Butterfly Eggs.

The traveler in the far East, passing through stone doorways, scrolled and carved with Arabesque fretwork, enters the eastern quarter of old Cairo. The streets are dingy and narrow, but here rise the wonderful domes of the famous mosques— 'Tombs of the Mamelukes''-exquisite in all grace and fantasy of shape and color. The fretted sides, a fine and delicate lacework of stone, the marvelous and shining light on beautiful tints, seem like a very dream of art. But enter the woods that stretch all about us, and use the microscope that enlarges our vision, and lo, a most wonderful thing has come to pass! Winged beings, far more beautiful than the genii of the "Arabian Nights" have been here, and on the under side of a common leaf, in size, no larger than a pin's head, are structures that fairly rival the mosques of Cairo in wealth of decoration and loveliness of color -the butterfly eggs. They are, many of them dome-shaped like the mosques, and covered with a rich network, so filmy that it glitters in sun like a diamond dew, but each of the lines is a rib, buttressing the whole structure. Other eggs are shaped like tiaras or turbans, and others still are like sea-urchins. Some are shaped like pyramids, and all lead up in their decorations to a minute rosette at the top, some times deeply indented, through whose openings life is received in the egg. The patterns are often as regular as any circular rose-window of a Gothic cathe dral," and the colors of the egg, beginning with a pale-green—the safest of all colors in the green wood—or white like many tree-blossoms, change afterwards, as the dweller inside develops, into all kinds of brilliant and shining hues, from salmon to orange. These eggs are sometimes found single, sometimes in regular rows, one on top of the other, or strung together like a necklace of beads, or "girdling a twig like a fairy ring."

There are insects-not butterflies-that lay eggs in almost incredible numbers, say a trillion in a season ! These are soft and perishable, and of short life. Where an insect's eggs have to stand the winter's cold they are usually covered, or packed in a kind of cement. If you look at these mere specks through a microscope you will see exquisite shells, clustered like gems or rolled in tubes, or convoluted in spirals and circles.

Many eggs are doubly protected, becaus they are so fragile, and are placed in still another shelter, as the eggs of the birds, pale blue or speckled, or pearly white, in close woven nests, or the eggs of certain spiders in silky bells of golden yellow or purest white, hung among the blossoms. Yet it is more common to find insect eggs bare and exposed to view. One day I saw what had seemed dust grow under a microbe necessary to give the cows some extra feed. Indeed, it has been shown to be profitable to give this extra food even in the first flush of the grass, for the increased product not only paid for the extra food, but the condition of the cows was improved all through the following winter and into the next summer. Any animal may ac-quire a reserve force, so to speak, by which the system accumulates the material for a an athlete. lengthened product during a season of lessened supply of food. This extra feeding on the pasture avoids any draft on this ac cumulated reserve, gained through good feeding during the winter, and prevents that frequent falling off in condition which is apt to occur while the cows are in the flush of milk, while the pastures are fresh. This has been demonstrated by both practical feeding and scientific tests in which the cows on good pasture have re-ceived a liberal addition to the grass of grain food, either simple corn meal or gluten meal, or indeed some change even of green feed, as peas and oats mixed or green sweet corn with the grain on. It was found at one of the experiment stations that this extra feed was not only liberally paid for during the summer, but its effect paid for during the summer, but its effect was noticeable during the next winter and into the following summer. It has been, and still is, my practice to feed ten pounds of corn meal daily to my cows while on the best pasture and to add green cut fodder in addition when the pastures begin to fail later in the season. And this better feed-ing has neid well without avenuin as reid.

Hints For Beekeepers

Thick, well-ripened honey will not gran alate so readily as that which is thin. Dry and warm is the rule for honey if ou want it to retain its flavor and richness.

Never put it in a cellar. Uniting colonies will usually be more accessful if you kill the condemned queens two or three days before uniting. Narrow bottom causes the bees to build their combs clear down to the bottom and attach their combs to them.

Have your new hives ready and the colo-nies swarming over full when the honey flow comes. This is where luck comes in. When returning frames to the hive adjust them slowly and carefully. Then no bees will be pinched or crowded between the frames.

One of the best places to locate the hives is in the orchard. There usually they will be free from annoyances that are likely to arise when the hives are placed elsewhere.

One person with a very little help can easily attend to 100 colonies of bees if comb honey is the product. More help will be needed if extracted honey is the object.-St. Louis Republic.

SEEDS FOR SMALL CHICKS .- Seeds are better for young chicks than too much soft food. There are many seeds that can be utilized, but which are almost unknown to what had seemed dust grow under a micro-scope into crystal eggs, on which insect-forms appeared to be sharply etched as seen through the transparent case. > There is a native living in Nawiliwili district of Lihue, on the Island of Kauai Hawaii, whom every one knows as Johnny but whose family name is Kanlokai. This latter name he has tatooed on his arm, together with the picture of a decease sweetheart. In appearance he is a typical native, muscular, with the appearance of

Johnny is a remarkably good swimmer and, it is said, was at one time very much addicted to the habit of stealing ducks. His method was very simple. He would hide in the bulrushes along the edges of the duck ponds and would, from time to push them into a bag, swim back again to the rushes, there to take breath for another sally. In this way he succeeded in making quite a comfortable living. However, he has given up his crooked ways, and now resides like a peaceably inclined citizen, relying on work that is given him from time to time.

When out on a hunting or fishing ex-pedition there is no better man on the island of Kauai than this same Johnny. Barefooted, he will climb all over the dan gerous palis that fall away abruptly and end thousands of feet below in the sea. The festive goat itself is not more active, and when hunting for this kind of game he is an invaluable a man to chase the animals round to a point of vantage.

As a diver there are few natives, even who can beat him. In diving after lobsters he has the very uncomfortable habit of swimming a great distance into caves that have no opening above the water. Beneath the rocks of these places he will feel around, never failing to come to the top, bringing with him something to make glad the hearts of the housewives.

Ethics and Business Clashed.

"I first began my practice," the doctor remarked between the puffs of a cigar, "down in a little town in Georgia. Lot's Wife Island.

Lot's Wife, perhaps the strangest island in the Pacific, is in latitude 29.41 and longitude 140.22.30 east and is southeast of the island of Nippar, the largest of the Japanese group. Meares, the explorer, ran across it in 1788 and at first mistook it for a ship. He called it Meares' rock, but it had very likely been discovered in ad-mat of esparto grass and carried either on vance of that time by Spanish explorers, a bier or on men's shoulders. The mournwho charted it as Vela rock. The United States steamer Macedonian passed it in 1854, and she, too, mistook it for a sail. Its rugged peak rises nearly 300 feet above days afterward. This wailing, however, is the sea, and it can be seen for 25 miles. There is a great cavern in the base of the rocky pinnacle, and the sea roars through it with a voice of thunder. Its diameter during a whole night in a neighboring vilat the water line is about 50 feet, and it lage, and I can conceive nothing more desstands as an impressive monument to the force of nature in convulsion. perately depressing than these strains of lamentation wafted through the darkness

MORE MONEY IN FIVE ACRES .- It is a significant fact that the possibilities of close or intensive cultivation of small areas of land, say five acres, as against the ordinary cultivation of large tracts, say one hundred acres, is not realized by farmers and others. Five acres of garden crops under careful cultivation will yield, every time, a larger income than one hundred acres as ordinarily worked. For instance, in strawberries alone, one-quarter acre should easily yield 1,000 quarts, which, in a local market, should fetch 10c. a quart, or $100. How many acres of wheat off the farm will it require to bring in the same returns? American Gardening, P. O. Box 1697, New York, is offering some wonderful strawberry plants as a premium, and our readers can obtain sample copy and full particulars free on application, also pamphlet entitled, "A Fortune in Strawberries, or, How a Poor Boy Became Wealthy." We advise all who have ground to send for it.

A man who went away from home some time ago to attend a convention of church people was struck with the beauty of the little town in which the gathering was held. He had plenty of time, and while wandering about walked into the village cemetery. It was a beautiful place, and the delegate walked around among the graves. He saw a 'monument, one of the largest in the cemetery, and read with surprise the inscription on it :

was a land of volcanoes in constant activity. The fact is, however, that it contains no volcances and is a country of perpetual wet and cold. It got its name from the fact that it was sighted by Magellan at night in "A Lawyer and an Honest Man." The delegate scratched his head and looked at the monument again. He read the inscription over and over. Then he walkconsequence of a large fire having been all around the monument and examined ignited by the natives on shore. The same the grave closely.
