Elton Bros. shows were an attraction for the smaller and many of the older folks Friday afternoon and evening. The show was fairly well attended, and said to have been a good one for the money.

The coal trade seems to have taken a slump, doubtless caused by slight over production at the coal wharves in the eastern market. However, this is nothing unusual at this time of the year, as coal is always unsteady during the summer months.

John Buncea, a slavish miner, was killed just east of Munson station early Sunday morning, while walking on the railroad track. He was knocked down and run over by a west bound coal train. He was a resident of Winburne, to which place he was journeying at the time of the accident. He was 26 years of age and leaves a wife to mourn his loss.

Rev. Geo. Bright celebrated the fifth anniversary of his pastorate of the Lutheran church by appropriate services on Sunday. The anniversary sermon was preached in the morning. In the evening the church was crowded to its utmost capacity, every available seat being taken. Mr. Luther Bright, brother of the pastor, sang a solo in the morning and assisted at the evening services.

A jolly party of campers, consisting of the families of James, Edward, Benj. and Frank Perks and A. E. Hahn and wife, are comfortably located at Deer Creek, on the Susquehanna river, about fourteen miles from town. Where the camp is located is an ideal spot and one which is most always selected by parties camping at that point. A number of their friends drove out to see them on Sunday and were given a most cordial welcome. They will probably return to town on Thursday.

The handkerchief fair held by the Guild on Thursday and Friday evenings of last week, in the Club house, proved a great success, as everything taken in hand by the Guild usually does. The spacious room on the first floor was utilized for serving refreshments. After one had enjoyed the good things to be had in the way of cake, coffee, ice cream and strawberries, they were cordially invited to see the large display of handkerchiefs on exhibition upstairs and invited to buy. The receipts were $80, which were probably much exceeded on Friday evening.

Axe Man.

Many of our people attended the show which was in Bellefonte Wednesday.

John Hardenburg, who was employed for the past nine months in the public schools at White Haven, Pa., is home for his summer vacation. Mr. Hardenburg was very successful in his work and has been re-elected to his position with increased wages. Raine and Hosterman of the Journal and W. S. Musser, the genial landlord, have had their monstaches shaved off and now the only topic for discussion in town is whether it improves their looks any. And, by the way, there are many differing opinions.

Books, Magazines, Etc.

THE CHRONIC LOAFER.—One of the latest contributions to the volumes of light literature is "The Chronic Loafers," a compilation of the clever character sketches of Mr. Nelson McAllister Lloyd. The work is of particular interest to the people of this section for two reasons: First, the author is a relative of General Beaver and graduated from The Pennsylvania State College so recently as 1892. Second, because it touches a field that has never before, to our knowledge, furnished the scenes or characters for a novel.

Mr. Lloyd was born and raised on a farm at McAllisterville, in Juniata county, and it is simple, oftentimes ludicrous, life of what he pleased to call the "natives" that the "Chronic Loafers" depicts.

We Central Pennsylvanians know that there is plenty of material for good stories in our every day life. Our mannerisms, expressions, little social, political and church squabbles are all amusing when recited off by a good story teller, so Mr. Lloyd has done still better by telling them in a series of stories that are as delightful in the purity of their wit as they are true to nature's heart among the Alleghenies.

His eight years of experience on the New York Sun have made him quite versatile, yet "The Chronic Loafers" reveals the fact that he has forgotten none of the impressions that impress themselves so vividly on the minds of the peaceful people in the country villages in Central Pennsylvania.

J. F. Taylor and Co., 4 and 7 east 10th street, N. Y., are the publishers of Mr. Lloyd's book, which is attractively bound in cloth at $1.25.

In the July number of Everybody's Magazine appears the first installment of a series of articles by Mr. Stewart Robson in the nature of an autobiography, and entitled "The Memories of Fifty Years." These are articles that will interest, not only theatrical people, and people who are interested in theatrical matters, but also everyone who likes good story telling, new glimpses of history, and new views of famous people. The simple explanation for the month is "Liquid Air." The story of Petroleum is told, and a brief account of the workings of the oil industry. There are fourteen other good articles and short stories.

The Philadelphia Sunday Times will, on July 1st, present its readers with a handsome lithographed portrait of Mr. Bryan. The portrait of Mr. Bryan is made from a photograph forwarded to The Times from Lincoln, Neb., by the distinguished Democratic leader himself, and is in every particular a faithful likeness. The Sunday Times of the same date will contain a valuable article by Col. A. K. McClure, in which this celebrated writer gives the history of the past Democratic conventions and writes of many interesting and exciting incidents connected therewith. Among other things of special interest there will also appear on July 1st a richly illustrated article on Mr. Bryan and his family at home on the farm, signed articles by prominent Democrats on the national outlook, etc. The Sunday Times of July 1st, issued on the eve of the National Convention, will be of unusual interest to every student of political history. Don't be disappointed. Order your copy in advance.

FREE PICTURES EVERY WEEK.—The appreciation of the recent pictures given free to readers of the Philadelphia Sunday Press has induced the management of that paper to announce that a beautiful picture will be given with every copy of the Philadelphia Sunday Press every Sunday. The assurance is also given that this series of pictures will be the most magnificent ever distributed. The subjects are all original and of the highest class of artists.

EX-SENATOR INIGALLA, in the SATURDAY EVENING POST says few Presidents have gained in public estimation by their incumbency. Many have lost. Grant would have occupied a higher pedestal had he remained at the head of the army, and Lincoln and Garfield both died at a fortunate time for their fame. But, wearing and grinding as are the stress and strain, few, if any, have been broken by the tension. The White House has been exceptionally free from tragedies. Taylor died from a surfeit of cherries and milk, and Harrison from a cold contracted by riding bareheaded in a snowstorm up the steps from the Capitol the day of his inauguration. Possibly Polk was the only President who succumbed to the wearisome burdens of his office. He died June 15th, 1849, three months after the close of his term, at the comparatively early age of fifty-four.

Years ago Bret Harte wrote a series of stories which he called "condensed novels"—humorous tales, in which he burlesqued the style, mannerisms and peculiarities of the authors of the day. Mr. Harte has just completed, for The Saturday Evening Post, a new series of these imitatively funny literary caricatures. Admirers of Conan Doyle should read the adventures of Hemlock Jones in his quest of The Stolen Cigar-Case; and those who are fond of Mr. Kipling will find pleasure in Stories Three; tales of Moe Kow, the Cow; Puskat, the worm-throating one; the adventures of Blenzyed, Otherwise and Mollidewiny.

In Rudolph, the Resembler, the astute reader will find a new version of Anthony Hope's most popular story, and will understand how much more complicated it might have been had there been three kings instead of only two. The first of these "condensed novels"—The Jungle Folk—will appear in The Saturday Evening Post of June 30th.

The Popular Science Monthly, which was established in 1872 by the Appletons and which has at present the largest circulation of any scientific journal in the world, is now being edited by Prof. James McKeen Cattell, of Columbia University, and published by McClure, Phillips & Co. Prof. Cattell is well known as a psychologist and as the editor of Science.

Are You Going to Kansas City, July 4th, 1900?

Numerous inquiries have been made, in regard to transportation to Kansas City, to attend the Democratic National Convention on July 4th, next. I have made inquiry to same, and hereby state that we are able to make a special Pullman car, providing there are about forty persons, who will be glad to take the opportunity, when you consider that the fare from Bellefonte to Kansas City and return, including sleeping berth both ways, and also lodging in the special car while in Kansas City is only $38.00. All wishing to go should let me know at once with remittance, so as to order car in plenty of time. Any further information desired write me and I will be pleased to give you particulars. Yours Truly, J. K. JOHNSTON, County Chairman.
