The Decker Reunion. On Thursday, July 21st, the Decker family held a reunion at the old homestead in College township which was so successful that a permanent association was formed to make arrangements for the annual meeting of the family and its friends. The day was pleasantly spent in social intercourse, enjoying the good dinner and supper and arranging for a permanent organization.

The meeting was called to order by Rev. G. W. Leisher, of Bealeburg, and after devotional exercises he stated that the purpose of the meeting was to organize an association for the annual reunion of the family on the second Wednesday of August at the old home. The officers chosen were: Dan Ripka, president; Frederick Decker, vice president; Miffin D. Snyder, secretary, and Charles E. Decker, historian. An invitation from the Decker association of Canton, Ohio, was read but as it was impossible to meet with it was decided to return greetings and thanks and hold the reunion on the same day as the Canton association observed.

Among the one hundred who were present were Frederick Decker and his wife Elizabeth, the father and mother of the family; their daughter Lydia R. and her husband, John Houser, with three of their family; Mrs. M. Ellen Decker Besides and her six children; Thomas Decker, his wife and three children; Mrs. Priscilla Decker, her husband, Wesley, and their four children; Charles Decker, his wife and one son; Mrs. Anna Decker Reifsnnyder and her son; Mrs. Susie Decker O'Bryan, her husband Pearson, and their daughter Lottie E.; Adam Krumrine and his wife Rebecca and their two daughters; Joseph Strone and wife Annie; Adam Ripka and wife Amelia; Mrs. Sarah Irtle, Conrad Auman and son, Charles; Fred L. Carion Birds of Cuba.

Hideous Turkey Buzzards That Are Allies of the Army.

A feature of campaigning in Cuba which has inspired the soldier from the North with horror and disgust is the presence of the huge turkey buzzards on the battle fields. This bird is perhaps in appearance and habits the most loathsome creature of the air known to this continent. It is of right a vulture stands about two and one-half feet high and is of a lustrous brownish black plumage. The hideous part of the bird is its head and neck, naked of plumage and reddish, like raw flesh. Below this is a circular ruff of feathers, which seems to accentuate the revolting appearance of the neck. The bill is long and slender, with a powerful, curved tip for tearing flesh.

Carrion is the food of the turkey buzzard, though it will eat fresh meat, and when in force will even kill small animals or birds. But American soldiers in Cuba, with their dead lying in the thick underbrush, know too well what the approach of these vultures means, and for them the nauseous birds form the chief horror of the war. In a letter to a friend in this city, written after the fighting at Baiquiri, one of the Rough Riders tells of watching the buzzards come, and shooting at them as they settled down to their feast. One of his company, he adds, who fought as bravely as the rest during the battle, went into a hysterical fit at the approach of one of the birds, and covered away from it, crying like a child. Other instances of the soldiers shooting at the buzzards and killing or driving them away have been related.

Yet there is much to be said on the side of the carrion birds. They are our best allies, and as soon as the battle is over their work of sanitation begins. In that hot climate death lurks in the dead and reaches forth for the living. Close behind death in battle waits death by pestilence, ready to claim more victims than shot and shell. It is here that the vultures perform their part, terrible to think of but very necessary to the army's well. After the battle friend and foe lie dead together in the all but impenetrable chaparral. What the burial parties cannot find in that tangled underwood the instinct of the vulture discovers. Far away in the sky distance a black spot appears, grows larger and sails along on motionless wings until presently it settles down to earth. Others follow, gathering from all parts of the compass. They settle in little bands of six or eight, or even a dozen, and when they have risen, instead of the intolerable and horrible residue of humanity which lay in the brush, a menace of pestilence, there remains only a skeleton to whiten in the sun and rain.

All through the South the worth of the turkey buzzard as a scavenger is well understood. Laws are in force protecting these birds, and any one shooting them or wantonly disturbing them is fined. In the smaller towns they are the street cleaning department, and even in cities like Charleston they stalk about the streets, a menace of pestilence, there remains only a skeleton to whiten in the sun and rain. The Useful Toad.

That the toad is beneficial to the farmer, and particularly to the gardener, is admitted by everyone who has observed its habits. Additional facts have been secured by recent observation at the Massachusetts experiment station which show that 11 per cent. of the toad's food is composed of insects and spiders beneficial or indirectly helpful to man, and 80 per cent. of insects and other animals directly injurious to cultivated crops, or in other ways obnoxious to man. The toad feeds on worms, snails, saw bugs, common greenhouse pests and many legged worms which damage greenhouse and garden plots. It feeds to some extent on grass hoppers and crickets, and destroys large numbers of ants. It consumes a considerable number of May beetles, rose chasers, tick beetles or adults of the wireworm, potato beetles and cucumber beetles. It is a prime destroyer of outworn and armyworms.

To all agriculturists the toad renders conspicuous service, but the gardeners and greenhouse owners may make this animal of special value. Every gardener should aim to keep a colony of toads among his growing crops, and the practice of collecting and transferring them to the gardens is a commendable one. While the sense of locality is strong in the toad, and it will often travel over considerable distances to its original haunts, yet it may be induced to remain in new quarters if there is a sufficient food supply. Many farmers provide toads with artificial shelters made by digging shallow holes in the ground and partially covering them with a bit of board or flat stone. In such places toads will often remain for many days, sallying forth at night to seek food.

YELLOW JAUNDICE CURED.—Suffering humanity should be supplied with every means possible for its relief. It is with pleasure we publish the following: "This is to certify that I was a terrible sufferer from Yellow Jaundice for over six months, and was treated by some of the best physicians of our city and all to no avail. Dr. Bell, our druggist, recommended Electric Bitters; and after taking two bottles, I was entirely cured. I now take great pleasure in recommending them to any person suffering from this terrible malady. I am gratefully yours, M. A. Hogarty, Lexington, Ky. Sold by F. Potts Green, druggist.

The appointment is always made by the Pope, Vicar General Koch, of Shanghai, has been appointed administrator of the diocese until the new bishop is chosen.

THIS GREAT MEDICINE PURIFIES, ENRICHES AND VITALIZES THE BLOOD.

That tired feeling is exceedingly common and dangerously significant. It is a warning which must be heeded, or, as with the express train which falls to regard the danger signal, disaster must follow. It is a sure indication of this, weak, impure blood. It is certain admonition that the blood is not properly feeding the nerves, tissues and organs of the body.

Weak, nervous, tired men and women are found everywhere. Men strive too hard to "keep their business up," women work too much "on their nerves," all have too little sleep, there is excessive drain on strength and nervous energy, and all complain of that tired feeling.
