ONLY YOU.

Only you can make the way, reet with rose or rank with rue, Make the hour grave or gay-"Only you."

Fall of rain or fall of dew, In December or in May, Love, in growing old, grows new Like an ever-sprouting spray For a fresh flower comes in view Every time I sigh and say-"Only you."

Sweetheart, in your eyes of grey Let me read the message, too-Now, forever and a day-"Only you."

Powerful Paul Kruger.

Was a Physical Giant in His Youth and a Mental Sampson He Remains to This Day.

At seven years of age Paul Kruger was shooting big game; at 11 he killed his first lion; when 13 years old he was fighting with his father against the blacks, and at 17 he held his first public office as magistrate! He was born in 1825, and his grandfather, the first settler of the family in South Africa, came not from Holland, but from Germany. His youth was spent in herding oxen and sheep, moving from one pasture to another in search of grass water and to escape marauding or openly hostile natives, writes S. T. Pierce, in the Baltimore "Herald."

The tales told of Kruger's youth are well nigh past belief. He himself vouches for his ability when a boy to stand on his head on the back of a galloping horse, and the stories of his skill with firearms and of his strength are on a par with his feats of horsemanship. Any one who has seen Kruger, however, can believe him capable of almost any feat of strength. He stands six feet high, weighs 225 pounds, and his depth of chest and breadth of shoulder are those of a colossus. He has the rude strength of an ox, and a yarn current and universally believed in the Transvaal has it that he once killed a wild buffalo by holding its head in a pool of water until the beast was strangled. This was years ago, but the story is told in Pretoria today. His fame as a runner eclipses, if eclipse is possible, his repute as a dead shot, a modern Sampson, and a master of horsemanship. As a boy he won cattle from the Kaffirs in foot races, and more than once outran the horses that were wagered against him. The burghers love to tell of the powers of their President, now over 70, slow moving, ponderous, and not in any way, the figure of a hero.

Kruger has no thumb on his left hand, and how he lost it is another story that throws light on the quality of the man. The explosion of his gun tore the thumb and the wound was neglected until it suppurated; only then did he think it neces sary to seek the service of a surgeon. The surgeon promptly told him that amputation of the hand was necessary to save the arm. Kruger would not listen to this advice, and as the surgeon would have nothing to do with the case unless amputation was permitted Kruger became his own phy-Carefully sharpening his sheath knife, he laid the thumb on a board and cut off what he considered a sufficient length. Still the wound refused to heal, then he repeated the ing off the thumb below the second joint, so that one side of his hand is hardly distinguishable from the other. But he saved his hand, and using his first finger as a thumb he now finds his left hand quite as useful as the one with five digits. At another time he displayed the same power of withstanding physical pain by literally digging out an aching tooth with his knife.

The old man's large, but not well shaped head is set aggressively forward. His eyes are small, close together, and habitually half closed. Their expression, does not suggest, however, that the brain back of them is inactive; the impression is that they see without resting on anything in particular. The effect is one of constant watchfulness. The nose is large-out of all proportion even to the broad face. The expression of the mouth is set and unpleasing, except when his stoicism lapses for a moment, and his lips twitch in a faint imitation of a smile. His ears are large and flat. His clothes accentuate his uncouth figure, giving the impression that the trunk is about one-fourth his height. The wide top boots he wears give his long legs a strangely irregular appearance.

The president's house looks very much like a shooting lodge. All the rooms are on one floor, surrounded on all sides by a veranda. Here in a small room on the left of the central hall the president sits from early morning until 6 o'clock smoking his pipe and ready to see anyone who can give a passable excuse for seeking him.

Paul Kruger is an ignorant man so far as our idea of education goes. In his youth his general educationwas limited to reading and writing. But he is not without elever-ness and wit. Among his people, his say-ings pass currant as expressions of the highest wisdom, and not a few of them are worth the high estimate placed upon them. When, for instance, a deputation of burghers urged the death of Jameson and some of his men Kruger told them "No You want me to chop off the tail of a snake. Wait till we get a chance at the head; the "head," of course, is Mr. Rhodes."

—The brave soldiers of the Tenth Pennsylvania Volunteers are to have a joy-ous homecoming from the Philippines, and assuredly the most elaborate reception which the people of Western Pennsylvania may be able to arrange for them will not be beyond their deserving. They have shown the highest courage on the battle-field, and have endured with all possible patience the privations and hardships attendant upon the terrible campaign on the Island of Luzon. They will land at San Francisco and be brought across the continent in special trains to be mustered out in Pittsburg, the people of that city de-fraying the expense of their transportation from California in order that they may retain their travel pay allowance.

-The first detachment of veteran volunteers from the Philippines—the Second Oregon regiment and the California Signal Corps—is now in camp near San Francisco, where it will soon be joined by the Tenth Pennsylvania and the First Nebraska regiments. There are nearly 12,-000 volunteers still in the Philippines, and all these must be brought home and their successors trained in the peculiar tactics of Filipino warfare before a fair beginning ince of Santiago, tersely setting forth "The Prescan be made in a new campaign on Luzon ent Situation in Cuba," and the outlook for the Stories Told of the Distinguished Publisher.

There never was a man of more resolute purpose than Robert Bonner. Although he paid a fortune for such kings of the trotting turf as Dexter, Rarus, Maud S. and Sunol, and could have coined money out of each if he had permitted them to remain on the turf, he was proof against all temp-

When Mr. J.I. Case issued a challenge to trot Jay-Eye-See against Maud S., and speculators who saw an opportunity to make a great deal of money out of the excitement were annoying Mr. William H. Vanderbilt with offers of $100,000 for his great mare, a step was taken which created general surprise. Although Mr. Bonner and Mr. Vanderbilt had been estranged the latter sent a friend to his road rival and offered him Maud S. for about one-third the sum that others were willing to pay for her. He did this because he knew that the public had faith in the professions of Mr. Bonner and would not question the transfer. He also knew that he was guarding the Queen from the reproach of the hippodrome. While owned by Mr. Bonner, Maud S. twice reduced her record, but there was no deviation from the rule of a lifetime. After hours of discussion with Mr. Bonner in his library, I drafted the conditions which made it possible for the mare to reappear in public and obtain credit publicly for what she did. She was announced to trot exhibition heats against her record, and should she beat the record the directors of the track were to "commemorate the achievement by awarding her a cup, with the time made by her engraved thereon." At Lexington no admission fees were charged and there were no wagers of any kind in dispute. The church people were out in force and were highly gratified at the success of the performance. Mr. Bonner never drove on Sunday or allowed one of his horses to be driven on that day. His strict ideas of morality and inflexible purpose lifted the trotting horse from the degradation into which dishonest schemers had plunged him and paved the way to the golden era of breeding which reached its zenith when Mr. J. DEAR MR. BUSBEY:—A day or two after your beautiful and touching tribute to Ally your beautiful and touching tribute to Ally appeared I tried to read it aloud to two members of the family, but I choked up and broke down before I finished it. That was over two weeks ago. This afternoon I opened the Kentucky Stock Farm, when I was all alone, and read it there, but I could not finish the concluding sentences without tears running down my cheeks. Affectionately,

Only those who were on intimate terms with Mr. Bonner know how many problems in farriery were mastered by him. He has left much memorandum on the subject, which if put into a volume will add immeasurably to the sum of human knowl-HAMILTON BUSBEY.

It was said of him that he never borrowed a dollar and never owed one. Beginning life a "printer's devil" the first venture for himself was the New York Ledger which soon reached the then phenomenal circulation of 400,000 copies a week. He paid his contributors extravagant prices, Fanny Fern getting $100 for her weekly letter. He had great love for horses, but never bet a dollar on a race.

—The New York Sun has taken the trouble to collect, and compile, the loss, in killed and wounded, in all the great battles of modern times, and finds the loss was greatest, for the number of men engaged, at Gravelot and Gettysburg. The former battle was fought in the Franco-Prussian war, and the latter, as all our readers know, was the decisive battle of our civil war. The battles that were fought in the Spanish-American war, and in the so-called Philippine war, were but skirmishes in comparison.

While one legged Ambrose Kelley, of Manayunk, was seated on the Reading trestle at Williamsport recently, a passenger train bore down upon him and he was compelled to lie at full length at one side of the trestle. The step of the last car knocked him into the water, where he would have been drowned but for the fact that his cork leg buoyed him up. As it was he was rescued with great difficulty and removed to the hospital.

Progressive Euchre Players.

In Berwick, says an exchange, while a ladies' card club was engaged in playing for a $2 prize, the sons of some of them, small boys, were arrested in a hay mow, while they were playing for 50 cents, as a prize. The mothers cried, and said: "What a terrible town this is to raise boys, anyhow." It served the boys right, however. They might have known the difference between a $2 and 50c. prize.

-A young man of Ellsworth, Me., recently allowed himself to be mesmerized by a traveling hypnotist, and for twenty-four hours he lay asleep in the show window of one of the principal stores in the town. For this he was to receive $10. Meanwhile the tax collector, having found that the sleeper was a delinquent, filed the necessary legal claim for the $10, and the young man awoke to find his poll tax for the past three years paid.

A French scientist is authority for the statement that if the birds were all taken from off the earth a man could not survive longer than nine years, as, notwithstanding all efforts to get rid of them worms and parasites would destroy all vegetation and animal life. What a common sight it is to see small boys, with their toy guns, destroying without compunction these same little protectors.

-Rev. J. Hughes Parry, pastor of the Moriah church, at Utica, N. Y., broke his fast on Saturday, having for forty-eight days subsisted entirely on water. He fasted in the hope of relieving a chronic stomach ailment. His condition is considerably improved, although he is weakened. For the first day or two Mr. Parry experienced intense hunger, but that soon left him.

A valuable horse owned by Francis C. Smith, of Oxford township, Adams county, disembowled himself the other day. He stepped upon the bandle of a cradle in such a manner that the blade flew up and ripped open his stomach.

-The late Robert Bonner at times spent $25,000 a week for advertising his paper. He was a printer, and the great fortune he made by using printer's ink shows how acurately he gauged its value.

A stranger lost in a large city would place far more dependence on the directions given him by a local resident than the guidance of another stranger like himself. This is a natural consequence of experience; it's like a ship in a strange port—a trusty pilot familiar with the harbor is always called upon to bring her safely to her moorings; So it is with endorsement; we doubt the sayings of people living at distant points because we can't investigate, but public expression of local citizens can be depended on, for 'tis an easy matter to prove it.
