BURKET AND MATERN.—John L. Burket, Stormstown's bustling young undertaker and placid politician, scored one on his friends Tuesday morning by going off and getting married without their apprehension. The ceremony took place at the Methodist parsonage in Howard and was solemnized by the Rev. A. P. Wharton, former pastor of the Half Moon charge.

The fair bride was Miss Olive Matern, daughter of Samuel B. Matern. They were accompanied to Howard and attended by Miss Belle Matern and J. Wood Miller, of Stormstown, as maid of honor and best man and directly after the ceremony departed on their wedding journey to Philadelphia and Atlantic City.

Upon their return they will take charge of the Burket home in Stormstown, while the groom's father and mother, P. W. and Mrs. Burket, make an extensive visit to their relatives in the West and afterwards they will go to housekeeping in the house next door.

W. D. Schell, 21 years old, of Vicksburg, Union county, arrived in Millheim Tuesday evening with a horse and buggy he had hired from some of his neighbors in order to go out canvassing for a book. He had tried to sell the team at Laurelton and also offered it for sale to the Millheim liverymen. After he had left the latter place a message ordering his arrest had been received from Vicksburg and constable Geo. Mensch started in pursuit of him. He overtook the young rascal at Centre Hall, where he made the arrest and took him back to Millheim. The Vicksburg parties were waiting for him, but when they got their horse and buggy back they refused to prosecute the boy.

"Where, Oh Where, is Good Old Dantel" (Communicated)

Some say he is in the Lion's Den and some in the Promised Land; but the last we heard of him he was down sitting up with Judge Love who had a very severe attack of Quaysm, so much so that it impaired his sight and also paralyzed his limbs. The Governor, after making a close examination of his case, said that nothing short of a big dose of anti-Quay medicine would bring relief. Judge hesitated for a moment, but finally gulped it down. The Governor seemed to manifest great sympathy for the much afflicted judge who was tossing around and imagining he saw queer things. The Governor consoled him by telling him what he imagined to be, his nigger sliding "down his cellar door" was a vacant bench in the Supreme court and Gabriel beckoning for him to come up. Judge seemed much better about the time the Governor was ready to leave. He told him to keep as quiet as possible, and it might be well enough for him to send for Wilbur Reeder and have him come and bleed him, and also bring a box of anti-Quay pills with him and take them all, as his disease is of long standing and will require considerable time to work it out of his system.

The Governor says he has been very much engaged for the last month in preparing a ticket for the people and has about concluded to abolish primary elections, because it is foolishness to go through that little bit of formality when the people know his will.
