FARM NOTES.

-To prevent egg eating, scatter china eggs about the floor of the house. The hens will peck them and finding they cannot break the shell will give up the habit. -The wise farmer will never forget that the first hundred pounds of pork costs lit-tle; the second hundred thirty per cent. more, and the third hundred double the first. Yet there are plenty of people who raise three hundred pound hogs.

—A teaspoonful of wood ashes and salt, half and half, will keep the horse from having colic. At time of feeding, put the medicine into the measure and mix it thoroughly. A teaspoonful once or twice a week is often enough.

—A yoke of cattle supposed to be the heaviest in the United States are owned by Mr. Avery, Buckland, Mass. They are Holsteins, stand six feet without shoes, and weigh nearly 4,000 pounds each. They have been worked on the farm within a year, and exhibited at several county fairs.

-Sheep are very fond of salt and should have what they want of it. The sheep are the best judges, however, of how much they want; so do not make the mistake of mixing it to excess with their food. Give them some lumps of rock salt under shelter where it will not dissolve by rain, and let them take what they will.

—When horses are kept in the stable on dry floors for a long while, the hoofs often become very dry and hard and liable to disease. To prevent this trouble, I have found that a little pure cod liver oil applied about once in every two days with a soft rag to the outside crust as well as sole and frog, will keep the hoof in a healthy condition, besides preventing the outer horny crust of hoof from becoming hard

-The poorest and most unproductive of sandy soils are best for poultry, as the rains carry down the filth, and, the soil being light, can be easily spaded or turned over. The sandy soils are also dry, and therefore such diseases as cholera in fowls or gapes in chickens are rather unusual, compared with the damage from such diseases on heavy, stiff land. Cheap, sandy lands can be put to excellent use in raising broilers, and if it is desired to grow crops on the land the droppings will gradually bring it to a certain degree of fertility.

-The returns to be expected from an apiary will depend upon the attention, the season and the condition of the colonies themselves. If they are populous and the two thrifty at the beginning of the honey flow the back. Beware pounds of extracted honey, or thirty pounds of comb honey per colony. If the season is good much greater returns than this may be expected. But the above may be considered an average yield, which at present prices will amount to between four and five dollars per colony. -The disease known under the specific name of staggers, and divided into stomach staggers and blind staggers is decreasing throughout the country, though quite prevalent where rye is fed heavily. Authorities now agree that the affection of the brain know as mad staggers is due simply to an aggravated attack of stomach staggers, although it is ascribed by some solely to the use of the tight collars. The symptoms are sudden abdominal pains, much pawing, some belching and in severe cases acute pain. The sleepy stage is characterized by dullness and a disposition to acterized by dullness and a disposition to lean against something as if for support. The symptoms of the phase known as grass staggers, usually caused by eating the seed stems of rye grass, are paralysis of the hind week. The cost of raising each duckling to the age of eight weeks is about five cents a pound of duckling, the price a pound received for each duckling being from 18 to 22 cents. Young ducks need no pond or water except for drinking purposes, and are fed in the same manner as chicks, except that they require more animal and halls feed and must be fed often earing the floor without bending the

The striking error in this theory is in regard to the weight of the yolk. The yolk is specifically lighter than the albumen, and would no quicker cut through the latter than a cork would sink in water. In fact, the yolk is buoyed up by the albu-men, and the germ, which always lies on top, is only kept from pressing against the shell by the weight of the denser albumen forming the chalaza, the latter having a tendency to drag the yolk down and steady

If the eggs are kept for too long a period at too high a temperature, the albumen gets somewhat fluid, its arrangement is broken up, and the yold is then pressed upward with some force against the shell, and if allowed to represent the shell, and if allowed to remain in this position will eventually dry to it.

It is probable that any period of time and degree of temperature sufficient to break up the natural arrangement of the albumen would destroy the vitality of the germ; and the egg would be useless for incubating purposes, whether or not the yolk was dried to the shell. It is obvious, too, that the more handling the egg receives the quicker will this disarrangement be

I have had no occasion to keep eggs for a diet should be gradually adopted .- Harlonger period than three weeks, and know per's Bazar. of no reason why they should be kept for a longer one. When keeping eggs for this period, and also for shorter ones, they have been placed in a basket or box of some sort without any regard to position, covered over with a cloth to check any draft that might strike them, thus preventing undue evaporation, and left undisturbed until wanted. Any cloth will give sufficient ventilation to keep the air around the eggs sweet—that is, if the air in the apartment the double row of buttons laced together wanted. Any cloth will give sufficient in which they are kept is pure.

FOR AND ABOUT WOMEN.

If you would have a serviceable bicycle it make it with a plaid skirt of gray Oxford showing barring of black at long and wide intervals. The short skirt with a hem of plain dust gray cloth is traversed horizontally with row after row of machine stitching. The skirt should open at both sides of the front breadth and is filled with the proper flaps concealing the opening of the pocket. The jacket is of plain dust gray cloth, like the skirt hem. The collar shows a tiny velvet strip on the neckband, but none on the breast revers. The waistcoat is of plaid Oxford to match

Never were foulards more in evidence than this spring and especially are blue and white and black and white fashionable. A blue and white foulard displays a very striking design, with a draped belt of white taffeta, spotted over with large black velvet moons, fastened at one side with a knot and two pointed ears of the silk. Wide lace insertion trims the bodice and edges of the double skirt, which falls over a deep flounce of plain silk. The white chiffon or mousseline de soie bodice, trimmed with black chantilly insertion in combination with foulard, is shown in another model, while still another gown of this displays the white cloth bolero piped around with two rows of satin, one of white and one of black, with a dainty pattern of cream applique above. Something pretty in pale blue organdie made over blue silk is trimmed with ruches of black lace edging set in the edge of the ruffles, and around the bodice with narrow black insertions heading the ruffle on the skirt. Lace insertions trim another muslin very elaborately in the apron overdress, and the yoke of tucked white organdie is also decorated with points of insertion. A new silk. Wide lace insertion trims the bodice and edges of the double skirt, which falls rated with points of insertion. A new model in pique conspicuously shown in the shops has a white pique skirt striped round with braid, and a dark blue overdress and jacket also finished with braid and worn with a white vest.

Lace appears everywhere this spring on waists and coats, as well as on skirts. Cloth skirts are cut by vandykes of lace or ready for market in three months from the time the eggs are put in the incubator, four weeks being allowed for incubation. This extraordinary weight shows an increase of half a pound for each week from the date of hatching for each duck, but as they increase faster as they become 'older, until maturity, those over six weeks of age increase at the rate of nearly one pound a week. The cost of raising each duckling to the age of eight weeks is about five cents a works wonders. It must be performed with the corsets and long skirts off. might seem monotonous and meaningless. Drop the arms, and by a series of up and down motions, like pumping, the tense muscles of back and thigh will relent and the hands get nearer to the floor. At the end of a week the difficulty should be overcome and suppleness gained. When it comes to diet for obesity, the rules are so much like those for dyspepsia and gout that invalidism is suggested. Primarily the ban goes out against that wicked trio of sweets, tarts, and starches. All are tabooed, and that means a diet so monotonously simple that many a one lanses into her former state of includence.

The latest approved idea for closing the plaquet of a skirt, either front, back or at the side, is with snap buttons, such as are with cord.

CHERIFF'S SALE. By virtue of sundry writs of Levari Facias, Fieri Facias and Venditioni Exponas issued out of the Court of Common Pleas of Centre Co. Pa. and to me directed, there will be exposed to Public Sale, at the Court House, in the borough of Bellefonte, Pa.,

SATURDAY APRIL 22nd, 1899, at 10:30 o'clock, the following described real estate, to wit:

estate, to wit:

All that certain piece or lot of ground situate in the village of Port Matilda, Centre county Pennsylvania, bounded and described as follows to wit: Beginning at High street corner of lot No. 13 on the plot of said town: thence fronting and running along High street 60 feet to lot No. 9: thence along lot No. 9 200 feet to said lot, being 60 feet front on High street and extending back 200 feet and known as lot No. 11 in the plot or plan of said town.

Thereon erected a two-story frame dwelling house, stable and other out-buildings.
Seized, taken in execution, and to be sold as the property of Mary A. McMonigal and R. R. McMonigal.

Clark and Monroe Armor, containing about 2 acres more or less. Thereon erected a large stable.

Seized, taken in execution, and to be sold as the property of M. B. Garman.

Cloth skirts are cut by vandykes of lace or circular rows. The old lace shawls are being used for evening wear, and will appear on summer toilettes. The front of the shawl hangs down the front of the skirt. It is fitted around the waist by small darts, and the two corners fall in graceful folds at the back.

Beware of investing in dark hues this spring, for only the palest grays, tabacs, mauves, fawns and mastics are well worn. Black, of course, is now, as always, an exception to this rule, and some of the very smartest gowns are being built of a peculiarly fine make of black cloth with a very "satiny" face. One example had an eelskin skirt of the five-growed pattern and content of the same premises conveyed by S. H. Yocum and wife to W. R. Teller, &c. Seized, taken in execution, and to be sold as the property of S. M. Buck.

—Now is the time to hatch ducklings, and as they grow much faster than chicks, and are subject to fewer diseases, they not only reach the market in a short time after being hatched, but the percentage of loss is very small. They also come to market after the chicks are low in price. They attain the weight of from eight to ten pounds apair at the age of eight weeks, being ready for market in three months from the time the correct and state of land situate in the township, of Haines, counting and never upon sit-down occasions, such as the opera and for calling.

This is accomplished by the arrangement of the side seams of the skirt. These have fans set in them in such a way that they do not add too the volume of the skirt nor prevent it from clinging.

While general exercise is valuable, it is not alone sufficient to aid those who are too stout, particularly those annoyed by embonpoint, but specific motions are necessary. Here is a simple exercise which works wonders. It must be performed with the corrects and long skirts off.

There can be no candy, no enticing drinks from the soda water fountain, no sugar in coffee or tea (although saccharine can be used), no desserts; nor can there be anything fried, nor mayonnaise, nor creamy things, nor farinaceous. Vegetables that grow below ground—plebeian vegetables, like potatoes and beets—must be left out of this spartan diet, and butter is forbidden. What is there left? Why, this: a cup of hot water fresh meats—except pork—and pulled bread, with some indulgence in vegetables and fruit. This course is severe, but it is only necessary for a short time, and surely will lower the weight.

After a sufficient number of pounds have vanished into thin air, a more generous diet should be gradually adopted.—Harper's Bazar. ALSO neat measure.
