planters for many helpful suggestions in his planting. While he enjoys his broad acres of growing grain and fruit, he cannot overlook the abounding beauties of trees, home adornment, for the delight of parents, children, and grandchildren, to the third generation, "no place to them like grandpa's country home." First, I must give the lay of the land, how and why planted, and my selection of trees, shrubs, and vines, and their arrangement for color effect, continuity of bloom, and adaptation to my special conditions. Springdale Farm fronts south on public highway and electric railway, connecting our college town of Oberlin on the west with the City of Cleveland, O., on the east, some 30 miles distant. The house is the picture, it must be set in a frame like "apples of gold in pictures of silver." One acre of upland is devoted to south and west lawns and family garden, one-half acre of gently sloping hillside on the east with winding pathways through "Evergeen Grove" lead to the "Water Garden," at the foot of the declivity. Beyond is "Lawn Park," of one and one-half acres, bounded by highway, running brook, and sloping banks. The north and northwest must be screened from my own and neighbors' barns and out-buildings. The boundary between west lawn and apple orchard must be defined by suitable planting. This marginal border must be useful as well as ornamental. mental. It must not be so dense as to cut off desirable vistas, sunshine, and gentle breezes. It must be continuous for some distance, but it must not be a monotony of continuity of sky-line if it would be beautiful. We must inquire of Nature's methods. She would not go at it with the surveyor's chain; she would have no air lines but lines of beauty. Her marginal lines would be those of the babbling brook. While the plow would determine the form on the orchard side, the skill of the planter, aided by his teacher, Nature, should be the planter of the planter determine the trend of the lawn side of it. Nature would plant here a thicket or group of congenial trees and shrubs. They must harmonize their differences of form of growth, color of foliage or of flower. For variety, she will scatter here and there some of her choicer gems in a scattered border. Then would group again with other and new material from her jewels. Again she would make a break and give us sunlight, gentle breezes and a vista of Nature has her pets. Here and there, somewhat disconnected from group, thicker masses, yet related to them, she would place one of her "specimen trees" that had place one of her "specimen trees" that had such commanding presence, that it could stand out alone in this world. At special coigns of vantage she would plant her jewels of the first water. Nature would not scatter her shot, hit and miss, all over the lawn, she would give a broad and generous stretch of unobstructed lawn. The groups and combinations of groups are the groups and combinations of groups, are the keystone to artistic planting. These groups should be backed and centered by suitable evergreens for background to the planting, and for color during the winter season-so much for the arrangement.

Space will not permit further applica-tion of these laws, but the note will give the key to the problem. "Only experience and study of examples can make perfect this most difficult art in landscape work," so says Mr. Thomas Meehan, in a recent letter. So much for "color effect."

The more we study the material for landscape work, the more we are awed by the prodigality of Nature and the skill of the propagator in this direction. We certainly cannot afford to ignore their labors. Where shall we begin? What shall we select and what reject? As an example, take the European Beech. Fagus sylvatica, from which we have the Fern-leaved Beech, var, asplenifolia; 2, the Cut-leaved Beech, var, laciniata; 3, the Purple-leaved Beech, var. purpurea; 4. the Blood red-leaved The more we study the material for var, purpurea; 4, the Blood red-leaved var, purpurea; 4, the Blood red-leaved Beech, var, Riversil; 5, the Weeping Beech, var, pendula; 6, the Weeping Purple-leaved Beech, var, purpurea pendula, and these are not all. With such a progeny from one parent, all good, some of them the very best, what shall we select? We fact your saves and shalter so we begin first want screens and shelter so we begin with the evergreens.

Evergreens, for screens and shelter: Norway Spruce, and Hemlock, and American White Spruce.

For marginal outlines: Arbor vitæ, vars. George Peabody, pyramidalis, Douglasii, orientalis. For filling in and grouping: Retinospora plumosa, aurea, squarrosa, obtusa and filifera; Arbor vitaes, siberian and obtusa. For specimen trees: Colorado Blue Spruce (Picea pungens), Colorado Blue Fir (Picea concolor.

Specimen trees on lawn: Andromeda arborea, Aralia, Prunus Padus, Virgilia lutea. Glyptostrobus sinense, Koelreuteria, Magnolia tripatala, Salisburia, Morus alba (Tee's Weeping), Camperdown Elm, Viburnum Seiboldi variegata.

Shrubbery for grouping or bedding arranged according to height, the taller varieties in front of evergreens or other centers of groups. The smaller ones in front of these and so on, bringing the group down to the ground line, having regard to harmony of color and time of blooming:

How to Subscribe for the New Bonds.

The war loan which is now being offered will be sold to subscribers at par during the period of subscription, which ends July 14th 1898. The method of subscription has been made as simple as possible. Blank forms may be obtained at every money-order post office, and at most of the banks and express offices, and on The writer is a farmer, and would acknowledge his obligations to both growers these forms is clearly indicated al! that is necessary for the subscriber to fill out. The subscriber may himself mail to the treasury department at Washington the blank form filled out, together with his remittance covering the par value of the amount of bonds for which he wishes to shrubs, vines, and plants on every hand. subscribe. The remittance may be in what-so he has consecrated about three acres of upland, hillside, and fertile bottom for venience—in currency, bank draft, check, post office order, or express money order. The day the currency is received, or the day the proceeds are received from the checks, drafts, or money orders, the subscription will be entered and will immediately begin drawing interest. When the bonds are delivered, a check will accompany each delivery covering the interest at 3 per cent from the day the subscription is en-tered to the 1st of August, the date of the bonds, and from which date the bonds will carry their own interest. There are two kinds of bonds issued-coupon and registered bonds.

COUPON BONDS. A coupon bond is payable to the bearer. It may be bought and sold without formality as freely as any kind of property and without endorsement of any kind. Owing to the freedom of transfer, coupon bonds are usually preferred by persons who expect to hold them but a short time. Their disadvantage for the person who wishes disadvantage for the person who wishes to make a permanent investment lies in the danger that they might be lost or stolen, in which case the loss to the owner would be as complete as would be the loss of a bank note. The coupon bonds take their name from the method by which interest is collected by the holder.

Printed on the same sheet with the bond is a series of coupons or small certificates of interest due, which are so designed that one is cut off at each interest period. Each coupon bears the number of the bond and shows the date of the coupon's maturity. The holder of a coupon bond, at each interest period, detaches the coupon due that day and collects it. The coupon due that day and collects it. The coupons are payable at any sub-treasury, and may be collected through any bank, and will usually be accepted by any merchant having a bank account, with whom the holder of the bond has dealings. The holder of a coupon bond may at any time have it converted into a registered bond free of charge. Coupon bonds are issued in denominations of $20. bonds are issued in denominations of $20, $100, $500 and $1000.

REGISTERED BONDS. A registered bond is payable to the order of the owner, and can only be transferred by being properly indorsed and assigned by the owner. Such assignment is made by the owner filling the blank form on the back of the bond, and must be witnessed by some officer authorized by the regulations of the treasury department to witness assignments. The owner of the registered bond who wishes to part with it writes his If the owner of a registered bond looses department will issue a duplicate bond upon proof of loss and a bond of indemnity being furnished.

There was no evidence of her guilt, however, and she was soon discharged. She begged a girl acquaintance to give her shelter for the night. At midnight the girl was found violently ill, and an empty vial nearby told the story of her sickness.

To the Democrats of Pennsylvania. New York Journal's Advice to the Voters of this Fellow Democrats for you the political sky is bright, the air stimulating, and on the horizon rises the bright sun of victory. Your opponents are hopelessly rent asunder by internal dissensions. The arbitrary and corrupt element in the Republican party has again enforced its will upon the so-called state convention, and has submitted to the action of the voters candidates who are but the creatures and the pliant tools of Matthew S. Quay.

Republican voters to whom long years of boss domination have left any vestige of self-respect and political independence are up in arms against the dictators who offer them a ticket so repugnant to morality and liberty.

The one thing which can save for the Republican party of Pennsylvania any shred of its honor is defeat, accomplished by the revolt of its voters. This fact Republicans recognize, and the revolt is already apparent.

To turn this situation into a epochal victory for Democracy it is only necessary for you to adopt that political course which will be most wise because it is most honest. The Journal urges upon you this program .
BE HONEST.—Nominate strong, clean men ; loyal Democrats every one. BE LOYAL.—Put state issues first in your

of Democratic principle. BE AGGRESSIVE.—Force the fighting.

Put the enemy on the defensive from the first. BE MERCILESS.—Expose remorselessly the alliance of the Republican bosses, the political banks and the state treasury.

BE RADICAL.—Don't be mealy-mouthed. Go into this fight to hurt your enemy. Go into it to expose and to end the political scandals which have been on every man's tongue in your state though your "great" papers have assiduously suppressed them.

BE BRAVE.—If in your attack upon cor-ruption you come upon a so-called Demo-crat don't protect him. Expose him and kick him out. So shall you win public confidence and votes.

If you will adopt this course, if fearlessly, remorsely, intelligently, radically and devotedly you will attack Quayism and uphold Democracy, the Journal pledges you its fullest support. It will make your battle its own. It will join in the camnaign in Pennsylvenia of the religious paign in Pennsylvania as though it were being fought in its own state of New York. And it believes that the end of a bastle so fought can only be a glorious victory—victory that shall free Pennsylvania from the arrogant domination of a boss; victory that will make Pennsylvania Democrats a powerfull force to be reckoned with in the national campaign of 1900.

The Pennsylvania Railroad's Popular Excursions to the Seashore.

No other summer outing appeals so strongly to the people of western Pennsylvania than the Pennsylvania railroad company's popular excursions to the Atlantic seacoast. ### The Highly Gifted Cow.

It is said that something bordering on the miraculous has lately happened at Tickton, a village in Yorkshire. One has heard that bits of the true cross discovered themselves by raising dead men to life, and relics of saints were tested by their ability to heal diseases; but what will be thought of a cow discovering a sacred vessel, thought disgnised as a trough? Yet such is the story. A farmer bought what he thought was a drinking trough for his cattle, which did very well for all his stock but one, and this was a court but was a low that this was a cow that never would drink from it. This causing some inconvenience the farmer mentioned it, until the fact came to the ears of a local antiquarian, who on examination pronounced the supposed trough to be a font, and further research showed that it had once stood in the village church. It has now been recovered and replaced.—English Country Newspaper.

Shakers in Georgia.

At Brunswick, Saturday last, the Shaker society of Union village, Ohio, concluded the purchase of 51,000 acres of Georgia land, situated in Pierce, Ware and Charlton counties. The deal involves about $125,000, and a portion of the purchase money has been paid. The purpose of the purchase, it is announced, is to develop a part of the land for stock and sheep-raising and to dispose of the remainder to a decir and to dispose of the remainder to a desirplatform, but don't abandon one iota able class of northwestern farmers. It is understood that the Shakers will devote their personal attention to developing this land. They have already invested over $30,000 in Glynn county farms, and it is their purpose to eventually move the en-tire Ohio Shaker colony to Georgia. They have over a half million dollars invested in Ohio, and the bringing of this sum to Georgia will, it is thought, prove vastly beneficial to the state.

> -After diligent searches and extensive explorations through old folk lore a bright chap has brought to light the origin of the expression "to put in apple pie order." In the Puritanical days of old the frugal house wife was accustomed, every Saturday, to bake a dozen or so apples pies, dried or other wise, which were to constitute the week's supply. They were arranged upon the shelves and labeled for each day of the week in order that Tuesday's pie might not be confused with Saturday evening's pie. Monday's washday pastries were presumably larger than those reserved for the periods when household duties were lighter, and had more "fillin." The apple pie order was in vogue, it is asserted, in many entire communities and thusly has the expression been handed down to us along with the other fading memories of early colonial days.
