A frightful accident occurred at the station Saturday afternoon, and it seemed that tables were beautifully decorated with ferns nothing short of providential interference and flowers and eighty-five partook of the could save the life of at least one of the persons in the vehicle. Mrs. William Mitterling and her son Charles were driving two spirited horses hitched to an almost new platform spring wagon at the time mentioned and it was they who had the narrow escape from losing their lives. They were on their way to town, and when reaching the hill just beyond the station, their horses began to run and kick. James Smeltzer saw that the party was in need of aid, and leaving the house ran and caught the horses and held good fellowship and happiness was evident throughout the evening. It was midnight when the guests departed, all acknowledging them until quieted. Traces were fastened up and everything was supposed to be over. and Mrs. Mitterling and her son proceeded on their journey. As soon as the horses started they began kicking and running again and at once became unmanageable. When the station was reached the steeds were at full speed and the sight was fright Miss Grace Smith entertained a coterie of ful. Before striking the railroad track the horses turned toward Bartholomew's grist mill and in so doing struck the rear end of a two horse wagon, and about this time young Mitterling, who was driving, was thrown to the ground with great force. The ground was covered with a sheet of ice and Charley shot out over it like a ball from a cannon. It was the continuance of this locomotion The Centre Hall hotel register shows that that saved the lad from being injured. There was a look of horror on Mrs. Mitterling's face as she sat in the wagon, helpless only awaiting her fate, and it was soon realized. The horses ran at a terrible gait and within a few rod struck a post that supports a lean-to at the mill. The woman had the presence of mind to throw her arms about a brace on the post and thus avoid the sudden dash to death, if possible. It was that act that saved her life. Several sacks of grain that were in the back part of the spring wagon were pitched forward against the woman and pinned her to her position. The horses lay in a heap-one on each side the post-where they were caught by parties who went to the rescue. Mrs. Mitterling's first thought was concerning the welfare of her son, and upon being told that he was not hurt, said that she was not injured except Prof. W. A. TICK'S 1889 GARDEN AND FLORAL VICK'S 1889 GARDEN AND FLORAL GUIDE.—The Golden Wedding Edition to celebrate our 50th year in business is a work of art. 24 pages lithographed in colors. 4 pages souvenir, nearly 100 pages filled with fine halftone illustrations of Flowers, Vegetables, Plants, Fruits, etc. It is too expensive to give away indiscriminately, but we want veryone interested in a good garden to have a copy, therefore we will send a copy of the Guide with a due bill for 25 cents' worth of seed for only 15cts. We have a new plan of selling vegetable seeds, giving more for your money than any seedsman, and also a scheme giving credit for the full amount of your purchase to buy other goods. Don't fail to get our catalogue, it will pay you.
