Ex-Senator John J. Ingalls

He Died at East Las Vegas Early Thursday Morn

Former United States Senator John J.

Ingalls died at East Las Vegas Thursday morning. He was surrounded by his fam-

Senator Ingalls' illness dated from March

1899, when, at Washingtown his throat began troubling him. He worked steadily better. Ten months ago he sought anothable to write occasionally for the news-

From time to time reports of the Senator's serious illness were circulated, but cuts or wounds of the hands or other parts.

Several cases have lately been recorded of inquests relating to persons who have died from blood poisoning arising from small cuts on the hands. The history in all of these cases varies but little, and is practically the same. A man, for example, while working at his trade, or even while carrying out the simple detail of cutting a piece of bread, receives a small cut on the hand. The injury is so trival that any-thing is considered good enough with which to stop the bleeding, and, this end having been attained, no more is thought of itself, and is exposed to all sorts of filth-iness and sources of infection. By good luck nothing may happen, but the public would do well to bear in mind that from the most trival injury to the skin acute septicaemia may supervene, and rapidly be followed by a fatal termination. By

In the centre of the square, between the new and old government buildings, stands a typical Dutch church, around which, four times in the year, during the natchtmaal, or communion celebration. the wagons of the burghers who come in from the surrounding country are drawn up, and in these, or tents, erected alongside, the Boers and their wives and families live for the four or five days that the festival lasts.

When one catches a glimpse of the town for the first time, it seems to be luxuriating in a huge growth of trees of various descriptions, so great in the profuse foli-age. No matter where one looks in the town or the exquisite suburbs of Sunny side and Arcadia, every residence is flanked with trees of one kind or another, and in the streets are several beautiful avenues of the eucalyptus and willow varieties, some of which have been planted for many Another great feature of Pretoria is water, of which there is a plentiful and ex-cellent supply. The Aspies river skirts the town, and the Fontains, the name given to some springs which rise in the hills about two miles to the southeast of Pretoria, furnish an abundant of water for all purposes. Indeed, so great is the supply hat beautiful clear water runs down or both sides of several of the streets, and most refreshing it looks during the sum-

A Curious Way of Covering a Rocky Crag With Plant

In the grounds of the Duke of Athol and near Blair castle England, stands a high, rocky crag named Craigiebarns. It looked grim and bare in the midst of beauty, and its owner thought how much prettier it would look if only trees, shrubs, etc., could be planted in its nooks and crannies. It was considered impossible for any one to scale its steep and dangerous acclivities, and no other way was thought of to get

One day Alexander Nasmyth, father of the celebrated engineer, paid a visit to the duke's grounds. The crag was pointed out to him, and he was told of the desire of the duke regarding it. After some thought he conceived how it could be accessed the second of the desire of the duke regarding the could be accessed to the second of the desire of the second of the day of the second of the day of the second of the day of the second of the complished. In passing the castle he no-ticed two old cannon. He got a few small tin canisters made to fit the bore of the cannon and filled them with a variety of tree, shrub and grass seeds. The cannon was loaded in the usual way and fired at the rock from all sides.

The little canisters on striking the rock ourst, scattering the seeds in all directions. Many seeds were lost, but many more fell into the ledges or cracks where there was a little moss or earth. These soon showed signs of life, and in a few years graceful trees and pretty climbing plants all sown by gunpowder were growing and flourish-ing in nearly every recess of the formerly bare, gray crag, clothing it with verdant beauty.

A Conscience Stricken Dog Any one who has ever owned a big affectionate dog will rise up in arms at once if it is insinuated that our canine friends haven't thinking minds. Here is a story told by an English lady about how her favorite dog showed that he knew he had done wrong and was sorry for it :

"We were staying at Yarmouth, and Bran, who was allowed perfect liberty, was lost for one entire day. At night, just before the house was shut up, he made his appearance. Being met at the hall door, he was rebuked and his offered paw not taken taken. "His nightly resting place was a cellar, where he had a comfortable straw couch provided for him, and his usual custom was to run down stairs immediately to his bed and supper, but on this evening he remained at the top of the stairs and cried and whined piteously. Presently my brother said, 'You must come and make it up with Bran or the poor fellow will cry there all night.' Accordingly we opened the door and one by one shook Bran's paw in sign of forgiveness, whereupon he quietly walk-ed down stairs and after eating his supper with avidity curled himself upon the strav and went to sleep."

Tossed Up By a Cow.

At Morris Run, a few days ago 2 year old Eddie Bennett was playing in the street. A cow came along and seeing the child's colored kilts, rushed at the child caught him on her horns and tossed hir twenty feet in the air. The cow made a second rush for the boy, but was driven away. The child was severely injured.
