

Bellefonte, Pa., Sept. 16, 1898.

FARM NOTES.

-The apple crop for 1898 is short, and farmers who have apples will get good prices the coming winter. An apple orchard is one of the paying investments on farms if attention to varieties has been the -Crimson clover may be seeded as late as this month, but the crop will not be as sure as that seeded in August. As it is better to have the land covered in winter than to leave it bare use plenty of seed on well prepared land in order to endeavor to secure a good "catch."

-To have early onions before the spring varieties are ready sow the seed of the Egyptian tree onion, and leave the plants in the ground all winter. They are hardy, and if covered with straw, and the covering removed in March, they will start off early in the spring an l give the first crops to be obtained.

-The farmer who rents a farm and slights it does not injure the owner of the farm so much as he does himself, as he has but a limited time on a rented farm to secure the most that is possible. To do this he should use plenty of manure and fertilizer. It is true the renter enriches the farm for the owner, but he will get much larger crops and find himself richer at the end of the year than to "skin" the farm.

-The crops of weeds this summer have been unusually large, as it has been difficult to keep them down. The mower is the best thing to use on a field, as it at least prevents them from going to seed. Weeds make excellent green material for plowing under, as some varieties are really useful in bringing up plant food for the sub-soil, but the farmer who allows a single weed to go to seed inflicts himself with extra work next year.

-A writer in the Ohio Farmer says that he dehorns his cattle, for it deprives them of the power of maining or killing each other, of maining or killing other stock, and maining or killing human beings. When dehorned they sell better and are more profitable. Feeders pay 10 cents more per 100 pounds for dehorned cattle. There is less risk in feeding hornless cattle, as more can be fed in the same space if the horns are removed.

—Clean off the tops of the asparagus rows after frost kills them, and burn them on the rows, so as to destroy insects. Then, with a hoe, chop up the surface of the rows to the depth of one inch and apply plenty of manure (too much cannot be given), throwing a furrow on the rows from both sides. In the spring hill up the rows instead of leaving them level, and they will be then more easily kept clean, while the stalks can also be cut to better advantage.

-Cantaloupes have been plentiful this year and were very fine, but consumers do not get those of the best quality. The Emerald Gem, a dark variety, and of unsightly appearance, would be rejected in market, yet it is far ahead of all others in quality. If some enterprising grower would give away samples, with a circular calling attention to the variety, he would be unable to supply the demand the next season and could get his own prices for

-When milk has become contaminated from outside influences we can usually determine the cause readily, but we are not always able to so easily determine causes supply—the cow herself. We are conquering this difficulty, however. When a cow is for instance. diseased the milk is the first thing to become affected, and an expert can determine by microscopical examination the approach of garget or milk fever a week before there is any outward sign.

-Eggs are the all-year-around crop. Other crops have their harvest, when they must be sold at once or stored at an expense. With proper care hens are like money on interest, work Sundays, holidays and rainy days. A basket of eggs carried in one hand will often bring as much money as a load of straw. A neighbor hauled a cord of wood to market for $2; his wife carried ten dozen eggs the same day, which brought $2.50. A crate of eggs, which can be taken to market in a light vehicle, will fetch as much as a load of produce. The cost of producing eggs is nothing compared to the hard work and expense of producing the other.

-Late pullets-those hatched since June-will not lay until next spring, but they will be among the first to begin laying in the spring, and will not moult until the fall of next year. Such breeds as Leghorns and Hamburgs, however, mature very quickly, and pullets of those breeds sometimes lay when only four months old. The early pullets—those hatched before April should begin to lay before winter begins and lay through the winter. If the flock is large it will pay to get rid of the cockerals, so as to afford more room for the pullets and hens. Where the birds are crowded lice multiply rapidly and interfere with the growth of the young stock. Very little grain should be given poultry during the prevalence of warm weather.

-When cutting down corn fodder one point to observe is to cut when the corn is bright. Do not delay until the fodder begins to turn yellow, but cut while the blades are green. The ear will be dry and be as valuable when the fodder is cut at the green stage as to leave the corn standing until the blades begin to change. It is sometimes inconvenient to get into the It is sometimes inconvenient to get in-field to cut the corn when it is ready, field to cut the corn when it is ready, if a day or two. If which causes a delay of a day or two. the weather is dry and warm the delay may greatly affect the value of the corn fodder. The stalks should be shocked in a manner to prevent being thrown down by the wind, as dirt is not conducive to its appearance or quality. The fodder should be removed to an open shed as soon as it can be done, so as to protect it against rain and dampness.

-A representative of a Maine creamery has been testing the skim milk of its patrons, and taking the temperature of the tank in which the deep cans were placed for cooling and raising the cream. Very much to his surprise, he found that many of them kept their milk too cool. He found the skim milk most free from butter fat when the temperature was nearest to 45 degrees. At 36 degrees there was from one to two-tenths of 1 per cent. more of butter fat in the skim milk than when it was kept at 45 degrees or near that point. A difference of that amount, or one or two pounds of butter in a thousand pounds of milk, seems a small amount, and would be in one cow's milk, yet it is worth saving, and would be a very important item in a creamery where they were using the milk of several hundred cows all the season. But the decide to content ourself with cheap cotimportant point is that this loss is obtained

FOR AND ABOUT WOMEN.

In contradistinction to the popular nose hat of the passing season those for fall—toques, turbans, small hats and bonnets all set very decidedly back on the head.

adorn milady's dress hat when the season is well advanced will be noticeably straight-

Remember, if you select one of the new la bergere or shepherdess shapes, that no trimming should be placed on the brim in the back. To be proper style it should all

Flowers will not be used to any great extent during the fall season. Where they are employed they will take the form of foliage in rich autumnal colorings.

Black hats without a hint of color about them promise to be very stylish the coming season. They will be especially favored in the shape of small black bonnets of fibre, or net, spangled with jet.

Pearl ornaments are in great demand for garniture. While any sort of ornament seems to go, so great is the fad, yet this style seems exceptionally popular.

In the millinery world ribbons are always used to a certain extent, and, while, this will be particularly a velvet year, ribbons will be used to a degree on felt hats. The plaid checked and Scotch ribbons of last year are quite passe, black satin and velvet in medium width being substituted. For those desiring a novelty taffeta ribbons, with velvet bayadere stripe and shaded satin and moire ribbons, are new and make effective trimming.

Spade-shaped wings are the latest novelties added to the innumerable shapes wings have taken on since they have become the craze for adorning women's hats.

Hat shapes covered smoothly with velvet and trimmed with black ostrich plumes and blackbirds will be one of the most fashionable modes of the season.

RIBBONS AND LACES-The wealth of ribbons used on the newest models of gowns and lingerie is to be offset by the paucity of this garniture on millinery, if the models shown are indicative of the later season styles. Still, as the first hats shown are always of a dressy description, ribbons may play a prominent part in trim-mings for every-day hats. Narrow laces will have the preference as ornamentations on all the new lingerie. Ruffles of lawn are used where a deep trimming is necessary, but these are edged with fine narrow laces. Trimmed skirt chemise are much in demand, the top usually being edged with a narrow garniture similar to the wide trimming that edges the bottom.

FIRST AUTUMN STYLES-The autumn color card shown by the French manufacturers presents a perfect riot of colors, the purple and plum shades predominating in both the plain cloths and fancy wools. It is not easy to prophesy what the fashion-able world will choose to wear a season ahead. However, the opinions of several leading dressmakers as to what will be fashionable are of interest and possess a certain amount of value.

First, the colors will be extremely gay and will lean more toward purple and plum than to red or blue. The predominance of when the trouble has been with the source of these sades will lead to some rather novel There will be little or no change in the cut of the skirt. In the models ready to be seen now the skirts agree to a dot, and the dressmakers seem to have given up the half-hearted attempt to make drapery popular. This model skirt fits absolutely glove-like about the hips, and, in fact, defines the figure in a manner that would have seemed astonishing a year ago. The volants en forme have about run their course. They may appear in the autumn, but the dressmakers are not showing them and advise flat trimmings that do not destroy the contour of the figure. The trimmed skirt will not be so necessary as it has been during the spring, but trimmings will be fashionable. Embroideries and novel braidings will be much used, and perforated cloths in a new form appear among the new goods.

> HINTS ON DRESS-Toques will be exceedingly fashionable for autumn wear, and Paris models show embroideries, of jet, sequins and beads as borderings to loops and bows, or on lisse and net for veiling bright-colored fabrics. Velvet draperies in rich emerald, petunia and orange velvets are veiled with crazy net, dotted here and there with sparkling jewels, and jeweled pins of some size fasten loops and twists, or connect draperies on the more elaborate > Butterfly bows of black net, encrusted with glittering stones and jet, are mixed in with twists and folds of bright-hued velvet, and while black plumes subdue the more obstrusive colorings; the darker toques are adorned with speckled quills or feather aigrettes and choux of bright rib-bon or velvet. Hats turned up in Punch-inello fashion are "le dernier cri" in Paris and Vienna, but here are gaining ground slowly, although extremely becoming to the English type of face, which does not so well bear a hat shading the forehead.

> The newest shade of red is termed begonia, and is very rich and deep and less obstrusive than cherry-red or cardinal, although resembling both. Azalea is the happiest of the violet tints, and is combined with the palest green, blue or salmon pink. Velvets powdered with small embroidered designs, or single jewels, on tiny clusters of sequins, will be largely used for millinery, and embroidered robes will still find favor for evening wear.

> FRUIT STAINS-At this season of the year napkins, tablecloths and even children's clothes are very apt to become stained with fruit. One of the simplest methods to remove these fruit stains from linen or cambric is to place the stained part over a bowl and continue pouring boiling water through until the stain disappears. If this be done soon after the article is stained, there will be no trouble in most cases. The water must be boiling hot.

> Skirts should fit the figure, and, except in the case of the new shaped skirt-which is slightly stiffened in the fluted partthey should be lined with soft material, so that what fullness they contain clings to the figure. Heace glace silk and cheap cotion, instead of adopting the linenette are being discarded in favor of the softer surah and sateen, according to whether we ton, instead of adopting the lighter, more elegant silk lining.

Hairdressing.

Women in Spain Know Well How to Tend their

Throughout Spain the traveler is struck with the exceeding neatness and daintiness shown by women in the arrangement of The long waving ostrich plumes that will their hair, says the New York Tribune. The lower classes wear no hats, and their hair is always beautifully dressed. Difer than those of last season. That is, they are more disposed to lie along flat than to have the tip curled over and bob.

ferent styles are adopted, but the inclination is to mass the tresses on the top of the head. There is no unkept look; each lock lies in place, and the whole bears evidence of having been combed and brushed to the last degree. Somewhere under braid or coil a flower will be tucked, even the small girl wearing this adornment. The ancients attribute a great deal of importance to the hair. Lank hair they thought was indicative of pusilanimity and cowardice, yet Napoleon had never a curl. Frizzly hair was a sign of coarseness and clumsiness. Ringlets had the place of Achillies and Ajax Telamon had curling locks, as had Timon the Athenian. The Emperor Augustus had such ringlets that no hairdresser in Rome could produce the like. Auburn or light brown hair was considered the most distingushed, as portending intelligence, industry, a peaceful disposition and a loving nature. Black hair was not estimated by the Romans, and red was an object of aversion. The ''hair of a dissembling color,'' to which Shakespear refers, was red, so-called from the notion that Judas had red hair.

But ages before the time of Judas red hair was held in disrepute, both in the case of Typhon, who deprived his brother of the sceptre of Egypt, and Nebuchadnezzar, who acquired it in the expiation of his atrocities. This hatred of red hair was even extended to the donkey tribe.

The ancient Hebrews estimated fine hair a great beauty, and baldness the sign of the anger of God. Artificial hair was used in the earliest days by the Greeks and pleasant feeling. If possible, one should linger a few minutes in the hall entry, shed or whatever place the outer door opens into, in order to render the change gradual. Everyone is supposed to know that it is not well to open the mouth as in speaking, when going from a heated room into the cold outside air. Make all adieux before the outer door is opened, and then keep the mouth shut for a few minutes after going out.

Grass stains may be treated to an application of alcohol before they have been washed or become dry upon the material.

A Friendly Warning.

"I have," said the traveler, "penetrated into the very heart of Africa's burning desert, and now I propose to go in search of the north pole.' "Well," replied his friend, "as an African explorer you may be all right, but when you strike the arctic regions you'll find you're not so warm." Some inside mythology-Once more did Ulysses relate the story of his wanderings; but Penelope, his faithful wife, shook her head. "Where," she persisted, "are the labels on your trunks?"
