FARM NOTES.

Some men think they have done a good thing when they cut the weeds on the highways and around their premises after such weeds have gone to seed. This is too much like locking the stable after the horse

-It may not be known that if cow peas are mowed while the pods are very small a new growth occurs, but such is the case, and sheep will prefer the second growth to any other. The roots of cow peas contain nitrogen, and will improve the soil more when the tops are cut of and used.

-Now is the time to sow lawn grass. Plow the ground, spread fine manure on the land and harrow until the plot is well worked over, using a rake if necessary, raking again after sowing the seed. The grass will start early, make considerable growth and also begin growth early in the from $10 to $20, according to the price obtained per quart. This fact should convince all who sell milk from the farm that it does not pay to keep any but the best cows to be obtained.

-While some farmers are deploring the loss of profit on wool, the knowing ones are raising "hothouse" or early lambs, and make more profit from one ewe than they formerly did with half a dozen sheep kept for wool. They use the mutton breeds, attach but little value to the fleece, and make larger profits from sheep than they to death is whiter in flesh than when pre-pared in any other manner. Then the question is how to cause them to bleed to death and not disfigure them in any way. This can be easily done by opening the beak of the fowl, then with a sharp pointed knife make an incision at the back of the roof, which will divide the vertebra and cause immediate death, after which hang up the fowl by the legs until the bleeding

-A reader sends Ohio Farmer the accompanying description of an appliance that he uses to tie corn fodder in the shock: A is a piece of hard wood 3 feet long, round and tapered to point. A crossbar is solidly fastened upon the large end, and to one side of the middle of this crossbar is stapled a half inch rope, with a ring in the free end. Opposite the staple is a strong iron hook. To bind, insert sharp end into shock, put rope around shock and fasten ring in hook. Tighten by turning as you would an auger and bind with cornstalks does much more work in a year than the slower one. If a horse travels 20 miles a day, and another 25 miles in the same time for every working day in the year the for every working day in the year, the faster horse will travel 1500 miles more than the other. When working a large field a horse may travel from 15 to 20 miles a day, and a difference of a mile or two, when several horses are in use, is quite an item in a week. While attention has been given the breeding of fast trotters and runners there is room for improvement in the walking gait of horses.

-The hired man on the farm is a more important personage than may be suppos-ed. To inform the city laborer that there is "plenty of work on the farms" may be true, but the farmer does not care for a man who does not understand milking, harvest-ing, etc., nor does he have time to show one how to do the work. The city laborer can learn, however, but his wages will be low, until he makes himself useful. If he is steady, knows what to do, and at the right time, without being told, he can get good wages, and in every neighborhood it does not take long for the farmers to find base of the throat, and an odd little trick out who the best farm hands are and by whom they are employed.

-Crossing pure breed animals, whether of cattle, sheep, swine or poultry, leads to the destruction of the breeds. In nearly all cases when the attempt is made to blend the best qualities of two different breeds the offspring is not equal to either parent, and in the course of a few years there will be no uniformity and the stock reverts to the scrub. Too much mixing is no better than keeping scrubs. It is right and proper to grade up a common herd or flock with pure bred males, but to cross two pure breeds is a mistake. For instance, to cross a merino ewe with a Shropshire will result in offspring that will not equal the dam in fineness of wool nor the sire in quality of flesh and weight of carcass. Where crossing is practiced largely as with poultry, the result is nearly always failure there being no uniformity of color, size or laying qualities. If an Ayrshire and Jer-sey are crossed the offspring will not give as much milk as the Ayrshire nor produce much butter as the Jersey. To cross the breeds is to lose more than is gained.

-It takes a pretty smart man to know just when to take hold of some new line of farm work or let go of some which he has been carrying on. As we have noticed it, the man who adopted some line of farm work and stuck to it year in and year out, when it paid well and when it did not, has been the man who best succeeds. It is a rare thing to find a man with a big crop of potatoes when they sell for 40 cents in the field or with a lot of wool to sell at 25 cents a pound or a barn full of hay to 25 cents a pound or a barn full of hay to let go of at $10 per ton. The common rule is than men will rush into new crops or new kinds of stock when such crops and stock are bringing top prices, when the wise man, if he wished to make a change, would make such change when there was the least demand for such things, correctly reasoning that when any commodity was selling for less than it cost to produce it a scarcity and high prices were almost sure when the series of some to stay. And nothing seems so suitable for it as these pretty plaid back fabrics. Oxfords will undoubtedly be most popular, though there is a wide range for choice.

All the country between Granger and Evanston, Wyo., is covered with about five inches of snow on the level. Cattlemen fear that this early fall of snow means a hard, long winter and are preparing for a siege. scarcity and high prices were almost sure to ensue in the near future. When a man can buy sheep for $1 a head, then is the time to go into sheep. When a good horse sells for $40, then raise colts. When pork sells for $2.50 per hundred weight, fill up the hog yard. But better than doing this, keep the crops and stock on the farm diversified to the largest extent possible all the time, regardless of the ups and downs of prices.

Among the new things that are coming are the ox-blood cheviots, which have been so popular with our English cousins all during the past season. Indeed, they have been wearing cheviots, tweeds and the like in the very brightest and gayest colorings, and it would be passing strange if we did not see an irruption of the same here in the very near future.

BISMARK'S IRON NERVE.—Was the result of his splendid health. Indomitable will and tremendous energy are not found where Stomach, Liver, Kidneys and Bowels are out of order. If you want these qualities and the success they bring, use Dr. King's New Life Pills. Only 25 cents at Green's drug store.

FOR AND ABOUT WOMEN.

The beaten biscuit of the South is seldom seen on tables elsewhere, but if anyone cares enough for them to do the work necessary for success, she may follow this recipe of one of the old time darky cooks.

Into a bowl put one cup of milk, one tablespoon of lard and one teaspoon of salt. Mix in enough flour to make a very stiff dough, then kneed it smooth, place the board on the door stone or some very firm place, and beat the dough with a mallet or the side of an axe until light and full of blisters. Cut out in small rounds, prick them and bake quickly. The beating is essential, and they are unworthy the name if any other means are used to produce the land—is the use of brass buttons.

By the way, brass beds are not nearly so popular as they were several seasons past.

For the foot of ball gowns thick ruches are announced as a trimming. They are to be from three to five inches in depth, and be of silk, lace or chiffon.

The severe red golf coat is no longer the accepted thing, but there are new coats for golf, which have a burnous hood in the back, or else a succession of little capes.

The green flanuel shirt waist is far away the favorite, leading all other colors in the favority of breeders do not care to winter more stock than they can accommodate comfortably and consequently disposed to sell at lower prices than in the spring. Better stock can also be obtained in the fall, as breeders have more on hand from which to select.

The slightly bloused front has returned to favor, and appears in fur coats, bodices and separate waists. It is especially liked with the bolero jacket, that seems destined to remain at least another year. For dark —Slow horses are sometimes preferred cloth tailored gowns with boleros, blouses for cultivating, but a fast walking horse of brightly hued silk are extremely smart.

Not only are they tied about the waist, narrowly or broadly, but about the bust under the arms, about the lower edge of a bolero, about shoulders and waist in a fichu and sash combination and finally about the knees, held in place by occasional threadings through slits or through straps of black velvet ribbon.

Remarkable Orchard. It is Over 122 Years Old and Still Bearing Fruit.

When Lord Howe landed in Cecil County on his way to capture Philadelphia, a number of Friends, from their supposed sympathy with the invading army, were arrested by the Americans and sent to Winthe sides, just as pockets are set in men's overcoats, and they were deep and roomy. A skirt short enough to fall clear of the ground all around and with actual pockets in evidence in them makes one believe in the milennium.

Inumber to sympathy with the invading army, were and Mocha in or chester, Va., as political prisoners. Many of them being of the most respectable and wealthy citizens of the above named city were not long in Winchester before the officers in charge of them, finding them to be men of honor and truth, paroled them on condition that the Friends of the neighborhood would board them free of expense to the then ruling power. Among those who took them I mention Lewis Neale,

Abram Hollingsworth and Isaac and David Isaac Brown, great grandfather of the writer, had three of the exiled Friends at his home, three miles north of Winchester. While they were with him in the spring of 1778 they planted an orchard with apple trees. Ever since then the orchard been bearing fruit, and I send you a few of the apples from the orchard on the farm now owned and occupied by two granddaughters of Isaac Brown, Eliza and Catherine Brown, cousins of the writer, who annually send me a box of the apples as a reminder of the many happy days of youth spent with them over three score and more No fashionable collar has a canvas lining; the Friends is still occupied by the present owners.

In the Historical Library can be found the diary of the exiled Friends at Winchester, which contains the correspondence their wives had with General Washington when they applied to him for their releases. He declined upon the ground that they were State prisoners and were beyond his control.
