-A standard bred horse is a trotter. A thoroughbred horse is a runner. The thoroughbred (of Oriental origin) has been bred for generations in England and in America for speed at the run and staying qualities. The standard bred has been down in front, I said: "How do you do qualities. The standard bred has been it ?" bred in America for years for speed at the trot and for endurance at that gait. The thoroughbred is the oldest of the breeds of pedigreed live stock. The stud book for thoroughbreds was the first register established for horses or any other variety of live stock. The trotter sprang in a meas-ure from the blood of the thoroughbred, When the skirt came back to me it had a but has been specifically bred for so long to the trotting gait that it is unerringly reproduced-that is, when the colts do not come pacers! In the matter of form and size and quality the standard-bred is by no means uniform. There are different types in the thoroughbred also (as in all breeds,) but this variation is much less than in the trotter. They trot in all sizes and shapes;
