FARM NOTES.

and attrac —To properly supply an orchard with its appropriate plant food requires careful manageme and the judicious application of fertilizers. There it twice as much potash in the apples as in the wood of the trees. In he ash of the tree, however, contains to willes as much lime as the ash of the tru and also a larger proportion of phosphoric acid. While the tree is growing, therefore, it should be benefitted by lime and ground bone. When bearing fruit it should have an increased supply of potash. Wood ashes should give good results on all kinds of orchards, as ashes contain potash, a large proportion of lime and some phosphoric acid.

—Whether the manure is plentiful or not every farmer should set apart a sum to be expended for fertilizers every year. When clover is a principal crop no costly nitrate need be purchased, but 50 pounds of nitrate of soda per acre applied on wheat and corn will pay for itself and more. Potash and phosphate should be used more liberally and on all the grain crops. Lime should be applied whenever a clover sod is plowed under. By this rotation of three grain crops in five years the land will increase in fertility and the yields will be much larger than by any other system for many farmers. When potatoes or turnips are grown they should be planted on the clover left for the fifth year, and will take clover left for the fifth year, and will take the place of the clover in that year's rotation. It is sometimes the rule to keep the ground covered with a growing crop in winter, if possible, hence "catch crops" should never be overlooked. When corn is taken off the land let rye follow. Turn under the rye early and sow oats. When the oats are taken off sow cow peas and plow them underfor wheat. Always use a a small quantity of lime on the land after a small quantity of lime on the land after turning under a green crop. It may even prove more profitable to turn the clover under the spring of the fifth year and grow 2 crops of cow peas, or sow the peas late and turn under one crop. These suggestions, however, can only be followed when circumstances permit, but they may perhaps, lead to more consideration of proper rotation of crops

—Red Polled cattle, as the name indicates, are solid red, and hornless. They are native of Norfolk and Suffolk, England, and are prized for their good qualities—for meat and for dairy purposes. As compar-ed with other pure breeds of cattle known ed with other pure breeds of cattle known in this country, none surpass them in the dual purpose of beef and butter. While not equal in weight to Short-horns, they probably stand second, in this, running up as high as 2,000 to 2,800 pounds, and in the dairy, second only to Jerseys. In this country I have never heard of any purebred being killed for beef, and all records on this line have been in England. They seem, because of security, to have been used in breeding, and only some grades have been fattened for the block. The great advantage they have for beef over the Shorthorns and similar beef breeds is that they will take on fat at any age, and seem to will take on fat at any age, and seem to prosper on soant food better than the regular beef breeds. They possess the characteristics of Devons very much, but are hornless, heavier and are better milkers. Like Devons, they are very active and great "hustlers" and do not require so much feed to produce fat. In some experiments on a cross on Short-horns, between one and two years of age, the half breed pad half bells took on which feeter and had. one and two years of age, the half breed Red Polls took on weight faster, and had not as much food and attention as the Short horns. The cows held their flesh well, even when in good milk. I saw one of the finest butter makers of this breed, when in full milk, and she weighed 1,200 pounds. They are very compact, thick through body and with short legs, and have long teats. One of the most distinguishing features is a bunch of long hair on the top of head, falling down like the old fashioned bangs on a girl's forehead. on a girl's forehead.

—The poor horse, the work horse of the farm, usually receives little besides food, water and an occasional brushing off of the coarse dirt which covers his coat. Yet all horse owners will agree that the sturdy, faithful beast of burden of the farm of all animals on the place deserves good care.
The practice of watering horses engaged in heavy farm work between meals add greatly to the comfort of the animals and makes them more willing in the practice. them more willing in the performance of their tasks. Not any great quantity is necessary or desired, but a few mouthfuls to relieve the mouth and throat from dust, necessary or desired, but a few mouthfuls to relieve the mouth and throat from dust, just as you want a swallow or two from the spring between meals. Then there is the excellent practice, not so common as it should be, of using a sponge and water freely, especially on the parts of the horse covered by the harness, at the close of the day's work. One can scarcely imagine the comfort the cleansing of these parts gives to the horse, as well as the washing out of mouth and nostrils and the sponging of his neck and head.

The chief discomforts of the horse, however, are found in the dark and poorly ventilated stables and especially on hot summer nights. Stables with doors and windows can be arranged to provide good light and ventilation without admitting flees or mosquitoes and all at a small expense. As a rule stables are too dark.

The barn door should be made in two parts. The screen frame is made of inch stuff and is about three inches wide braced at the corners with upright pieces of the same material screwed on. The distance apart these upright pieces should be placed depends upon circumstances—whether there is danger from thieves or if the horse should these upright pieces should be placed depends upon circumstances—whether there is danger from thieves or if the horse should get loose in the stable, breaking the netting with its head. In such cases the upright strips should be placed closer together, otherwise four over the space will be ample. The wire cloth or netting is used, which can be bought at hardware stores at 2 cents a square foot, and varies in width from 18 inches up. The screen is made to swing inches up. The screen is made to swing inside and is bolted when closed. The upinchee up. The screen is made to swing inside and is bolted when closed. The upper half of the door proper swings out in most cases and can be fastened to the side of the barn with hook and staple. In the event of a strong wind or rain storm this door can be closed and bolted from the inside without removing the screen.

The same plan of screaning the windows may also be carried out. Most barn windows are made to slide, so that in this case the screen is also made to slide, but in the opposite direction from the window. It is thus very easy to slide either the screen or the glass sash whichever way may be needed over the opening. If the window is in front of the horse where he can readily reach it, it is a good plan to cover the glass with wire for often times he will throw his head against the glass with sufficient force to break it and usually cuts his head more or less.

In the skirt itself was a balayeuse of ever less the skirt itself was a balayeuse of this, for it is the very pretty touch on many of the skirts, for it there is one thing demanded about a well-dressed woman it is that swirl of drapery around the feet. It is this condition of things that has given the morning glory skirt its name.

The blouse of this alpaca was of tucked Indian muslin, that very sheer, deep cream weave that is so desired by the fashionable women this summer.

Down each front width of the blouse was a band of the Irish lace applique. Over this was a bolero jacket, also tucked, of the alpaca with small collar and revers of pale blue silk poplin covered with the lace.

FOR AND ABOUT WOMEN.

Insist upon proper appliances to work with. A carpet sweeper costs but $2, and is an incalculable saving of the housewife's is an incalculable saving of the housewife's strength. Green wood is enough to wear out the patience of a saint. A crack in the oven will upset the plans and peace of a whole family. And a smoky flue almost jeopardizes a woman's chances of heaven. These are a housekeeper's tools, and she should see to it that they are in good working order More than this, sine should arrange her workshop to the very best advantage. Labor is multiplied by having to go hither and you for utensils and ingredients. Think out an arrangement that will save steps. but now serving with the Forty serviti

In summertime fashionable women In summertime fashionable women wear gloves a full size larger by number than those they purchase the rest of the year. It would look "old fashioned" as well as be uncomfortable to have one's hand incased in skin tight sheaths of kid or silk. The loose glove is worn in lisle thread, silk, cotton, suede or glace kid, and also for traveling North in the warm castor gloves. Do not be afraid that your little hand will look too large. hand will look too large.

The woolen goods for the earlier fall are broadcloth, vicunas, camel's hair, serges, twills, henriettas, cords and some cross canvas meshes in black, blue, brown, castors, gray, with a very few reds, garnets, purples and scarcely any greens. For general everyday wear, traveling, rainy day, golf, utility, homespuns, tweeds, cheviots, friezes and Oxford mixtures are the leading tayouttes.

The problem of the skirt backs is again with us. Its solution is still pending.
There are authorities who claim that the new back will be something between the habit back and the inverted pleat. On the habit back and the inverted pleat. On the other hand, some of the early birds in Skirtdom look very much like the habit back which was the prevailing model of '98. Foreign influence is largely in favor of a continuance of a habit back skirt.

A number of the new skirts show that a favored method of trimmings will be the use of panels. The trimmings of lace show this as much as anything else, for the skirts are slashed at the side to show the panels of lace or of some different material, or down the front breadth is a piece of fancy of lace or of some different material, or down the front breadth is a piece of fancy fabric looking like a panel. This seems to be a compromise for not adopting absolutely the overskirt, and it is more graceful and more becoming to most figures. Then the idea of having an overskirt effect without any ruffle, merely a band on the underskirt is another favorite fashion.

All the advance coasts for the winter have

All the advance coats for the winter have All the advance coats for the winter have sleeves much larger than have been worn. The long coats and wraps have exaggeratedly big sleeves, but even the ordinary walking jackets are not made with the exaggregated tight sleeves that were threatened a short time ago. Especially is this true of the little fullness at the top of the sleeves, which is so essential to comfort as well as to the appearance of the garment. The high collar appears on fall and winter models, except on short walking jackets on which the collar is turned down.

Such good, old fashioned "remedial foods" as were known to our grandmothers who understood what will "set well on the stomach" seems but little known in the dyspeptic dietary recommended today. Yet there are few who understand the merits of "buttermilk pop" and "baked milk" with the bran and graham dishes, who would willingly discard these good old dishes for drug remedies for the distressing dyspepsia and "weak stomach."

When nearly boiling, stir in two table-spoonfuls of flour, rubbed smooth in a little cold milk. Stir until boiling. Use hot Another good article is made by putting several quarts of fresh milk into a jar and tying writing paper over it. Let it stand in a moderate oven for eight or ten hours. It will be like cream when it is done.

The hip yoke that has become so fashionable on the well made gowns of this summer is sometimes outlined by tucks or pleats on cloth suits.

A woman wore a dark blue serge of thinnest quality laid around the waist belt in half inch box pleats heavily stitched with black thread. These tucks were about an inch apart and graduated in depth, the short ones arriving at the back.

On a very short waisted, plump woman these hip yokes should be made longer in front and back than at the sides. This does not cut the line off at the back and gives a better sweep from the collar to end of placket.

This also gives the up and down effect that is coming in so rapidly on skirts. The lines are rounded, Vandyck points—if one can use such a term.

White alpaca, which is really nothing but mohair, will be used for house gowns this winter and should be in the wardrobe of every young girl who is coming in society. It will serve her on many occasions. She can wear all manner of waists with it in pastel shades and white and cream and make the waist of alpaca a snug fitting sailor blouse with sailor collar and long revers of tucked white nainsook edged with cream Val. lace. A collar of white wide braid topped with a deep turnover of nainsook and Val. lace and belt and cuffs of the braid.

This is an admirable costume for an informal dinner, an evening at a play or an afternoon at home.

There is nothing any prettier than the mohair and brilliantine that have been used so much this summer. Rose colored alpaca is much a la mode for afternoon and evening. The skirt has a nip yoke, running to a long point in front of Irish lace. The circular skirt is tucked at each side and plain in front and back. The bottom is entirely plain and the skirt was worn over white taffeta foundation that had two pinked, box pleated ruchings at the foot. Inside the skirt itself was a balayeuse of eoru lace.

Patti's Fortune.

What the Little Bird in Her Throat Earned for This

Madam Patti, who recently obtained her 57th birthday, has for many years held the record for the largest sum earned in a year by a woman. Her highest total for twelve by a woman. Her highest total for twelve months is $350,000. Her present London terms are said to be $2000 a night, but her high water-mark for a single performance is $11,000, received in Buenos Ayres. Madame Patti has written some "Confessions," from which it appears that her favorite poet is Longfellow; her favorite novelist, Dickens: her favorite past time, entertaining her friends, to whom she is loyalty itself. She presents them with rich and costly presents. All the chairs in Madame Patti's boudoir at Craig-y-Nos Castle are drapped with colored ribbons, taken from innumerable bouquets which have been thrown to her. Some of the ribbons are many years old, and much prized. bons are many years old, and much prized.

French Battleship Sinks Torpedo Boat Destroyer.

Fifty Sailors Lost in a Frightful Accident During the Maneuvers of the Fleet Off Cape St. Vincent—The Smaller Boat Disobeyed Orders.

PARIS, Aug. 12—During the maneuvers of the French fleet off Cape St. Vincent last night a collision occurred between the first class battleship Brennus, flying the flag of Vice Admiral Fournier, commander of the fleet, and the torpedo boat destroyer Framee.

The Framee sank immediately. The accident was due to the fact that the Framee turned to the right when ordered to the left. The meagre details thus far received show that only a small portion of the crew consisting of four officers and fifty-eight men, were saved. It is believed that no fewer than fifty were lost.

The Lesser Evil.

"Dr. Killiam told me to-day," said the president of the life insurance company, "that young Pinchpenny owes him a bill of $200, which he can't collect. I think we had better pay it."

"What! cried the treasurer. "Are you joking?"

"Not at all. Pinchpenny is insured with us for $10,000, and Killiam knows it."

A bit of ham lodged in the throat of the 3 year old child of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Erickson, while she was eating dinner at Kane Thursday night, and despite the efforts of the tot and heriparents, it could not be dislodged. A physician was summoned in haste, but before he arrived the child died.

The dead body of a newly-born white infant was found in a valise on the platform of the Lansdowne Station, near Media Sunday evening. It is thought the valise was droppedfrom a passing train.
