FARM NOTES.

-A remedy for the cabbage worm. "Is there any preventive or remedy for the cabbage worm?" Yes, both a preventive and a remedy. I wish to say that I farmed for many years and tried many plans to obstruct the ravages of the cabbage worm, so called, or the cabbage caterpillar. I found a weak pickle, made of rock salt, with a little to be most effectual both as a preventive and as a remedy. Table salt will not do; it has been often tried. I cannot say I have made an exact formula, but about a pint and a half to a common pail of water I have found both a preventive and a remedy. The kind of salt I generally used was the sort used by packers in packing pork. A man can sprinkle two rows of cabbage with a small whisk as he walks cabage with a small whist as ne walks along between them. I never gave more than two applications of this remedy, and if a farmer has to give three he will not grudge his labor to have nice clean cabbages. The injury done last year by them was very serious. Common water runs off cabbage, but this pickle sticks, every drop and particle where it falls; and the butterflies turn away from it as if they knew by instinct that it does not suit them as a place to deposit their eggs for the develop-ment of their offspring. But it is better after all to kill and destroy the butterfly, the parent of the caterpillar, than trying to get rid of its progeny. But how is this to be done? Not in sending boys after them with a scoop net to catch them singly. Why not first attract them all into one place and then dispose of them by the wholesale? It is too late in the season now for this, but I would advise any farmer who intends planting cabbages next year to save some turnips and plant them in a short row in or near the field where he intends to plant his cabbages. He must watch and mind the time of planting, and when these are in blossom every butterfly within a circle of a mile around will come and light on these turnip blossoms. As the season advances he will find them there by the hundred, or thousand, collected together in one place. Then it will not require much of a genius to find means to destroy them. He can poison them, or shoot them, or whip a net over them, or destroy them by some other means, for he has them all together and may thus destroy the parents of the cabbage caterpillar .- Philadelphia Record.

-Making and keeping cider. To make good cider, good, sound, well ripened, clean apples must be used, and no others. It is better to crush them than to grate them. Everything about the mill with which the apples, pomace, or cider can come in contact must be clean—perfectly so. The apple juice, when expressed from the pomace, must be filtered so as to take out every particle of apple or solid matter which may be floating in it. Cleanly washed sand is sometimes used, and animal charcoal; but probably a mass of perfectly clean cotton, or cotton cloth of many thicknesses will be found to be as good as any-in any way moved or meddled with until May following, and it will be still better to let it stand longer before drawing from You can draw from it some time before it will be necessary to admit air through

APPETITE AND AMBITION .- "I was tired and had no appetite or ambition. I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and it gave me permanent relief. I attribute my present good health to the fact that Hood's Sarsaparilla has purified and enriched my blood, and I earnestly recommend it for a debilitated system." Miss Mary Honecker, St. Clair, Pa
