Bellefonte, Pa., July 14. 1899. Rules in Nursing.

Some Common-Sense Hints to Follow in the Sic Room.

1. Choice of sick room.-Choose a bright, large and cheerful room, and one with a fireplace; but have very little furniture and very few ornaments. 2. Fresh air .- The air the patient breathes should be very pure. An open window and a fire are the best means of ventilation. Keep the room scrupulously clean. Use a damp duster. 3. Quietness in the sick room .- Avoid all noise; but there should be no whispering. In extreme cases pieces of coal should be wrapped in paper, and a wooden poker used.

4. Flowers in the sick room .- Many say flowers should be kept away from sick rooms, lest they should exhaust the air. That is the case with some flowers, as lilies and lilacs, but a few roses or violets will prove to be very reviving to weary eyes and depressed spirits.

5. Sick room nursing. - The nurse should never stand at the head of the bed, but where she can easily be seen. The nurse should have great patience and be firm in carrying out the doctor's orders. She should be tidy in appearance. She should never argue with the patient.

6. Reading to the sick .- If the patient desires reading, or if reading aloud is not trying to the nerves it should be done slowly. Never hurry or raise the voice unduly.

7. Food .- Food should be given punct-Milk is a perfect food. In acute ually. cases of inflammatory diseases iced milk is of the greatest advantage; but the use of ice in any form must not be pushed too far, so as to lower the temperature of the patient unduly. The juice of meat ex-tracted with cold water is nourishing. Weak patients should never be left more Carl Reinhard, aged 7; Edward Reinhard, than two hours without food. Let it be well cooked and daintily served-variety is good. Never leave food at the invalid's bedside.

8. Washing the patient.—It is good for a patient to be washed, as the skin has work to do and must be kept in working order. Washing allays thirst, lesses fever, soothes the nerves and induces sleep.

9. Medicine .- This should be given punctually. Always shake the bottle. Read the label. Always give medicine in a clean glass. Aperients are given before food; tonics are given after food.

10. Poultices .- If no special orders are given, poultices are made of linseed. Warm a basin and knife, pour in basin water quite boiling, sprinkle in meal with the left hand, stirring briskly with the knife in right. When the mixture is thick enough turn on a piece of flannelette, and spread evenly. Change every four hours. Hot oil applied on flannel is safer as a home remedy than hot poultices. Saturate a piece of old flannel with oil, heat it, and apply over chest, covered with wadding.

11. Fomentations .- To wring out a fomentation, place an ordinary towel across a hand basin with ends hanging over, put on it a double piece of flannel, and fold towel over. Then pour on boiling water, and wring by ends; take the flannel out, give one shake, and apply lightly.

12 .- Care of the dying .- Let there to no crowding around the sick bed. Let ::e one most loved hold the dying hand, wipe Penfield's Tragedy.

Correct Account of the Killing of Ezekiel Hewitt. Growing Out of a Dispute Between Two Well Known Clearfield County Men.

A shocking murder occurred at Penfield, Clearfield county, on Monday evening last. J. C. Harmon, a well-known merchant of Penfield, killed Ezekiel Hewett in his store. Mr. Hewett, who is about fifty years old, lived all his life in that vicinity, and Harmon has been in business there about ten years. Hewett ordered a bill of goods Monday morning and paid Harmon the bill, with the request that the delivery be made early. The goods had not arrived toward evening, and Hewett went to the BUILDERS' and PLASTERERS' SAND, store and insisted that the goods be delivered at once, or that he be given back his money. Harmon said the goods were packed and he would not unpack them. Angry words followed, and finally Hewett challenged Harmon to put him out. The store-keeper flew over the counter, and picked up a weight belonging to the count-er scales with which he struck him; the two men clinched and began fighting hard. Bystanders heard a sharp blow, and Hewett fell to the floor on his face. As he laid there Harmon kicked him, and, looking at him, exclaimed: "My

God is he dead?' Physicians were summoned, Dr. Swires arriving within five minutes after Hewett had fallen. Dr. Kline followed in a few moments, and by that time the body had been carried out to the front of the store. $5,000 The first doctor to arrive pronounced He-wett dead. An examination showed two wounds in his head, and these, the physicians say, caused concussion of the brain, which in turn caused death at once.

At the post mortem the dead man's brain was removed. It was found that the blows with the weight had caused hemorrhages that flooded the arachnoid and the med ulla oblongata, causing instant death. The internal organs of the dead man were taken out, incisions made, and a thorough exami-nation had. All were found in a splendid healthy condition.

The dead man leaves seven sons, Carl, Earl, who is a member of the State College base ball team. Harry, Clyde, Fred, Claude and Quay. He was buried on Thursday morning in Penfield where his wife was buried. Har-mon was taken to Clearfield under arrest and retained Cole and Moore as his law vers

A Letter in a Bottle Found off the Norwegian

Coast.

H. J. Baron, formerly an eastern new-paper man, has written the following to the Associated Press from Wrangel, Alaska. under date of June 24th:

"Information received here several days ago seemingly confirms the story that An-dree, the Arctic explorer is dead. A Norwegian, who was a passenger on the Rosa-lie, a Seattle boat bound for Skagway, showed a letter supposed to have been written by Andree. The letter, in a sealed bottle, had been washed ashore off the Norwegian coast and dated May 4th. The latitude was given at 74° north and the balloon was somewhere to the westward of Ireland. 'I am leaving balloon and provisions,-Andree.' were the words written."
