Eleven Thousand Eyes in One.

In the course of his lecture at the London Institution on "Insects at Work," F Enock, after referring to the trap door and the garden spiders, spoke at some length on the leaf cutting bee, probably the most remarkable of all bees.

The leaf cutter, he said, had three eyes in the center of its head (a very thick one) and two compound eyes, occupying, respectively, positions on each side of the others. In each of these compound eyes there were 11,000 reflectors, making a total of 22,000.

That appeared strange, but he had proved it to be a fact by placing a locust in the lens, and then taking a photograph of the head, which showed a locust in every reflector.

In explanation of the title given to this ee, it was explained that its habit was first to burrow in a sand bank, making a sort of tube for its nest. Next the intelligent creature—which was really a capital architect—would proceed to a rose tree. It would there alight upon one of the leaves and with the tools with which it worked would cut a round piece out of it. This it would carry to its nest and ram it against the extreme top end. Then it would take vided, each party paying their own coman oblong piece, which it used to commence the side of a cell with; and so it would go on until it had constructed twelve cells, in each of which it would deposit its collec-tion from the Canterbury bell, of which it was very fond, and other flowers. An egg was laid in each of these cells and in due time young bees appeared and in their turn escaped from the cells and flew about, to carry on the same kind of work. One day an Irishman was taking a walk in a small town near Glasgow, when he met an old friend. After walking along the road together, Pat's friend said to him:

"Have you heard the latest news?" Pat-No; what is it? "There's a penny off the loaf."
Pat—Bedad, and I hope it is off the penny ones.

ARRANGEMENTS FOR THE BIG GRAN-GERS' PICNIC NEXT MONTH .- One of the surest signs of the coming of fall, the time when the toiling husbandman stops to rest annual picnic of the Grangers of Centre county at Grange park, Centre Hall. The week that our farmers and their friends have set apart for their outing has come to be an event of such import in this county that after Fourth of July and the business men's picnic are things of the past it is looked forward to as the closing gala time of summer pleasure.

This year the managers of the picnic and exhibition are making more elaborate preparations than ever to make it a success and the program, as announced in the current number of the Patron, shows that the smallest detail is not being overlooked in the preparation for the week's encampment in September.

The picnic will open Sept. 10th, and continue until the 17th. The grange exhibition and inter county fair in connection with the encampment, will open Monday, September 12th. Religious services will scrupulously observed, and the camp will be ready to receive those who have engaged tents on Saturday.

An interesting program is being provided for the Auditorium every day and evening and will consist of speeches, recitations, vocal and instrumental music.

Numerous canopy tents will be erected with comfortable seats for people to rest under shade and shelter, besides many of the trees are now large enough for shade.

Upwards of two hundred tents will be erected for those desiring to camp. The size of these tents are 12 x 12 feet, with 4 ft. wall and 9 ft. pole, and are just suited for a family. Cots are provided when ordered without additional charge.

Rental for the above tents $3.00 to $4.00 ready for occupancy on Saturday, the day of the opening.

Numerous stoves will be placed all over camp for the use of tent holders. Many new features will be introduced by the department of amusements. All games having the semblance of gambling will be strictly excluded from the ground. Only such parties will be licensed who have something to sell or a reputable entertainment for amusement. Among the entertainments already provided are a merry-go-round, a Ferris wheel, phonographs, graphophones, gramophones, kinetoscopes, projectoscopes, and other amusements of the above character.

Fire works under competent management will be given every night. A competent police force will patrol the ground day and night so that there is absolute protection from any annoyance. No improper persons are allowed to camp on the ground. Telegraph and telephone connections will be on the ground for the convenience of those camping or doing business on the ground. A distributing post office and post office receiving box will be at headquarters un- ground for the world's giant forces. der the management of the post master at Centre Hall. All mail intended for the park should be addressed to Centre Hall. Grange park.
