THE SUBALTERN.

The day had been overcharged with the sun and unfanned by any wind; the white sand in the streets had attained to such a heat that people moved across it hurriedly. But at eight o'clock a fresh breeze blew in from the bay, and Sandy McDuff bared his head to it with a sigh of relief. Sandy was sitting in front of the headquarters of one of the infantry regiments, talking with the colonel, two captains and a subaltern. The camp was set up in a grove of Florida pines. McDuff listened very attentively to everything that the colonel and the cap-tains had to say; for these men had smelled powder, felt steel and heard the Indian war whoop. But he closed his ear to the sub. (who talked a great deal), and put him down as a wind bag. Perhaps the reason for this was that Sandy was a scribbler, and felt that there was good copy in what the other man had to say. He lit a Cuban eigarette, and mentioned the recent victory of the American fleet over the Spanish. The sub. slapped his knee and turned to the colonel.

"By thunder, sir," he exclaimed, ; those fellows deserve all they get. It would give me keen pleasure to meet one last meeting. They sat down, and Mcface to face and shoot him down like a

The colonel looked at him for a few seconds without speaking. Then he said: "Mr. Brown, you may hate a man, and think nothing is too bad for him; but when you have to kill one you will not consider it such a keen pleasure."

Brown did not reply to this, and the colonel seemed lost in sombre thought. Sandy was rather pleased with what he considered the "sitting upon" of the young lieutenant. One of the dearest clauses of his philosophy was that the men who talked least about fighting are the ones who fight best.

One of the captains, who had served in the cavalry against the Indians, told a story of a major of Irish extraction.

"We were out on rather a rough campaign with this major in command," he began. 'Twenty-five friendly Blackfeet, hired as trailers and scouts, were put in my charge. One night the major sent a note over to me which read something like this: 'Send over six of your lazy Indians to do guard

"I resented this name when applied to my own men, so the first thing in the morning I went over with them myself. I saluted, reported the men ready for duty, and then told the major that, first of all, my command was not lazy, and second, that they were here to act as scouts and trailers, and knew nothing of regular military work. The major requested me to remember that we were a long way from the post and that he was my superior officer. I bowed, and returned to my own tent. Half an hour later those six Indians were back in their quarters. I returned with them immediately and tried to make excuses for them, saying again that they were unfit for sentry duty. The major was in a woeful rage.

"You say they are trailers," he cried; "then bring them over here double quick." He called to one of his men and ordered him to drive two stakes into the ground at a distance of about 200 yards from one another. Then the Major gave a carbine to one of the redskins and told him to shoulder it. Now, you red idiot,' he said; 'do

"All right; spend the next two hours story, and then McDuff said "Good-night" and started back for the town

Three evenings later McDuff returned from a hot ride and went up onto the second balcony to cool off. McDuff was painfully surprised. "Why didn't he tell me that he had been landing Cubans ever since the declaration of war?" he groaned.

A week went by and still the troops were not ordered on board the transports, and still the war correspondents waited for the countersigning of their passes. Mc-Duff grew tired of rushing about all day asking people what they knew, so he decided to lie low and do some work. He found that if he tried to write during the day he lost too much flesh, and at night he was nearly killed by divers insects. turned out a few hundred words every morning before breakfast, and spent the rest of his day reading W. war correspondent. 'Yes," replied the officer, "it made good newspaper story; but I am sorry it came in my way. Remember what the colonel said the other night about killing a man? Well, the colonel was right. One of the three fellows who had hold of the correspondent was a young captain—a man who had received his education in America. He and I were very close friends once. About five years ago he went home to Spain, and last week I shot him while he was looking straight into my eyes-just beginning to recogize me. The man I rescued wasn't worth that, I think."

Then Brown put his face in his hands and cursed the necessity of war.-N. Y. In-

Queer Trades of Parisians.

In a great city like Paris there is a large number of persons who gain their living honorable enough, but in exercising professions the most extraordinary. One seeing them at work would not think that they could do well, and wonder why they do it. A little attention will explain the mystery.

There is the searcher for gold or jewelshe lives by sewers. You will see him in waiting near their openings, a net in hand, snapping up and selecting from all that comes out of them.

Sometimes he finds objects of gold or silver, which, after many turns of fortune, come to be lost, or rather found there.

And there is the person who looks through eggs. His business consists in looking at the inside of eggs without breaking them, naturally. His procedure is very simple. The eggshell has a certain transparency, which permits him to judge of the extent of the empty space which is found at one of the ends. The larger the space the older the egg and with experience a "regarder of eggs" can fix the date to within a few hours; he can tell the age of the hen.

There is the crow chaser. This is a little girl or boy, who aids his parents by gaining three or four cents a day. ## The Secret of Good Looks.

As a rule women wash their faces too or a change?" replied McDuff.

At that moment the band struck into frequently. It is far from being the best way to clean the face, more especially "The Star Spangled Banner," and everyone where rain-water cannot be procured. This should be used quite frequently, but soap ticed a familiar head and shoulders at the other side of the room, surrounded by attentive uniforms. The C. Arthur Pearson company of London, which publishes 11 weekly periodicals and one monthly, is said to be an ideal establishment in its treatment of employes, who are given all Saturday for a holiday, and an annual festivity.

A Swiss firm has bought a ribbon saw worked by electricity which is able to cut logs over a yard thick. The electric motor s of six-horse power, and the saw runs at a speed of more than 100 feet per second. The saw itself can travel along a track and cut the logs from end to end as it goes.

Important experiments with the use of the electric light for coast-defense purposes were recently carried out at Portsmouth. It was found that a beam of light, sufficient to detect the presence of a torpedo craft, could be projected from the forts for several miles over the water, thus covering Spithead, the Solent and Southampton.

The director of the agricultural school at Neisse, Germany, reports that the best way of preserving eggs is to keep them in soluble glass, and the next best way is to coat them with vaseline and keep them in lime water. He condemns unreservedly the practice to which many people pin their faith-of keeping the eggs in brine. They do not decay but become unpalatable from being saturated with salt.

Double dealing like so many other expressions in the Anglo-Saxon language has different meanings. The text or heading does not refer to the deceitful, hypocritical specimens of manhood who carry favor for their own ends and keep the community in ferment by retailing scraps of confidence. This time it is the double dealing of the little conqueror. Doan's Kidney Pills—to be more correct—the double healing. One member of a family tests them and like disease the infection spreads—another tries them—the result is the same, a cure. by Mr. Curtis Johnson, of 583 Bishop street, freight and truck man who says:

"I had backache and lameness across my loins for a year or more. At times the lameness was acute I could lift nothing and if I stooped it was impossible for me to straighten up. When driving there was a steady aching over my kidneys the whole time and I had a dull, tired feeling which took away all my ambition. I procured Doan's Kidney Pills from F. Potts Green's drug store and they soon freed me from the whole combination of troubles and they did it quickly and thoroughly. My wife was also suffering from a tiresome, grinding backache and she used Doan's Kidney Pills and they invigorated her generally. She now speaks of them as highly as I do. We never came across any remedy which surpassed Doan's Kidney Pills.
