What My Lover Said.

A Charming Poem with an Interesting History.

By the merest chance in the twilight gloom. In the orchard path he met me In the tall wet grass, with its faint perfume, And I tried so hard to pass, but he made room, Oh! I tried, but he would not let me, So I stood and blushed 'til the grass grew red, With my face bent down above it, While he took my hand, as he said--How the clover lifted each pink, sweet head To listen to all that my lover said ! Oh! the clover in bloom-I love it!

In the high wet grass went the path to hide, And the low wet leaves hung over, But I could not pass on either side, For I found myself, when I vainly tried, In the arms of my steadfast lover, And he held me there and he raised my head While he closed the path before me And he looked down into my eyes and said-How the leaves bent down from their boughs o'erhead To listen to all my lover said, Oh! the leaves hanging lowly o'er me.

Had he moved aside but a little way I could surely then have passed him, And he knew I never could wish to stay, And would not have heard what he had to Could I only aside have cast him, It was almost dark and the moments sped, And the searching nightwind found us; But he drew me nearer and softly said-How the pure sweet wind grew still instead. To listen to all that my lover said, Oh! the whispering winds around us.

I am sure he knew when he held me fast, That I must be all unwilling, For I tried to go and I would have passed, As the night was come with its dews at last, And the sky with its stars was filling, But he clasped me close, when I would have fled.

And he made me hear his story, And his soul came out from his lips and said-How the stars crept out when the white moon led To listen to all that my lover said. Oh! the moon and stars in glory.

I knew the grass and the leaves will not tell, And I'm sure that the wind, precious rover, Will carry his secret too safely and well, That no being shall ever discover One word of the many that rapidly fell From the eager lips of my lover. And the moon and the stars that looked over Shall never reveal what a fairy-like spell They wove round about us that night in the dell, In the path through the dew-laden clover; Nor echo the whispers that made my heart swell, As they fell from the lips of my lover.

(Of the above Mr. Edwin Twitmyer formerly of this county, at present superintendent of the public schools of Seattle, writes for the *Post Intelli-*gencer of that city, the following interesting his-tory.—ED. WATCHMAN.)

This poem first came to the writer's notice in November of 1880. It then appeared in the DEMOCRATIC WATCHMAN, an old and leading weekly newspaper published at Bellefonte, Pa., as a clipping from the Philadelphia Times. The poem had been sent to the Times with a brief history of its supposed origin by that paper's New York correspondent, then one by the name of Ross Raymond.

in my scrapbook. Early in October of 1888 it appeared in the Pittsburg Dispatch heretofore allowed, but not available as "a poem attributed to many different authors." That paper however, accredited its authorship to Col. Richard Realf, an timated at $94,816,165, of which the English-American poet, who was born in England in 1834 and came to America in balance $33,652,903, is the navy's. 1854, residing for a time at Pittsburg. balances, therefore, are considerably While visiting at Honesdale, Pa., during the summer of 1888. I learned that Mr. Homer Greene, a lawyer of that place and a popular writer of serial stories for the Youth's Companion, was the real author of "What my Lover Said."

When I observed the publication of the poem in the Pittsburg Dispatch, and noted also, what the editor of that paper said in regard to its production, to be certain of regard to its production, to be certain of my information and, when certain, with and artillery, $292,500; transportation the view of enlightening the editor, which I afterwards interested myself sufficiently to do, I addressed a letter to Mr. Greene, to which he very kindly replied as follows:

"HONESDALE, Pa., Oct. 27th, 1888. "Mr. E—T——Dear Sir: I am pleased to reply to your recent letter of inquiry con-cerning 'What My Lover said.' I wrote the poem in the fall of 1875 and sent it to the New York Evening Post for publication. I was at that time in my senior year at Union college. The title of the poem as I sent it was 'What Her Lover Said,' and I had my full name signed to it.

changed the word 'her' in the titlet, and 'he changed the word 'her' in the titlet o "my" and cut down my name to its initials, H. G. The verses were then published in the daily issue of Nov. 19th, 1575, and in the semi-weekly issue of Nov. 23rd, 1875. The history of the poem has been varied and interesting. It came to be so commonly credited to Horace Greeley that in 1880 I myself had a letter published in the Post relieving Mr. Greeley's memory from the charge. T is letter was in the weekly issue of Dec. 8th. This was the the weekly issue of Dec. 8th. This was the only time I have made or authorized any published statement. Mr. Richard J. Hin-ton has done the same service for Col. Realf's literary executor, and in a long letter to the New York Graphic of Oct. 20th, 1888, he dis-claims for Realf the authorship of the poem in question. By the way, if you are not familiar with Realf's poems you will find among them some of the most exquisite lyrics in the language. For the recent claims made by and on behalf of living persons I care nothing; they amuse rather than annoy me. I am always entertained by the bright things a analysis and the second by the bright things newspapers say on subjects of this kind. * * * Sincerely yours.

"HOMER GREENE."

The tender and delicate phrasing of the three lines at the end of each stanza of the poem is unsurpassed. It is the only one of Mr. Greene's productions that appears in the Library of the World's Best Literature, edited by Charles Dudley Warner, though he has written many things of high and acknowledged merit, among them being poems and stories for which handsome prizes were paid by the Youth's Companion and other periodicals of superior literary standing.

Mr. Raymond, in his article to the Philadelphia Times, speaks of one Barton Hill. an actor, as having recited the poem to a delighted coterie of actors and newspaper men that had gathered in a New York club room in October, 1880, just after Park theater was out. After Mr. Hill had completed the recitation, Mr. Raymond quotes him as saying: "I was in Seattle, Califorome years ago-two or three-when oure. 25c. The genuine has L. B. Q Mr. C. H.
