REV. HICKS PREDICTS JANUARY WEATHER :- Rev. Irl R. Hicks in his forecast for January says : The 3rd to 5th are reactionary storm centres, accompanied by continued cloudiness and rain and sleet, attended by high winds. About the 3rd to 5th rain will turn to heavy sleet and snow northward, followed by high winds and cold waves from the northwest. The cold is expected to moderate during the vulcan storm period, central on 9th to 11th, and more storms of rain turning to snow in most sections northward will travel from west to east about the 9th to 12th, changing to much colder over most parts of the country.

Second storm period from 15th to 17th ending in rain or snow, followed by high barometric pressure, stiff northwest winds and cold. From 19th to 23rd, warmer weather followed by general storms of rain and snow, the storms running their course from west to east from 20th to 23rd. The 26th and 27th are at the centre of reactionary storm movements, and raw, chilling

Their honeymoon is being spent in Centre county, where the groom is well known as a sober, industrious young man who is en-titled to a good wife to share his joys and sorrows on the billowy sea of married life.

A family reunion and social gathering was held on New Year's day at the old Fortney home on the hill where so many happy events have transpired. Two twenty pound gobblers and a lot of roosters were gotten away with by the guests and the relishes and entrees were such as only Mrs. Fortney and her two young daughters know how to prepare.

Wm. J. Myers accompanied by his wife and two promising sons, H. C. and Edward, drove over from Alexandria to make their annual visit and to take in their share of the I. O. O. F. banquet. They are 22 miles away but that distance does not deter them from keeping in close touch with their old neighbors. H. C. will graduate from the medical department of the Pennsylvania University this year, and Ed. expects to enter there in the fall, so the Myers will not lack for doctors. The Christmas festivities were ushered in in this end of the county by the entertain-ment in the Pine Hall Lutheran church on Saturday evening. On Sunday evening the scholars of the Lutheran Sabbath schoolgave one of their splendid entertainments to a full one of their spiendid entertainments to a full house while the Methodists, Presbyteriaus and Reforms contented themselves with treating their scholars. Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Van Pelt and Mrs. R G. H. Speed, of Ithaca, N. Y., attended the funeral of Mrs. Van Pelt. Mrs. Van Pelt came here on this sad mission at considerable risk of her own health, having just recovered from an illness that confined her to bed. Mrs. Speed is a sister of Mrs. Van Pelt.

The several congregations comprising the Reformed charge of Centre Hall, were so pleased with the Rev. Kerschner, of New York, who filled appointments here last week, that a call was extended him last Saturday at a meeting of the Consistory. Whether or not the reverend gentleman will accept the summons to this field is as yet not known. His manners on and off the pulpit impressed all in the most favorable way.

Progress grange met in regular session in their hall, Saturday and elected officers for 1900: Master, Hon. L. Rhone; overseer, Geo. Gingerich ; lecturer, S. W. Smith : steward, B. Shafer ; assistant steward, C. D, Keller ; chaplain, J. R. Lawyers ; treasurer, John Arney ; secretary, D. K. Mingle Esq., made an impromptu address to his fellows. His talk was somewhat of a historical nature, and said that the Centre Hall lodge was constituted August, 1875, with a membership of nine, viz: W. B. Mingle, master; J. A. Fleming, senior warden ; Henry R. Smith, junior warden; C. F. Herlacher, secretary; Daniel C. Keller, treasurer, and John P. Odenkirk, Oliver P. Rearick, Robert McCormick, Henry C. Beamer. Those who are acquainted in this valley will see how often time has decimated this number.

> After the officers had been instructed con cerning the unwritten work of the order by Col. Reeder all proceeded to the establishment of E. C. Nearhood, where a supper fit for the gods was in waiting, to which a few not acquainted with the mysteries of Free Masonry were invited and responded. Messrs. Harry Keller, Boyd Musser and Dr. J. J. Y. Dale, of the Bellefonte lodge, were also guests.
