OLD SHOES.

How much a man is like old shoes! For, instance, each a soul may lose. Both have been tanned-both are made tight By cobblers-both get left and right, Both need a mate to be complete And both are made to go on feet. They both need healing; oft are sold, And both in time turn all to mould With shoes the last is first, with men The first shall be last, and when The shoes wear out they're mended new, When men wear out, they're men dead too! They both are trod upon and both Will tread on others-nothing loath. Both have their ties and both incline, When polished, in the world to shine: And both peg out. And would you choose

How Chinese Keep Warm

They Don Many Coats, One Over the Other, and Shed them as Circumstances May Require.

To be a man or be his shoes?

A singular thing about a Chinaman is that, so far as outside appearances go, he dresses himself exactly alike both winter and summer.

He appears neither more bulky or thinner as the seasons go by, and the style, cut and texture of his raiment, unless searching investigations are made, seem unchanged. However, as the winter weather comes on, the snow begins to fall and the chill winds to whistle through the cracks in his laundry, or other places of business. he does make certain changes in his wear ing apparel, which, while they do not show upon the outside, have the required effect of keeping him warm and comfort-

In summer time the Chinaman wears as few clothes as is permitted by custom. The wide flowing silk coat, with balloon sleeves, equally wide jeans and a glimpse of white stocking in the shoe, are all he thinks it necessary to wear. Other articles are re garded as superfluous.

At this time of the year such a China man has concealed beneath this same silk coat and jeans a variety of things designed to keep him warm. During cold weather the un-Americanized Chinamen wears at least six or seven coats. When he rises early on a cold winter's morning, the first thing he reaches for, as a rule, is a silk or worsted coat, which he dons, tight fitting to the skin. Then he hastily gets into a worsted blouse, made in the shape of the usual outside garment of the Chinese, and then has two or three silk coats to put on, which are followed by a closely knit muslin coat, another silk coat and the top coat, or blouse. This last is so made that no suggestion is given of the others underneath. It never bulges, and no flap or edge of the undercoats show. His jeans are put on next, underneath which he wears a closer fitting pair of jeans. If particularly chilly, he wears extra pairs of the silk heavy muslin, as is also at times the winter top coat. Concerning his stockings and his feet, the Chinaman who still adhers to his native customs in wearing clothes has trouble. According to the statement of Wong Wing, an intelligent Chinaman, no Chinaman who still professes the religion of his forefathers, is permitted to wear shoes or boots as is heavy stockings, and having very thick cork and worsted soles put on his shoes. The stockings of the Chinaman are not bought in this country, but come from China by way of San Francisco, and are not a common garment. One difference between them and the American stocking is that they are neither as short as that of the ordinary citizen or as long as that of the school boy. The top reaches just below the knee, and the stockings are made of a peculiar kind of worsted, very finely knitted and very warm. This completes the winter garb of the Chinaman, which he affirms keeps him

Many of the top coats worn by them are wadded all over on the inside with cotton, in almost the same way as a foot ball player pads his trousers. A Chinaman will frequently start the day with all his coats on and feeling cold. As the day gets warmer and the temperature of the laundry rises he will begin to shed coats until he has on only two or three. As a rule he is very imprudent in regard to his health, and rarely gets through a winter without contracting a bad cold through carelessness in going out without all his coats on or taking too many off to get cool. There is art in regulating the number to take off or put on at certain temperatures.

as warm as he wants to be.

Very few Chinamen wear anything like a collar about their necks, as the various coats fit so closely to the neck that the wind cannot get down their backs. Gloves are another article that are not worn except in rare cases, as the voluminous sleeves form the best kind of muff for the hands and keep them much warmer than mittens or gloves. There are some Chinamen who wear in the winter time regular suits of flannel underwear instead of the silk or worsted shirt, which hangs considerably below the waist. The Chinaman does not wear suspenders, but keeps his jeans up by means of a Chinese belt made out of silk, heavily braided. A Chinaman has one style of hat-a black soft felt hatwhich meets all his requirements. Wong Wing says that it is considered "too sassy for a Chinaman to wear a white or brown hat, and says he knows only two in Baltimore who ever wear a hat that is not

The colors of the coats and various garments of the Chinaman are more usually purple than anything else, because it is his natural favorite. Outside of his own person, however, he infinitely prefers red to any other color. He drapes his wash-stands, his iron boards and his entire room with red cloth. All his tapestries are red, and the sign with which he announces his name and business is red. Red is the religious color of the Chinese, and the presence of red in a laundry always denotes that the proprietor has not yet been christianized, while the lack of this color is said to be clear proof that he has accepted the religion of this country and cast aside

White is worn as a sign of mourning. The Chinaman is this country has of recent years taken to wearing his queue curled about his head instead of hanging as before which is a mark of respect to American customs. Nearly all of their clothes are imported from China.—Baltimore Sun.

The Dangers of Alcohol.

At the meeting of the Paris Medi-cal society held on December 15th, M. Legendre, alarmed by the ever-increasing amount of drunkenness, asked if it would not be possible to withstand this by means of meetings, insistence on the dangers of alcohol, and by what he considered an even better method, that of getting up for the instruction of patients lantern shows with exhibitions of anatomic preparations to show the dangers of alcohol. M. Legendre has had printed for the use of all his patients a little leaflet, the text of which runs as fol-

"Most of the diseases treated in the hospitals arise from alcoholic drinks—that is to say, they are either caused or aggravated by the abuse of alcohol. All alcoholic drinks are dangerous, and the most harm-ful are those which contain aromatics in addition to alcohol-as, for instance, absinthe and the so-called aperients, called ainers. "Alcoholic drinks are more dangerous when taken on an empty stomach or between meals. A man necessarily becomes an alcoholic—i. e., slowly poisoned by al-cohol—even if he never gets drunk, when every day he drinks alcohol in the form of liquor or too much wine, more than one litre per diem.

'Alcohol is a poison the habitual use of which destroys more or less quickly, but none the less certainly, all the organs most necessary to life—the stomach, the liver, the kidneys, the blood vessels, the heart and the brain. Alcohol excites man, but does not strengthen him. It is no substitute for food, but takes away the taste for it. Those who often drink alcohol or too much wine (more than one litre a day) are much more liable to illness, and when ill are much worse, for the disease is often complicated with fatal delirium.

Alcohol is a frequent cause of consumption by its power of weakening the lungs Every year we see patients who attend the hospitals for alcoholism come back some months later suffering from consumption. Fathers and mothers who drink often have children who are deformed or who die from fits and a man or woman who drinks has not one chance out of ten of living through pneumonia.

Premises and Conclusions.

Recently, while a number of newspaper men were interviewing a governor, one of group drawing certain inferences, tried to put words into the governor's mouth. Thereupon the governor gave caution lest some enthusiastic correspondent overstate his opinions. "You may draw as many conclusions as you like," said the governor "but don't attribute them to me," and then he told the following story:

"There was once a colored preacher who. upon the occasion of delivering a forceful harrangue to his congregation, said:

"I see before me twelve chicken thieves including William Sanders." "Now, Sanders was a handy man with a razor, and, being exceedingly wroth over the preacher's severe indictment, threatened to carve the parson on sight. But the parson's friends, learning that there was trouble in the wind, urged him, in the in-The outside jeans are made out of terest of his own welfare and that of the community, to set things right with Sanders at the first opportunity. Taking this view of the situation the parson did, on the next Sunday, make the following announce

"Brethren, at our last meeting I made a statement, which, after mature deliberation, I desire to correct, realizing as I do that my remarks upon that occasion might closed over the instep, or reaching above not have been understood correctly. What Railway Co., has printed for free distribution to the ankle, unless he is a priest. Consequently in winter the only protection for including William Sanders."

The Boys on the Farm.

The young man who is petted too much at home is seldom any good. What is wanted nowadays is a practical man who can do something beside smoke cigarettes and twist a cane. The time to learn to work and to learn business habits is in one's youth. He who leads the life of a butterfly until he is 25 or 30 years of age, and then recognizes the fact that he has made an ass of himself, has precious little to recommend him when he applies for a This may be a "chestnut," but it fits not a few men of every town and city in the Union. The boys on the farm are better off, if they only knew it, than thousands of the boys who are at large. There is nothing like being practical, and there is but way to be so. Acquire business habits, and train yourself to good, honest, hard work. Don't waste your time learning to tie a cravat. You can buy cravats already tied.

When an incident like the following occurs right here at home it is bound to carry weight with our readers. When so many strange occursnee go the rounds of the press, are published as facts, when the intelligent reader knows they cannot be true, there is no wonder that people become skeptical. On one subject skepticism is rapidly disappearing. That is due to the actual personal experience of our citizens and their public utterances regarding them. The doubter must doubt no more in the face of such evidence as this. The public statement of a reputable citizen living right here at home, one whom you can see every day, leaves no ground for the skeptic to stand on.

I had taken so many kinds and so many prescriptions without any preceptible gain that I was unprepared for the immediate improvement I received from taking Doan's Kidney Pills. I read statements about Bellefonte people who had been cured by their use and I got them at F. Potts Green's drug store. After taking them I felt so well that I walked down town with my husband, something I had not done for two years. HEALTHY, HAPPY GIRLS often, from no apparent cause, become languid and despondent in the early days of their womanhood. They drag along always tired, never hungry, breathless and with a palpitating heart after slight exercise so that merely to walk up stairs is exhausting. Sometimes a short, dry cough leads to the fear that they are "going into consumption."

They are anamic, doctors tell them, which means that they have too little blood. Are you like that? Have you too little blood?

More anæmic people have been made strong, hungry, energetic men and women by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People than by any other means. They are the best tonic in the world.

Miss Lulu Stevens, of Gasport, Niagara Co., N. Y., had been a very healthy girl until about a year ago, when she grew weak and pale. She lost her appetite, was as tired in the morning as on retiring and lost flesh until she became so emaciated that her friends hardly knew her. The doctors declared the disease anæmia, and gave her up to die. A physician who was visiting in Gasport prevailed upon her to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. She did so, and was benefited at once. She is now well and strong—the very picture of health.—Buffalo (N. Y.) Courier.
